You can't imagine my delight and surprise when I read the four Toronto papers yesterday to find so many telling my Beatty scheme to get off at. I have been trying since last November to tell him, that he could not work for two masters at the same time. Mr. Euler suggested a good plan to stop Mr. Beatty's speeches which is to let him know that he will get no more loans if he keeps on. If it were me I would let him keep up his speech making and instruct Mr. Hungerford to get on the same platform and it would be dead easy to silence him. The first thing he could ask Mr. Beatty would be to show one single thing that he ever did for the interests of Canada, that was not for the interests of the C.P.R. first. When he could not answer that I would come back and say he is not cheaper for us to ship and travel by our cars instead of the money go to lower our debt this year and our interest next year. Mr. Beatty wasted a whole week in his pamphlet speech at Vancouver to show us that we could travel as cheap on one road as the other. I would tell Mr. Hungerford to explain to Mr. Beatty how foolish it was for a C.N.R. shareholder to travel or ship any other way than his own road. The more the C.P.R. gets the more they want and it would help us to help to pay off our debt and that is the main thing just now.

Mr. Euler seems to be the only real government ownership man at Ottawa and is not afraid to kick over the traces once in a while, whether it suits Mr. King or not.

"Go to it Mr. Euler, you have more friends than you think."

If Judge Fullerton was not instructed to keep quiet as Dr. Manion says, so much the worse, for it goes to show that he should not hold the position he does or he would try and defend our interests and when he did not Dr. Manion should have instructed him to do so. The way it looks to me they are both at fault and they should have told Mr. Hungerford to stand up for us against Mr. Beatty's attacks on us long ago. Mr. Hungerford is a railroad man but he is handicapped by a lawyer and a doctor, to give him instructions who have not had much chance to learn the railway game.

Mr. Hungerford is in the same boat as the rest of the C.N.R. employees and he knows which side his bread is buttered on and realizes what Sir Henry Thornton got for trying to stick up for the interests of the country and the C.N.R.

My solution for the railway problem is "ship and travel Canadian

At the last meeting of the city council some important business was transacted. The report of City Engineer Evans as to the approximate cost of the sewer system in West Belleville was adopted and notice of same will be published. The engineer's report gave the following estimated cost:- A 20 inch trunk sewer on Coleman street, $12,353.00; A 10-inch branch sewer on Bridge street, from Yeomans sewer to Coleman street, $10,257.65; A 10-inch branch sewer on Catherine street from Yeomans street to Coleman street, $9,640.83; A 10-inch branch sewer on Moira street, from Yeoman street to Coleman street, $5,942.24. Two new offices were appointed, namely, Messrs. F. H. Henry and J. W. Davison, and the remuneration was fixed at $180.00 each per annum. A recommendation that the tender of F. S. Large for the lease of the market for the sum of $2,350.00 was adopted. The following were in attendance at the meeting: Mayor Panter, Aldermen Wood-ley, McCurdy, Wallbridge, Smith, Duckworth, Earle and Mills.

A horse belonging to Mr. John Mackie ran away on Front street this afternoon and was captured before proceeding far by Mayor Panter.

Dr. Annan Congratulates Captains of Various Teams

Among changes and advances made in the work of the O.S.D. during the present year, particular attention has been given to systematic physical training and sports' direction, with gratifying results, some being taken that there should not in any way interfere with, but rather give added stimulus to the Scout spirit of service. For the first time, this part of the three-fold movement idea has been made a definite feature of the district programme, in charge of two instructors, Miss Myrtle Reid for the girls and Mr. Frank Cunningham for the boys. Under their direction the series of inter-patrol hockey games were carried off, including hockey, softball, basketball, tobogganing, snowshoe trail and Rugby, which have accomplished during the last 27 years.

On Tuesday last Lord and Lady Baden-Powell with their two daughters Hon. Betty and Hon. Heath-Stubbs, Penrith landed at Halifax, N.S., starting a tour of Canada which will include principal centres in the Dominion, and terminate at Quebec, May 26.

There will be a great rally at Toronto Exhibition Park on May 11th and Canadian and Scouts from this district will have an opportunity to meet the Chief Scout Baden. The visit landed at Halifax cheap week end fares, and if a sufficient number of passengers can be reasonably assured they will probably operate special trains.

Scouts, Cubs, Rovers, parents and all those interested are invited to attend.

Wanted—Old Scouts and Scouters to help in the reorganization work of the Belleville Boy Scouts' Association. Those interested please R. C. Baker at the Dominion Bank. Come along and give us your help and advice.

Welcome to Baden-Powell

The visit to Canada of Lord Baden-Powell, Chief Scout of the World, is an event of more than ordinary interest to the youth of this country, especially, and to all Britishers who appreciate the work for boys that this great man has accomplished during the last 27 years.

On Tuesday last Lord and Lady Baden-Powell with their two daughters Hon. Betty and Hon. Heath-Stubbs, Penrith landed at Halifax, N.S., starting a tour of Canada which will include principal centres in the Dominion, and terminate at Quebec, May 26.

There will be a great rally at Toronto Exhibition Park on May 11th and Canadian and Scouts from this district will have an opportunity to meet the Chief Scout Baden. culminating one being a debate held last Saturday evening, the final for many years. The subject was "Resolved, that Canada should have a large army," and it was a delight to witness the eagerness with which the contestants carried on the fray and absorbed interest shown by the other members of the Club. The arguments presented were well delivered and very fully covered the ground, the verdict of the judges being in favor of the affirmative.

At the close the Club and their guests were treated to a very fine series of tumbling, pyramid-building and other athletic stunts by a group of fifteen boys. It was an admirable exhibition intrinsically, and especially creditable in view of the fact that it represented only about two weeks of training by Mr. Cunningham, the boys' sports and athletic instructor.

Enjoyable Affair

On Tuesday evening of last week a much larger number of pupils, considering all the circumstances, teams of the girls' and boys' Senior and Intermediate Leagues, with substitutes, assembled, and this proved to be one of the most enjoyable evenings of the year in the school. The tables, which nearly filled the dining room, were tastefully decorated in most attractive appearance, being decorated with appropriate tokens and colors, the latter, of course, the School colors predominating. Mr. Cunningham, the boys' sports and athletic instructor, was the genial toastmaster, and was ably assisted by Miss Cox.

After ample justice had been done to the hearty, satisfying and gracefully served meals, Mr. Cunningham, toastmaster, introduced the members of the boys, first charge of the programme, and called for the presentation of the trophies or victory, according of course to the champions; Chester Gaffney, Basketball; Barbara Mallory, Senior Basketball; Sherborne Hubbs, Intermediate Basketball; Dorothy Osborne, Int. Softball; Dorothy Osborne, Int. Indoor baseball; Jean Hubbs, Senior Indoor baseball; Mary Fenwick, Cricket; and Marietta Chalk, Senior Cricket.

Dr. Annan Gives Address

In his address Dr. Annan heartily congratulated the winners of the various trophies, and particularly commended the spirit of good sportsmanship they had universally displayed. Rowdyism and rough play were not to be at all-round good sport, which should be the athletic ideal. He paid a special compliment to Bedford, which had produced two championship teams; also to Christ Manly, who belonged to four winning teams. He also referred to Mayor Chrisler and Glenn Harrison to them, and Mr. Alex. Berry, who belonged to two winners. He praised the good work done by Mr. Cunningham and Miss Reid, whose training and guidance of the pupils was evident in the present value. He greatly admired the beautiful pennants, designed and made by Misses Cox, Conway and Hancock. These would hang permanently in the Assembly Hall, and each year a coat with the name of the winning team will be attached.

Each of the captains then gave a brief address of appreciation, and after congratulations offered by Miss Reid, Miss Ford and Miss Desmarais this most enjoyable event came to a close.

Net Fishing Not Favored

Sportsmen Claim Waters Around Montreal Island Denuded of Game Fish

Montreal—Thanks to the efforts of a group of sportsmen headed by Lieut. Col. William A. Lowry and Dan Ryan, Rear-Commodore of the Grand Trunk Boat Club, the protection of 1,000 signatures which they forwarded recently to the Minister of Public Works, Game and Fisheries, lovers of fishing may hope to see a notable improvement in the fishing in Lake St. Louis, and in the waters around Montreal Island in the next few years.

To Stop Net Fishing

The Minister has given his undertaking that the denuding of these waters of game fish by net fishing is to be stopped.

The petition asked for "the abolition of net fishing in the St. Lawrence River up from Boucde l'Isle, Montreal."

In reply, J. A. Bellisle, superintendent of Fish and Game, on instructions from the Minister, says: "The depression period has been the reason for the delay in putting the government's decision into effect.

"It should add that the Minister is determined to abolish such means of fishing as trap nets, seine and hoop nets, but this has to be done gradually and the owners formally instructed to obtain other means of fishing approved by the government. It is too late now to force these fishermen, for the most part poor folk, to change their style of fishing tackle, for the coming season, but they will all be notified in time, in order that the change may be effected by the opening of the 1936 fishing season."

Mrs. Powers Heads Club

The first step in the re-organization of the Trenton Ladies' Conservative Association was taken by the committee room on Thursday evening. Howard D. Graham, K.C., President of the Association, presided, was present to assist the ladies in their work. Mrs. Wilfred Powers was elected to the presidency of the organization. Other officers are: Honorary President, Mrs. W. H. Ireland; Vice President, Mrs. J. H. Kinney; Secretary Treasurer, Mrs. Bruce Wrightman.

After the election of the officers, plans were outlined for the work in the forthcoming election.

"I see you have loyalty, the highest and most worthy quality," he service, "it's one of the most valuable of all traits."

"And a much loyalty, perhaps, as gratitude," Anne said. Men had flattered her, times without number, but, lonely, womanly, Anne had never succumbed, not even to very favor, to make conversation. The waitress at the desk was not attractive. She was condescending. At once of commendation was ship, all the flattery one could crowd into a lifetime.

Any time. As often as you like. Nest!"

The girl at the near end of the bench was up like a shot. There were shadows under the eyes, Anne noticed, and her lips were pale. Hungry.

Anne waited outside the door. If the girl was turned away, she, Anne thought, would find some way to invite her to lunch. Five minutes passed. Anne opened the door and looked in to peer through. The girl was sitting at the desk filling out a reference form. Anne stepped in, and, by chance to work. One of the lucky ones.

SARNIA YOUTH HELD BY POLICE

Refuses to Leave City Unless Transportation Better Than Walking

Strains of popular airs were heard coming from the cell block at the police station early this afternoon, when a visitor was later found to be the efforts of a transient playing a banjo to a family of three effected, annoying the police officials.

The curiously as to the cause of the sudden cessation of the musical expression resulted in a rather hilarious scene being enacted by the police in relationship to the whys and where-fores of the whole playing business. According to the musicians admission, his name is Ralph Lumley, age 33 of Sarnia, Ont. He was afforded a night's lodging with 10 other transients at the police station last night. Upon being released this morning, however, Lumley could not found objection to the sun outgoing C.N.R. freight train and immediately elected from the railway premises, but he refused to leave the railway property. This the C.N.R. authorities refused to do in the local police and Lumley found himself charged with vagrancy at the law.

After undoing a tale of woe the police drove Lumley in the police car, to the western outskirts of the town, there instructing him to "keep going". Lumley refused to heed the warnings of the officials, however, and finally assisted the transient thus far, and promptly laid down in the centre of the highway as the officer drove away. Observing consternation the officer again take to the ditch in order to avoid striking the man lead returned and placed him under arrest and Lumley now finds himself in the "jail-house" charged with vagrancy.

His present predicament seems to worry him little as he continued to entertain other with his banjo, even while behind barred doors. He will not playing "The Prisoner's Song," however.

DOGS IMPOUNDED OVER WEEKEND

Late last week Thos. Thorne, local dog catcher and custodian of the city dog pound, commenced the season's activities. A number of unlicensed dogs were picked up by the local streets by the dog catcher over the week end and lodged in the city dog pound. Many of the dogs were later redeemed by their owners. The activities of the dog catcher started an influx of dog licenses at the police station in quest of their 1935 dog tags. "We have only one third of the number registered for 1934 now on hand," he said with the announcement, that all dogs found at large, after this week we expect an immediate increase in the matter of the payment of dog tags. He stated a police court official today. The dog tax remains unchanged.

COALFAX UPBOUND WITH LOAD OF COAL

Upbound from the east with a load of coal for a Trenton firm, the coal carrier Coalfax opened the season's navigation in the bay of Quinte this morning. Shortly after seven o'clock the vessel passed through the swing at the bay bridge, the first commercial boat of the season to which the bridge tender

BUSINESS WELL UP TO EXPECTATIONS

Belleville residents strolled the city streets in their spring finery on Easter Monday, following annual custom, but the parade was a subdued and unostentatious one, dampened to a great extent by lowering clouds and a threat of rain.

Although the spring coat was a colorful blending of sands, blues and light green, made up of air and summertime fabrics, there was then in the groups of strollers could be seen a warm tone of brown, subdued snugly on the wearer. A chill wind which blew through the district made warmer garments preferrable.

Local merchants during the last minute shopping rush before Easter declared themselves well pleased with the amount of business done and sold the previous week. Although hampered by cold and unpleasant weather, business was reported well up to expectations.

TEAM ARRIVES HOME

Vancouver, April 22 (CP)—Battleford Millers were en route home today after a successful hockey tour of Japan. They arrived here during the week end and will go for Battleford last night.

During their Japan tour the Canadians played seven games, winning all and scoring 138 goals to nine against them.

"CHIEF" OF GANG BELIEVED SEEN

Identity of Ring Leader Closely Guarded by Police

London, Ont., April 22—(CP)— Two people whose names have been disclosed saw "the chief" of the Labatt kidnap gang in Muskoka last year prior to the arrest last August of John S. Labatt, London brewer, it was reported here today.

Identity of the ring leader, if he is known to police, is being closely guarded. Whether the two men who saw him are among the 20 persons able to identify rogues gallery pictures was not disclosed.

DIES IN HOSPITAL AT PENITENTIARY

Kingston, Ont., April 22—(CP)— Conrad Collins, 56, of Collins Bay Penitentiary, died in hospital of the community Penitentiary Sunday afternoon following complications after an operation for appendicitis on April 8. Polly was sentenced at Guyas in December 1932 to three years for breaking and entering and his term was due to expire in May.

He was expected to be liberated on the King's Jubilee, May 6.

ROBIN RESCUED BY LOCAL YOUTHS

A plump robin, after being rescued from a large maple tree on Highland Avenue on Sunday afternoon by two local youths, after it had hung head down by its foot from the crotch of a tree limb, where it had been caught, rewarded its rescuers by sitting within arm's reach on the branch and chirping cheerily after being liberated.

The boy, attracted by the weakening cries of the bird high up in the tree, borrowed a ladder from a nearby home and with a full view of dozens of Sunday promenaders on the avenue, performed the rescue.

APPOINTED DISTRICT MANAGER

The North American Life are pleased to announce the appointment of R. B. Cooper as District Manager at Belleville.

Since joining the Company in 1932 he has gained for himself an enviable record as an outstanding personal producer, having qualified for the Company's Big Production Club each year.

It is evident from this fine background of attainment that Mr. Cooper is well fitted for his new duties and capable of giving sound advice and excellent service on insurance and investment matters.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"Roberta"
Sophisticated and Intriguing Drama. An Ideal Easter Menu of Entertainment

"The Firebird," the new production which will be shown for the first time locally at the Capitol Theatre, starting today, is a most fascinating and intriguing drama with a remarkable cast headed by Verree Teasdale, Ricardo Cortez, Lionel Atwill and Anita Louise.

The story is based on the sensational Broadway hit by Lajos Zilahy as produced by Gilbert Miller. It is a startling revelation of the outburst of the dammed up love and passion of a young girl whose life has been a series of repressions.

Brought to the spell of Stravinsky's haunting and fascinating music, "The Firebird," she is impelled against her will to throw herself into the arms of the popular and magnetic actor with whom she carries on a clandestine romance which ends with the mysterious murder of Cortez.

Verree Teasdale, as the wife of Cortez is delightful. She gives a study to give a highly emotional portrayal of a woman who confesses to a love intrigue and killing to save her daughter's reputation, and rises to the dramatic heights with an artistry that is commendable both for its strength and its absence of overacting.

The polished villian is portrayed by Ricardo Cortez, whose personality is no more seductive and handsome screen image. He gives his characteristic strong and easy performance and lends to the plaudits of the discriminating as the male lead in the drama to the Gallery Gods.

Lionel Atwill has a difficult role for one so young, but his natural ease and finesse gives an excellent account of herself as a faithful and somewhat petulant young lady who is determined to live her own life as she wishes.

Lionel Atwill, who is a strong and polished actor, gives an excellent performance in the role of the Austrian diplomat, bewildered and uncomprehending over his wife's strange conduct. He is a lovely type of an extinct Russian Princess. Hazel Forbes, who is a great dancing partner, and a big heart throbber in the films, is an old girl friend from his home town, who is unmercenarily in love with him.

Randolph Scott is John, who makes love to Miss Dunne. Astaire and Rogers are the two lovable countries of the story. Splendid supporting performances are contributed by Helen Westley, as Madame Colette; Victor Varconi, Claire Dodd and Luis Alberni.

"Roberta" which will be repeated again today, tomorrow and Wednesday, matinee and evening will be remembered as one standards for a long long time.

The Belle latest news Flashes and the latest of Jimmy Mouse cartoon were exhibited during the evening.

LEAFS OCCUPY FIRST PLACE WITH BUFFALO

Syracuse And Albany Taken Into Camp Over Week-end

ORIOLES WIN TWO

Receive Excellent Hurling From Gumbert and Richmond

By the Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles can look back upon Easter Sunday, 1926, as the day when they finally found some fighting strength to back up some of the classiest home run exhibits of the Internationals League ever has seen.

Despite 11 home runs the Orioles lost three of their first four games but yesterday Harry Gumbert and Ben Richmond, came through nicely with effective pitching and Baltimore took both ends of a doubleheader from the Rochester Red Wings by 11 scores.

Gumbert, optioned to the Orioles by the Giants the day before, kept the Rochester hits well scattered and stamped sight in the opener, while Richmond gave up only five safties in the seven-inning nightcap. Home runs by Roy Spencer in the first game and by George Puccinelli in the second swelled Baltimore's total four base wallops to 13 in six games. Puccinelli's was his first of the young season.

Leads in First Place

Meanwhile Toronto Maple Leafs and Buffalo Bisons were holding on to joint possession of first place, each with three victories and one defeat. Buffalo reopened the Bisons' downstate out of the box with a six run outburst in the third inning that won from Syracuse 10-5. Red Ash held Syracuse under control until the eighth bit retired then with one out and Owen Carroll jumped up and held the Chiefs safe.

Earl Cook's effective seven-hit pitching carried Toronto to a 7-2 triumph over Albany. Senator Ray Prim held the Leafs to three hits in the first eight innings and then retired for a much hitter, Joe Hiscott, who finished up, was walloped for three hits which with two walks and a wild pitch gave the Leafs four more runs in the ninth.

Buddy Hall's pinch single in the sixth with the bases filled gave Newark Reds the two runs needed to top Montreal Royals 4-3. Ben Sankey succeeded for the first two Montreal runs with a home run in the fifth and a double in the seventh. Pete Stack in the sixth, then scored the third Royal run in the ninth.

The Leafs and the Royals both won Saturday fractions. Toronto walloped Syracuse 13-6, while Montreal defeated Albany 4-2. The defeat marked by a free-for-all in the ninth inning.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Taking advantage of the extra fine prevailing weather conditions the out-of-door sportsmen reaped a harvest over the holidays. In all lines of out-door sports athletics and those merely seeking recreation were seen turning to their favorite form of recreation. Golf, tennis, softball, horse shoe pitching, soccer players, canoeists as well as baseball players all joined in the spirit of the fine weather that was afforded the Easter Parade, but naturally the sport inclined personages attended the parade to take advantage of the weather conditions. More predominable of the latter were the golf and tennis players, who lost little time over the holidays, although the others seemed quite satisfied with their lot. The continuation of the favorable weather will assure the opening of out-door sports earlier this season.

In order to create a greater interest in the coming city swimming championships, instructor Ralph Marden has divided the groups into six classes, junior, intermediate and senior for both boys' and girls' rating. The intermediates will compete in events the same number of events as the same distance as the seniors, while the junior distances will be slightly shorter, this applies to both girls and boys. The basis of point awards is five, three and one for first position, second and third respectively. Mr. Marden definitely announced today that the meet would be an all-Belleville and immediate district affair and open to all swimmers desirous of getting into a real good competition. There is no entrance fee nor are there any strings attached to the meet insofar as the contestants are concerned, it's open. The Albert College has a fine spacious pool and is an ideal location for such an indoor event. All city championship indoor swimming titles will be decided at this meet.

Reports from the surrounding countryside are to the effect that local trout streams are teeming with the elusive trout this week with the recent announcement of the Belleville Anglers' Club that some local waters would be restocked with game fish, such as speckled trout, brown trout, pike, speckled trout, and pickerel, the waters located in the Bay of Quinte district will soon be desired fishing grounds for anglers from afar. Tis an excellent move on the club's behalf and one is doing. Incidentally anglers' club is doing. Incidentally they cast each Wednesday evening.

Bill Fry and Eddie Goodier returned from the annual meeting of the Ontario Lacrosse Association quite satisfied with their lot The local delegates inform us that a meeting of all lacrosse clubs in the Central Ontario region will be called within two weeks. President Washorne promised the local contingent every consideration in the matter of procuring a grouping. We understand, that Peterboro intends operating an independent league from which they expect to pick the all-star team for O.A.L.A. play-down purposes. Well you can make sure, that nothing of the sort will be tolerated," stated President Washorne to Bill Fry. Mr. Washorne, who refereed a game in Belleville last fall, was highly impressed with the calibre of box lacrosse played in this district. "I feel that there is a great field for lacrosse in your Central Ontario territory and we intend spending some time in the matter of missionary work down your way," President Washorne assured the local delegates.

As pointed out by President Washorne, however, the local Ajax mens squad was sadly lacking in the matter of a competent coach last season. "If your club had been afforded good coaching I have no doubt but that your team would have won Central and Eastern Ontario," Mr. Washorne is reported to have said. With this thought in mind the local lacrosse moguls are now looking for a lacrosse coach and if our suggestions are worth even the paper they are written on, we might suggest, that they look no further than the town of Trenton, where reside a proven lacrosse coach in the person of Harry Moore, editor of the Trenton advocate. Mr. Moore successfully carried on a junior lacrosse team in Deseronto some years ago, and any man who can coach junior lacrosse players to success is a proven guide or mentor of the game. Harry Moore knows his lacrosse from the top to the bottom and from the outside in. And what's more he knows his rule book backwards another feature, that materially assists a coach. The local lacrosse moguls need look no further than Trenton for their coach.

Definite announcements as to the contestants of Friday night's Kiwanis Club wrestling bouts were published by Chairman George Lee over the week end. Perhaps the outstanding feature of this card is the return match between Johnny Greyffy and Sunny Dunn. The latter having a narrow-margin victory over Greyffy in a local ring. The wrestling fans are to appear on the card are all new faces to this city this season, that period between winter and summer sports at its height, naturally local sport fans will be out in full force to take in the wrestling bouts. "You can tell the fans that providing we get ample support through the turnstiles at these bouts, the class of wrestlers will improve as the shows progress," stated Chairman Lee today as he personally guaranteed the Jack Herman-Johnnie Dalas bout as being one of the best crowd pleasers to be presented at the Arena in sometime.

A number of the local baseball players took advantage of the spring-like weather and staged an impromptu work-out at the Exhibition Park over the week end. The boys are reported to have tossed the pellet round at length, but did not go in for any great extensive training. Doubtlessly the local athletic team will be getting down to some real earnest spring training within the matter of a week or so.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By the Associated Press)

Jim Bottomley, Reds—started a triple play and double play and made two hits in 12 innings triumph over Chicago Cubs.

Tony Cuccinello, Dodgers— hit 3 singles and drove in three runs against Braves.

Jimmy Dykes, White Sox—singled and scored winning run in the tenth to beat Browns 6-5.

Dizzy Dean, Cardinals— limited Pirates to five hits.

Mel Ott, Giants—collected homer and three singles in tie game with Phillies.

RECEIPTS UP

New York, April 23.—National Hockey League receipts for the 1934-35 season showed a gain over the previous campaign, President Frank Calder revealed today. Receipts for the season just ended were $1,702,285.50, compared with $1,636,259 for the previous season.

The New York Rangers again led the list with a total of $290,417, followed by the Toronto Maple Leafs, $253,292. The New York Americans showed the biggest increase with receipts of $217,211, as against $174,192 for the 1933-34 season.

KINGSTON BALL TEAM PRACTICES

Joe Daley to Manage Strong Club in Limestone City

Kingston, April 23 —Kingston's 1935 entry in the Central Ontario Baseball League opened their training here Saturday when several of the players, under Manager Joe Daley, worked out at the cricket field. The weather was cool for baseball, but the players on hand were pepped up with the prospect of a C.O.B.L. championship, after a lapse of a year.

Manager Joe Daley will be in charge of the Ponies from the start of the season, and the team will be stronger than it was in 1934, when they won the C.O.B.L. title and went into the finals for the Ontario championship with St. Thomas.

Mickey Compeau, stellar shortstop, who several years ago tried out with Kitchener in the old Michigan-Ontario League, and Vin McQuaid, who was regarded as being a Toronto Leaf prospect last season, have returned to Kingston from Brockville, and will bolster up the team. In addition the Ponies have secured a smart hurler in "Bud" Clancy, who starred in Brockville last year.

Brick Sloan, who played short-stop last season, will return to first base, the position he played in 1932, while Jake Quinn will be back at second and Hewitt Smith will again cover third. McQuaid will be in his old position in right field, while "Red" Scrutton in centre, and "Slim" Webber in left. The catching will probably be done by Jimmy Arnold, with another backing being lined up.

On the mound the Ponies will be stronger than ever with "Bud" Clancy, "Tammy" Jamieson, and "Speedy" St. Louis. The latter should make a try at the catching game. In addition there are several interesting and junior prospects to be tried out.

Great enthusiasm than has been displayed in years is being exhibited by local fandom and there is every indication of the best season on record for C.O.B.L. baseball in Kingston.

EDMONTON GRADS WIN FIRST GAME

Defeat Windsor - Walkerville Cagers in Close Game 34-30

Windsor, Ont., April 22 (CP)—Edmonton Grads, for many year's Canadian classiest women's basketball team, hold a one-game advantage as they go into their second affray tonight with Windsor-Walkerville Alumnae in the best three out of five series for the nation's hoop crown.

In Saturday night's opening encounter they came out on top by 4 points, after several uncomfortable moments.

Alumnae finished on the short end of the 34-30 score. The opening quarter ended 8-6 in favor of the visitors. In the second quarter Grads took a 13 point lead which was cut down by five in the last three minutes.

In the last quarter suspense ran high until, with a minute and a half to play, Margaret MacSherry, Grads left forward, tossed in a neat angle shot from the field, and put her team four points up.

"OY" YOUNG BACK

Cohoctom, O., April 22—Although Denton "Cy" Young is 68 now and 23 years out of active baseball, he's going back on the baseball diamond again.

Young, the man who pitched Boston to championships in 1903 and 1904, is going south next month to train with other old-timers of baseball at Augusta, Ga.

He has contracted to work an inning a day. It will pay him more than he received when he was winning 36 games a year in baseball's big time.

Daily Short Story

What's in a Name

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.).

When Beverly Mitchell opened his office in lower Broadway he never dreamed he would be deluged with so much mail, nor such strange variety of mail.

Imagine a lawyer receiving a passionate love letter, another addressing the recipient for her photograph and a third pleading for an appointment to take the lady to the theatre.

It might have been partly comprehensible had Beverly Mitchell been a "Portia", but....well, Beverly scratched his head in amazement, laughed, then scowled and then did some hitchless cussing. He threw the letters on his secretary's desk and demanded to know the joke. But her startled amusement proved to him that she was entirely innocent and his mind turned to others who might be guilty of such silly practical jokes. Any one of two or three of his friends might be the culprits, but he had no clue from the letters. So he decided to await developments before he acted.

The next day, however, the entire mystery was solved. Came a letter which read:

"Dear Beverly:

"I'd like to get my job back at the Modern Beauty Parlor. Won't you please speak to Mr. Baumann for me...and, etc."

Beverly grabbed a telephone book and found the Modern Beauty Parlor listed there. Sure enough, one of the branches had his own address. Picking up all the letters (which apparently were not meant for a lawyer), he rushed out of the office and took the elevator down to the lobby. There, just as he expected, he found the name Mc-Gerniekinspelly on the board.

Noon: 3d. Back to the second floor he sped and soon confronted the beauty parlor manager.

"Is there a Beverly Mitchell working here?" he demanded impatiently.

The Same Name

"Yes, but you'll have to wait a little while."

"Are you Mrs. Baumann?" he inquired.

"I am. And what can I do for you?" she countered.

"Well," he laughed, "you can tell Beverly Mitchell to change her name."

"She may when she marries, but just now—" Mrs. Baumann stopped. "But what is it all about?" she added.

"Well, it's rather awkward for me, isn't it to have the same name and to get her mail?" And Beverly threw the letters on the manager's desk.

Mrs. Baumann grinned and called out: "Beverly!...Beverly Mitchell!"

When the other Beverly Mitchell entered, Lawyer Beverly turned a stern upon her and was about to polite. But it was not one of disappointment. For the Beverly of the beauty parlor was a rare beauty whose aristocratic walk commanded attention.

"This young man doesn't like your name, Beverly," said Mrs. Baumann, still grinning, and handing her the letters.

The beauty parlor Beverly shrugged her shoulders and said: "And what if he does?" I like it." She glared at the lawyer. "Where did you get these letters and who opened them?" she demanded of Mrs. Baumann.

"I received them and I opened them," lawyer Beverly replied, chuckling.

"Why you ....you...." Beautician Beverly was beside herself in anger.

"Just let me explain," the lawyer hastily added. "I, myself as Beverly Mitchell, I opened a law office in this building three days ago, and received these letters and opened them thinking they were mine."

"You didn't read them!" she cried.

"I certainly did, and enjoyed them," he teased.

"Oh, what'll I do?" she wailed.

"Well, you can change your name," he suggested, "I can't change mine—I'm a lawyer, you know."

"I think you'd better, Beverly," Mrs. Baumann interposed. "Suppose you call yourself Bee or something like that."

A Misnomer

"I guess I'll have to", she yielded. And as Attorney Beverly turned on his heels to depart, she called after him. "And if you still get some more of them!"

"Can a mere man get a manicure here?" he called back, jocularly.

"We come in any time," Mrs. Baumann replied.

He may have been jesting when he asked about the manicure, but he soon discovered that some inner force was driving him from the lawyer shop to the other Modern Beauty Parlor for a manicure. Beverly Mitchell, He finally succumbed to the temptation when he received another letter intended for the other Beverly. At any rate, he had an excuse to return. Once there, he asked for the manicure and it was Beverly—now she was Bee—who attended to him. Thenceforth, he required a manicure quite often, and Bee seemed to enjoy it as much as he. Of course, she understood he called merely to be with her. Thus, it didn't surprise her when he started falteringly to hint that he would like to take her to a show sometime. She recognized by his stammering that he was not the type who "picked up" a girl and she was pleased to make it easier for him finally to make a formal invitation. She accepted with a smile.

Pictured weeks of almost constant companionship at sports events, the theatre, parties, motoring and hat walks around the block.

And then, at times, while they had dinner together, they found Beverly strangely silent and she understood. And she was also overjoyed. One evening he finally said it—under her 'coaxing.' She was tearing him for making her change her name.

"Well, why won't you let me change it back?" he cried.

"My word, Mr. Mitchell, are you pronouncing?" she giggled.

"I am," he agreed. "We'll have two names in one, Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Mitchell."

She was almost crying from the pressure of his arms.

Fred Feernot and
FRED FEERNOT AND THE ANARKISTS

Scene, a hot dog stand.

Fred Feernot. How do you like them your majesty?

King. They're swell. I wish the Queen would serve them to the royal palace, but I guess there's no use even asking. Have I got enough mustard on mine, Fred? What's the general rule?

Fred Feernot. The general rule is you cant have too much mustard. Mine's enough for the dinner, mustard please. I hope nobody can reckonize me through this disguise, with the falts whiskers and everything. I always wanted to find out what the common people felt like and now I know. They feel grate. If I hear any of them complaining after this I'll know they're just tawking for something to say. Imagine them being able to get a hot dog sanwich every time they have a cravin.

Second Act

Scene, the same.

Fersh anarkist.—Hands up, your majesty, we know you.

Sud. anarkist. And way up too. Those bum whiskers didn't fool us.

King. And I know you, too, you're anarkists.

Fersh anarkist. That makes us cyvn.

Fred Feernot. Put your own hands up, and be quick about it or you wont live to tell the tale long enough to get to the gallows.

Third Act

Scene, the same.

King. Thanks for saving my royal life, Fred, I'll get you a tickit for the hanging. Hay, I didn't know oyu had a revolver.

Fred Feernot. I didn't. That was my hot dog sanwich I was pointing at them.

King. It just goes to prove once more that the dog is man's best frend.

Fred Feernot. Ha ha your majesty.

With a supreme effort Pat wrenched her arms free from the Maharajah's clutches, the jeweled dagger flashing in her raised right hand. One brief second it poised in air before it descended. Now it was the Maharajah's turn to feel terror.

He made a vain lunge for the glittering weapon, thinking to prevent his victim from killing herself. But that was not Pat's purpose! Backed by the full force of her strong young arm, the blade descended.

It drove straight through the persecutor's heart. Writhing in pain, the Maharajah fell to the floor, tried to call for help, then suddenly stiffened. Pat had killed a man! At the thought, a dizziness swept over her.

Her heart thumped wildly and a noise like the distant hum of airplane engines buzzed in her ears. The sound increased and there came shouts from outside. But Pat's only thought was to escape before the Maharajah's death was discovered.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS ENFETE AT PICTON

Parents And Friends Are Entertained by Students

Picton, Apr. 20. — Picton public schools were "en fete" on Thursday afternoon, April 18, when parents and friends were invited to go through the class rooms and viewed the work of the pupils and later were refreshed by afternoon tea served by the senior pupils of each school.

In the York Street school a splendid program was presented early in the afternoon in Mr. Yarwood's room. It included:

Quartette—Div. II.—Bruce Yarwood, Billy Dunlop, Clarence Gilpin, Raymond Dunlop—"Home On the Range" with banjo accompaniment.

Duet—Jane and Shirley Bristol—"On the Good Ship Lollypop".

Duet—Dorothy Selman and Bernice Airhart — "Old Spinning Wheel".

Accordion Solo—Reginald Bolton, "Tonque Twister".

Division II Orchestra — Clarence Vesterveit (Jew's Harp), Douglas Dunlop (Banjo), Maurice Ferguson (Harmonica), Reginald Bolton (Accordeon), Lorne Thompson (Piano).

Sixty guests were served tea during the afternoon. These included Mr. John Maher and Mr. Wilfrid Scott of the P. S. board.

The tea tables were centred with vases of lavender and pink stalks and were decorated with fancy birds' nests in cage and sprays. The buffet tea was spread with pink and white cloth and dishes with daffodils where Mrs. Jack Vesterveit, Mrs. Walter Thompson and Mrs. Thomas E. Spencer poured.

The class rooms displayed careful work of the pupils and beautifully executed handicraft work. We are told:

Miss Woods's room (primer and first class)—Calendar with date on blackboard, Window decorations, a "patch" and "sash" and a "Humpty Dumpty" hand table. Exceptionally fine printing by the children.

Miss Stevens' room (I. I. and Jr. III classes)—Excellent map work, color work and clay modelling.

Miss Street School.

Miss Thompson's room (primer)—Splendid cut out work; health and geographical posters.

Miss Tice (first class)—Sand table showing a sugar bush with every detail of spring making; excellent scrap books and posters; knitting rug.

Miss McAlpine (second class)—Sand table "House of Health"; stocking; Welsh dolls; cotton crêped cats; chimneys (bottles of milk), curtains (kitchen and flower bed borders and aprons); shingles (Christmas calendars); book shelves for pupils' (Geography, History, Literature) library.

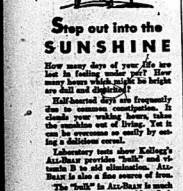
Mrs. Todd (Sr. II and Jr. III)—Sand table, moss map of P. E. County with hills, valleys, Bay shores, lighthouses, Sand Banks, Murray canal, "Mirror Lake" a blurry shadow.

Miss Wales (Sr. III)—Posters, History Series, Geography Series, Current Events; pen and pencil sketches, spatter work, lamp shades, water colors.

Miss Dunkley (Sr. III)—Good art work; charcoal sketches, etc.; fine Geography and History posters.

Miss Hill (Jr. IV)—Sewing and knitted—almost every useful article used in the home; basket, and canvas embroidery purses.

Mr. Van Cott — Manuals training display, lamps, flower stands, magazine racks, boxes, book ends, tables; beautifully made and finished; afternoon tea served most attractively by senior girls at very attractive tables.



How many days of your life are lost in feeling under par? How many hours which might be bright are dull and dreary?

Half-hearted days are frequently due to common constipation, the slight poisoning that comes from clogged bowels. The cure for it is to be found in a really good laxative-cathartic, and there is only one such—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna. Those who have used it for years will tell you that it is the most dependable and gentle of all laxatives. Ask your druggist for it today. Only 35c.

The "ball" in ALL-BRAN is made like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't it the ideal way to overcome that rubbing patent medicines?

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually enough. Also in cooking and in cereals. If not relieved in this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal or use in muffins, breads, omelets, etc. In two ready-to-cook forms. Both delicious. Made by Kellogg's in London, Ontario.

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

A' Royal Family Reunion in 1922

TO-DAY is reproduced one of those rare pictures of the royal family together—and even this picture omits Prince George, youngest son of the new Duke of Kent.

Those years were the war-torn until 1936 at least—were years of great trial for the King and Queen. Not since the Boer troubles, Irish situation a puzzle to all government leaders, the Labor party's paucity of growth opposition to British rule in India constituted great worries for his majesty, desirous as he was at unity among the people.

Resurrection.

Services of especial nature relative to Easter were held in Emmanuel church and the church was beautifully decorated by Easter lilies and other flowers contributed by members of the church, the Young People's Guild and the Sunday school. Rev. Harold Mansfield was in charge of the day's service. In the morning the Sunday school was celebrated with many communicants in attendance and the children's anthem was rendered by the choir and an Easter hymn was sung. Sermon was delivered by the rector, the subject being "O" was sung by the choir, under the direction of Mrs. James Grant. The solos were taken by Miss Violet Gibson and Miss Sherrie Bowerman. Miss Dorothy Grant, Mrs. G. Clapp, Messrs. Jack Bird, Bill Brown, Harold Barrett, and Vincent Doyle. At the offertory the choir sang "Hasc Dies." The Credo of the Mass was sung by the choir ensemble and a service of evening song was given. Miss Dorothy Grant presided at the organ.

At three o'clock yesterday afternoon the children of the parish were present in the church for a special sermon by Father Knox and benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Bridge Street United

Church Choir and Sunday School observed at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday with services in the morning and evening and special Sunday school session in the afternoon. Rev. Dr. Semple, minister, was in charge of both services. Easter lilies, daffodils and daffodils added to the beauty of the church for the festal occasion. The music was of special character for the morning and the anthem, "Blessed Be the God and Father" by Dr. S. S. Wesley, was sung with soprano and contralto solos. The junior choir's work was also of a high order, their "Easter Morn", an old Flemish composition, and their "Resurrection" solo. The Hallelujah Chorus from the Hallelujah Oratorio was rendered. In the evening, "I Declare unto You" was sung by the choir; a solo by Miss E. Reddick, and Granier's "Roxanna" by Mr. J. D. Bankier, and the choir sang "Lift Up Your Heads" sang. "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth", from Messiah, Handel." Other numbers were, quartet, "Since By Man Came Death"; chorus, "By Man Came Also the Resurrection of the Dead"; quartet, "For as in Adam All Die"; chorus, "Even Sixth Christ Shall all be Made Alive"—(the Messiah) Handel; chorus, Hallelujah (Messiah).

The soloists of the day were, Mrs. McKinnon, Mrs. Hoke, Masks, F. Houston, Miss Evelyn Reddick and Mr. J. D. Bankier.

Dr. Semple's sermons were both on, the theme of Easter and the Resurrection.

EASTER SERVICES

ST. MICHAEL'S

The concluding portion of the series given at St. Michael's church during the past two weeks was delivered last evening by Rev. John Knox, B.A. The church was crowded to the doors by the large congregation.

The missionary took for his subject the Risen Christ, the resurrection of our Lord from the dead and declared that Christ's showing that the Resurrection was a historical fact which is the keynote of every Bible, proves the divinity of Christ.

Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was held with Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G., celebrant; Rev. Father Hillen, deacon, and Rev. John Knox, sub-deacon. At the conclusion of the service Apostolic benediction was bestowed on the congregation.

Yesterday morning large congregations were present at the masses at seven, eight-thirty and ten-thirty, the last one being sung by Bishop Mass. Millard's beautiful "Mass in C." was sung by the choir, under the direction of Mrs. James Grant. The solos were taken by Miss Violet Gibson and Miss Sherrie Bowerman. Miss Dorothy Grant, Mrs. G. Clapp, Messrs. Jack Bird, Bill Brown, Harold Barrett, and Vincent Doyle. At the offertory the choir sang "Hasc Dien." Other numbers were, quartet, "Since By Man Came Death"; chorus, "By Man Came Also the Resurrection of the Dead"; quartet, "For as in Adam All Die"; chorus, "Even Sixth Christ Shall all be Made Alive"—(the Messiah) Handel; chorus, Hallelujah (Messiah).

The soloists of the day were, Mrs. McKinnon, Mrs. Hoke, Masks, F. Houston, Miss Evelyn Reddick and Mr. J. D. Bankier.

Dr. Semple's sermons were both on, the theme of Easter and the Resurrection.

FIRE ADDS TO HORRORS

The destruction centred in a district of approximately 40 miles in diameter including scores of populous villages in Talchu and Chihsien in Fu Province.

Many were stricken were the town of Neihu, where 561 died, including the "feast-men" (corresponding to mayor); Kaoyuchi, with 440 killed; Talho, where fires added to the destruction of earthquake, with the majority of its houses leveled; Kotchihuman and Tsaochuang.

The epicentre of the earthquake was near Toyohara only six miles below the surface, accounting for the unusually heavy damage.

The entire business district of Taichu was destroyed. Intermittent rains following the quakes added to the discomforts of the homeless.

Several Arrested

Alarming rumors were circulated concerning imaginary tidal waves and aboriginal uprisings causing police to arrest several persons suspected of disseminating the false reports.

The shocks opened fissures three and four feet wide in modern highways, twisted the rails of railroad lines and shattered old pipe lines and gas mains.

With all normal transportation cut out of consideration, the most primitive means, including makeshift litters and belted carts were employed to carry the injured to the final aid centres.

The disaster was the worst to afflict Japanese territory since the earthquake of 1923, which devastated Tokyo and Yokohama with a loss of approximately 100,000 lives.

Formosa, meaning "beautiful", was the name conferred upon this island by early Portuguese explorers. The Chinese name for it is Taiwan.

Formosa is rich in coal and other vital principal products. Much of the island is mountainous, the highest ranges on the eastern coast frowning on the Pacific rising to a height of 13,000 feet. Mount Morrison is also called the highest cliffs in the world.

Formosa is about 220 miles long and from 60 to 80 miles wide, its area roughly corresponding with that of Ireland.

Although there are many North Americans and Europeans residing in the Island's principal centres, there was believed to have been amongst the victims of the disaster. Most of these live outside the earthquake zone, where many are stationed at missionary posts.

Survey Area

Airplane surveys of the stricken area indicate that the earthquake extended over an area of approximately 9,000 square miles from Hsinchuhsien on the north to Taichu City on the south, from the mountains on the east as far as the mountains, where the Aborigine headhunters dwell.

Official reports, however, said the Aborigines' flimsy villages escaped with comparatively slight damage.

Shocking weather after the night of rain enabled the army, navy and air forces to concentrate their relief efforts. Rescue crews turned to the grisly task of searching for additional victims of the earthquake and fires and of homes.

Official estimates of the damage totalled 20,000,000 yen (approximately $5,000,000). The figure was relatively small in view of the wide extent of the calastrophe, because Formosa is largely agricultural.

Harrowing Scenes

Tokyo, April 22 (AP)—Representatives of the newspaper Asahi who flew today from Tokyo to the island of Formosa in the centre of the earthquake-stricken area, reported harrowing scenes today of loss of life and destruction of property.

Many bodies were found on the town of Naliu laid waste.

Thousands of battered houses at a standstill in the first attack." he reported. "Wide fissures are across both streets. Only a few hundred persons left to draw the victims from the debris. Cries frequently arose from the ruins where additional victims were imprisoned beyond rescuers' reach. There were pregnant scenes of women and children lying upon the corpses of relatives and friends.

"Forty army doctors and nurses reached Naliu and administered hurriedly, but still many of the injured were not tended. Night found hundreds of thousands of homeless without a single tent, nothing to protect them from the rain.

"Overcast skies and intermittent showers deepened the atmosphere of tragedy."

Many Go Insane

Another Asahi staff man, who reached Koryu in the Byoritsu district, reported similar scenes of havoc and suffering.

"I found new motor roads between Koryu and Byoritsu cut and broken,"

THE WEATHER
Moderate winds, fair today and Wednesday, with a little higher temperature.

Hollywood, Calif., April 23 — (CP)—Clara Kimball Young emerged as the latest actress to be covered today playing an "anthropological role" in a film now in production. Miss Young, who began her film career in 1910 and rose to stardom as an emotional heroine of 1920-1926, is working in the role of a female cannibal.

Beamsville, Ont., April 23 (CP) —After he had sent reporters and cameramen scurrying to his home because he said Lillian Gish, movie child screen star, was visiting him Keith DeBeau, 17-year-old son of Rev. A. DeBeau, shame-facedly admitted the actress was only haunting his mind. He had met several letters to her, he said, and it was "love at first sight."

MAN'S HONESTY IS REWARDED

Unemployed Taxi Driver Finds Purse Containing $465

Toronto, April 23 (AP)—A purse containing $465 in cash proved no temptation to Thomas "Scotty" Leeds, unemployed taxi driver.

When Mrs. M. Bragg of 301 Central Avenue, London, Ont., reported to the gale man at the Union Station she had lost her purse they went back to the train for an "end-to-end" search of the train. Then they made for the lost and found department. There stood "Scotty" idly watching the attendant count the cash. Mrs. Bragg had laid down the purse, while she tied her shoe strings and when got to pick it up when she went on. Scotty was suitably rewarded.

CHILD SPECIALIST SAYS QUINTUPLETS IN FINE CONDITION

Dr. Alan Brown Declares After Being Called as Consultant

HEAD COLD WANING

Must Have No Contact Except With Those Caring For Them

Callander, Ont., April 23 (CP)— Dr. Alan Brown, internationally known child specialist, examined the Dionne quintuplets at three o'clock this morning and declared them "satisfactorily recovering" from heat colds. He said their physical condition was "excellent".

Dr. Brown, physician-in-chief to the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, drove here last night at the request of Premier Mitchell Hepburn, the quintuplets' physician.

The Premier told reporters that Olivia Dionne, father of the children, that a consultant be called in. Mr. Dionne believed their condition was more serious than he had been told.

The Toronto specialist issued a statement in which he said he found the babies satisfactory recovering from an upper respiratory infection. The infection evidently had been transmitted to them from outside sources, he said, but emphasized the fact if the children were to survive they must be kept from contact with no individuals other than those in actual care of the infants".

He paid tribute to Dr. Dafoe's handling of the situation, which had been "thoroughly scientific".

"It was not immediately known that there was complication by the Brown would satisfy the children's parents. When Dr. Brown telegraphed Premier Hepburn and Hon. David Croll, Minister of Welfare, urged the guilty guardians to preserve Mr. Croll was out of town and Premier Hepburn replied after telephoning Dr. Dafoe.

Dr. Brown said that the parents Dr. Dafoe did not believe a consultant necessary but would call one if he saw fit. Dr. Dafoe declined to say today whether he would agree to a physician named by the parents examining the children.

Four of the youngsters were so well after Dr. Brown's visit they were allowed to play in the airing this morning. Marie, tiniest of the five, is still in bed. She was "very subdued", Dr. Dafoe said, and remained indoors. Her temperature was 100 degrees. The physician expects her to be well in a day or two. Cecile, next smallest, has only one ounce today.

Dr. Brown came to Callander with Dr. William Dafoe of Toronto, brother of the family physician, and returned to Toronto early this morning.

SICK WOMAN RISES TO SAVE LIVESTOCK

Grimsby, Ont., April 23 (CP)— Mrs. Rina Lymbr bravely defied last night to aid in saving her livestock when destruction of her barn by fire threatened a series of misfortunes in the last few years. She left her bed and fled to fight the barn fire. A few years ago her son lost an arm and a foot in an electrical accident and last June her husband died.

APOSTOLIC DELEGATE DIES

The Hague, Netherlands, April 23. (AP)—Archbishop Lorenz Schiopis, Apostolic delegate to The Hague, died today. He was 64 years old.

"Really Great Poetry in English Composed of 1000 Lines," Markham

New York, April 23.—(AP)— On his return, Markham said, Markham, who noted United States post, declared there were only 1,000 lines of "really great poetry distinguished and powerful lines" in the English language.

This estimate was less than it was at some years ago when Markham said there were 2,000 lines.

A vigorous old man with a booming voice and a hearty laugh, a huge black hat set on his flowing white locks, Markham named the following poets as those who had created the "great" lines:

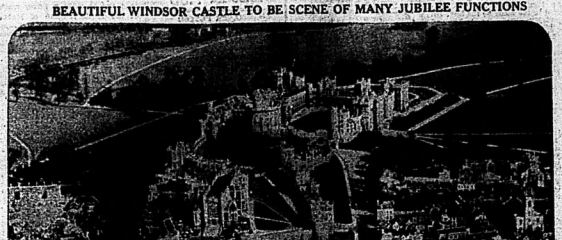
Shakespeare, Marlow, Coleridge, Shelley, Keats, Wordsworth, Byron, "once or twice", Swinburne in "a few lines", Browning — "rather dubiously—Poe. He added Poe in the list after first saying Poe "didn't have much of the kind of poetry I'm talking about."

Markham said he viewed poetry being written today "with mixed emotions. Some of it is unspeakably bad and some nobly good."

There is a number of writers of the new verse who aren't poets at all," he asserted. "They are by no means poets of poetry—that will become a poet if you can write something odd. Some of these writers have produced poems on a flyspeck.

"On the other hand, men like Edwin Arlington Robinson, Alfred Noyes, John Masefield, William Vaughan Benet, at times Louis Untermyer, and Archibald MacLeish are still able to give us visions of the highest poetry."

BEAUTIFUL WINDSOR CASTLE TO BE SCENE OF MANY JUBILEE FUNCTIONS



Here is a new aerial photograph of Windsor Castle on the Thames, within sight of London. The castle is the home of the British Royal Family. The King and Queen spent the Easter holiday there and the castle, most beautiful of all medieval castles of Europe, will be the scene of many colorful ceremonies during silver jubilee.

MILLION EXTRA H.P. IS CONSIDERED

Gov't Official Tells of Possible Diversion of River

Toronto, April 23 (CP)— Plans to provide additional electric power to obviate a shortage arise in Ontario from the government's action in declaring "illegal, void and unenforceable," contracts held with Quebec Power Companies, were disclosed today by an authoritative government official.

While the government has not yet made arrangements for a conference with the Quebec Power Company officials, the official said, Plans already have been evolved whereby an additional 1,000,000 horsepower yearly could be obtained from Niagara. This source say scarcely arise from the government's refusal to carry out the contracts providing for delivery of 300,000 horsepower from the Quebec developments.

The new plan, which would not impair the scenic beauty of the Niagara district, calls for diversion of the Ogoki River from its present course into the Albany River, to Lake Superior, which would increase the flow over Niagara, and provide an additional 120,000 horsepower.

The Queenston plant also would be established as the "main one" in the Niagara system while the other two plants at the Falls would be held in reserve. Additional abstraction could be made from the Cataract, said the informant who claimed the beauty of the Falls and their surroundings would not be impaired.

Cost of diverting the flow into the Chippewa Canal, which supplies the Queenston plant, would be great, the government official admitted, but added that spread over a period of years it would be no greater than the price he said the provinces would have to pay for power purchased from the Quebec companies.

The bill voiding the Quebec contracts will not become effective until proclaimed by the Lieutenant-Governor, permitting time for possible negotiations between representatives of the government and the power company officials.

Under Water Dams at Falls Will Slow Erosion Process

Money for Huge Work Program in U. S. May Be Used

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 23. (AP)—The work of under water dams proposed to save Niagara Falls from spilling itself through erosion finally may be built with part of the United States Government's $4,880,000,000 public works fund. Western New York representatives were reported today from Washington as united behind a proposal to build the weirs with part of this fund.

The weirs would spread the water diverting it from the wedge into which the horseshoe falls has been developing. The water has been concentrated in tremendous volume in this wedge, so that the American falls now gets only about 10 per cent of the flow.

"The danger in the wedge is that the water is gradually cutting a channel at its point, and there is more and more concentration of water there.

Almost a decade ago engineers proposed to arrest erosion at this point by erecting a series of under water weirs above the falls. Except at extreme low water the weirs would not be visible.

In 1929 the United States and Canada signed a treaty which would have allowed power companies at the falls to build these weirs. In return for increased use of water. But the United States senate refused to approve the treaty because it would have permitted this additional diversion of water. A new treaty is being negotiated now.

At that time the cost of the weirs was estimated as $1,750,000.

The weirs would not stop rock slides, such as have occurred frequently in recent years. And they would not stop erosion on the sheer sides, but they would slow the process of erosion sufficiently to save the falls from "killing" itself.

C. C. F. Speaker Loses List of Engagements

Windsor, Ont., April 23—(CP)— Lost in Toronto, one notebook containing a list of speaking engagements, property of Reeve Ben Levert of Sandwich East. Mr. Levert at a meeting last night revealed the book had disappeared while he was in Toronto last week-end for the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation. Now he has to trust to memory—which he says is not so good—for his scheduled speaking engagements for the next three weeks. And it is a heavy itinerary at that.

RESTOC KWATERS

Toronto, April 23—(CP)—Ontario Game and Fisheries Department has started the annual re-stocking of provincial waters. A million white fish fry were placed in Lake Ontario at Bronte three weeks ago and more recently 250,000 were placed at Port Credit.

A. W. Mcleod, supervisor of hatcheries, said the herring season was the most successful in years and next year many more waters would be stocked during the next few weeks.

Mae West Sticks To Story She Is Not Married

Hollywood, Calif., April 22.—(AP) Let 'em say what they want and dig up all the musty old papers they please, but Mae West has her story and she's sticking to it.

There are no missing husbands in her life, she says, because "no guy ever led me to the altar."

And that, said the Buxom Maedecisively, goes for the startling disclosure of a marriage license issued to a Mae West and a Frank Wallace in Milwaukee on April 11, 1911.

"Me a Milwaukee bride!" said Mae. "No—it must have been two other people.

"But I'll tell you this, since last January by actual count eight guys have called me up and insisted they were married to me some place or other, but I never was married to them or France Wallace or anyone else.

"I ought to know if I ever married or not oughtn't I?

"The Diane Dare in Wrong Call" and her studio workers today prepared to move—and fetch—a general uprising of Frank Wallaces throughout the country. Already several have turned up.

Mae said she was as puzzled as everyone else that the Milwaukee license listed the parents of the bride-to-be as Minnie Dillon and John West—the names of her own parents.

"I never hesitate to admit I had a husband—if I had one, but I haven't," Mae added. "They tell me this license has no signatures; tsnt it the names of the applicants were written in by the county clerk. "I'm sorry about that. The bride's handwriting is unmistakable." No denial.

"No, I guess somebody's just done me wrong."

SENATOR BELAND A CHARMING MAN

Members of Both Parties Express Regret on His Demise

Quebec, April 23.—(CP)— Grief felt in the city of Quebec when word was received here of the death of Senator Beland was expressed by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Dominion minister of Justice and Onesime Gagnon, K.C., Conservative member of parliament for Quebec.

"Again one of my old friends is gone," Mr. Lapointe said. "Always a fine character. What a generous soul and what a good friend. He was of the generation of political men founded by (Sir Wilfrid) Laurier, and was one of the Great Chief's favorites".

Mr. Gagnon said in the absence of Hon. Maurice Dupiessis, Solicitor-General, he wished to express the sympathy of Conservative members of Parliament from Quebec to Senator Beland's family. "Senator Beland was one of the most prominent men of his party. He was a courteous adversary and a charming man."

HISTORY OPINION OF DICTATORSHIPS

Queen's Professor Says Quest For Truth is Dominant

Toronto, April 23—(CP)—Warning "the many dictators history is declining into a mere medium for imparting opinions authorized by dictatorial governments," Dr. R. G. Trotter of Queen's University today told the English and History section of the C. E. A. convention the quest for truth should dominate the democratic attitude of Canadian students.

"Intellectual freedom," he continued, "is the essence of Canada's British heritage. One of the surest means of preserving it is to keep an open mind toward the revisions of Canadian history which scholars will inevitably continue to produce."

More attention, he noted, was being paid to the role of the Maritime Provinces in Canada's development. "This is a historical development more important than has been arecognized" he said.

More attention, he pointed out, was also being paid to the relations between Canada, the United States, and Great Britain. A dependent connection with Britain was no longer cherished by Canada because it was the best available, if not the only guarantee of independence from the nearer neighbor.

Thieves who entered by a rear door at an uptown theatre broke open the safe and took $500, at a nearby service station they cut hole through the brick wall into the vault and got $500, including cheques and $300 in cash.

CLIPPER PLANE IS RACING STEADILY TO THE MAINLAND

First to Complete a Hawaii-California Round Trip

CARRYING MAIL

Giant Ship Guided Thru' Night By Radio Beam

Alameda, Calif., April 23—(AP)— Headwinds of near gale force tore at the wings of the Giant Pan American Clipper as it forced its way steadily toward Alameda today to complete the first round trip flight ever made between California and Manila.

Steadily increasing to a velocity of 36 miles an hour, the head wind slowed the powerful four-motored seaplane down to a speed of less than 100 miles an hour.

At 5.30 a.m. (8.30 a.m., E.S.T.), the huge monoplane was 1,432 miles out of Honolulu, just 222 miles behind the halfway mark which she passed 2 1-2 hours previously.

High Above Clouds

Alameda, Calif., April 22—(AP)— High above the cloud banks over the Pacific, the giant Clipper raced steadily toward the mainland today and a scheduled 20-hour flight to complete a Hawaii-California round trip.

Its four powerful motors functioning perfectly, the sleek flying boat roared toward the Golden Gate mark in its flight as easily as surface liners ploughed through the waves below.

At 3 a.m. (6 a.m. E.S.T.), the Clipper was 300 miles from the mainland here, where it was expected to land around 11 a.m. or noon (2 p.m. to 3 p.m., E.S.T.).

Besides being the first plane to complete a Hawaii-California round trip. The Clipper later will inaugurate the first transpacific commercial flight between the Islands and the Mainland.

12,000 Letters Aboard

Aboard the plane, when it took off from Pearl Harbor at 3.22 p.m. Honolulu time, yesterday (8.52 p.m. E.S.T.) were more than 12,000 letters.

Carrying Out Research

A chart projection of the Clipper's path showing it was following from the Mercator course to the great circle route to follow out plans for many months, was sent to Miami, Fla., when the present flight ends. Miami is the base of operations in the years' aviation experience.

Pilot Ed Musick, crew members, R. O. D. Sullivan, second in command; Wright; Harry R. Canaday, Junior Engineer Officer, and W. Turner Jarboe, radio officer, will be personally assigned to the Pan American Base here, it was announced.

Radio Beams Guide

Radio stations here and in Honolulu provided beams to guide the craft as it roared through the night, far above the clouds which at times obscured the ocean. Also it employed radio compass, the challenge of which the pilots said, when flying, kept the plane on its course.

Flying at altitudes of 7,300 to 7,500 feet, the Clipper was more than 2,000 feet above the cloud banks in good flying weather with an unlimited ceiling, and unlimited visibility.

$750 STOLEN FROM WELLINGTON BANK FOUND IN CELLAR

Cached Across Street in Vacant Bank Building

POWER DRILLS STOLEN

Money All in Silver is Turned Over to Bank Officials

Provincial Police today announced that $750.00 of the $1,200.00 in silver stolen from the Wellington branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia had been recovered, found cached in a cellar across the street from the burglarized bank in Wellington.

The money was discovered by the Provincial Police only after weeks of investigation headed by Inspector Frank Gardner and Sergeant Thompson. Hidden in the cellar of the abandoned and vacated Bank of Commerce building, on the west side of the main street in Wellington, and secluded in a niche in the wall that extended fully ten feet from view, the police found a cotton bag containing practically all of the five and ten cent pieces of silver, that had been stolen from the Bank of Nova Scotia on March 27th last. There is still missing $450.00 of the silver stolen, made up as follows—$20, in five cent pieces; $100.00 in ten cent pieces and $120.00 in American money. The bulk of the money recovered was in small silver pieces, quantities of five and ten cent pieces, the quarters having been retained by the robbers.

Found in Cellar

The cellar of the vacant building in which the stolen money was recovered had been previously occupied by the Bank of Commerce in Wellington, the bank to have been held up by two armed robbers in the fall of 1933 and robbed. This bank was later vacated by its tenants leaving the Bank of Nova Scotia the sole operating bank in the village of Wellington. The entry into the old and vacated

THOUGHT DRUNK IS LEFT TO DIE

Found in Rear of Hotel With Severe Fracture of Skull

HAMILTON, April 23. — (CP) — Thought to be intoxicated, to have been drunk, John Kosczak, Beach Road, Stoney Creek, was left to lie with a fractured skull in the yard of the Beach Hotel for all night. This morning the injured man was in the General Hospital in a serious condition. His best is believed to have caught on the running board of his car, throwing him heavily to the pavement. Two men passing by thought him intoxicated and removed him to the yard of the hotel. The proprietor of the place, however, discovered the lying unconscious behind the hotel and summoned the ambulance.

City and District News

DRY SUMMER IN DISTRICT PREDICTED

With the Moira River fast attaining its low summer mark, and other streams and rivers through the section reported unusually low for this time of the year, older residents of the district predict a dry summer. Navigation will be hampered also during the summer months by the low water level of the lakes and bays. Reports received from Ottawa and the meteorological station at the present time in Prince Rupert at the present time is 13 feet, 3 inches, equal to the low level of last season.

Homeless Canine Painlessly Executed

Said to have been left behind by a local family after they had moved from the city, a stray dog, which had attacked and bit Miss Ruth Cordell, 11 Yeomans Street, was painlessly executed by Pound-keeper Thos. Thorne, on Monday. The animal, whose temper had been sharpened by lack of food had been wandering through the neighborhood annoying residents.

CHARLES T. DOLAN IS ROTARIAN SPEAKER

Bradford, Pennsylvania, and Belleville, Ontario, Rotary Clubs, engaged in an attendance contest recently which was won by the Bradford club, have now agreed to send a speaker to address the winning club on demand.

Bradford club has now asked for a speaker for Monday, when a special meeting of the club was being held. Thus the Belleville club elected Charles T. Dolan for the honor. Mr. Dolan left on Sunday for the Pennsylvania city, all primed to give the Bradford Rotarians much information as to Canada, its past, present and promising future, as well as a few gashes of the Canadian humor of which he is a real-master.

ANGLERS TO CAST AT THE ARMOURIES

Announcements regarding the Belleville Anglers' Club concert, to be given on May 1st will be officially made at the club's weekly casting contest in the Armouries on Wednesday evening. The various chairmen of the committees have formulated plans to open the current fishing season in a manner that will encourage all fishermen to greater heights. It is believed President J. E. Shoff has invited all interested fishermen and casters to attend Wednesday evening's casting competition at the night's casting competition at the Armouries, where an after-casting meeting will be held at which matters of interest to local anglers will be made.

BRIDE-TO-BE IS HONORED

Cannifton.—Mrs. (Dr.) R. H. Empson entertained about forty guests on Wednesday evening, April 10th, at an ivory and green kitchen shower in honour of the bride-to-be, Miss Jean Pope.

The early part of the evening was spent in community singing and contests conducted by Miss Cowain and Miss Parchbank. The bride was presented with a table decorated in green and white, laden with gifts. After opening the gifts she thanked her many friends and all joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow".

A dainty luncheon was then served by the hostess.

ALLAN HUTCHESON (Campbellford)

The death occurred in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday, April 22nd, of Allan Hutcheson, whose home was near Campbellford. He was 58 years of age and had been a patient in the hospital since April 16th.

LATE MRS. MARK SPRAGUE

Many friends who desired to pay their last tributes of respect and to express their sympathy with the family, were present at the funeral of Mrs. Mary Sprague which took place Monday afternoon from the family residence, 179 William street. All impressive service was conducted in the home by the Rev. Dr. Sexton, the Rev. Dr. Baker and the Rev. W. D. Harrison.

The same ministers conducted the service at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred S. Deacon, F. E. Smith, W. O. Black, L. Richardson, J. Dafoe, O.Flynn and J. G. Galloway.

MRS. FRANK HUMPFREY (Tweed)

Announcement has been received in this city of the death of Mrs. Frank Humphrey which occurred in Rochester, N.Y., recently after a lingering illness.

The late Mrs. Humphrey was formerly Miss Mary Rutlan, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elias Rutlan of this city.

Left to mourn her death are the husband, Mr. Frank Humphrey of Rochester, N.Y.; two sons, Elias Humphrey and Franklin Humphrey of Rochester, N.Y., one sister, Mrs. Alfred Harvey of Belleville and one brother, Mr. Oscar Rutlan of Belleville.

Friends of the late Mrs. Humphrey in Belleville will regret to learn of her death.

MRS. ELIZABETH (LANG) WALKER

After a lengthy illness Mrs. Elizabeth (Lang) Walker passed away on Monday, April 22nd, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. T. W. O'Hara, 316 Coleman street.

The late Mrs. Walker, who was in her 84th year was born in Carrington, her parents being the late James and Catherine Lang. She was the widow of John Walker, who passed away 23 years ago. For many years she resided in this city since its inception five years and seven months ago.

"The commission has saved the consumer a total of $260,000 exclusive of water and street lighting rates in that period while the present assets are listed at over one-half a million dollars," he said. "This year the Belleville Hydro Commission will have a surplus of some $20,000, which we intend to apply to a thirteenth Hydro bill to be credited to consumers at the end of the fiscal year," stated Mr. Reid as he related a similar condition that prevailed in Brockville when a 11th (credit) bill was given the Hydro consumers in that city last January. At that time the Hydro users of Brockville were given a consumers' credit representing three months use of Hydro power. "It is our intentions to apply the same practice in Belleville soon," concluded Mr. Reid as he closed with stating that the bond commission had handed back to the city of Belleville over $3,000, a savings from their sinking fund under the present local Hydro Commission's set-up.

Surviving her are two brothers, Mr. Fred Johnston of Calgary, and Mr. Robert Johnston of Tacoma Wash., and two sisters, Mrs. Wesley Maynes of Thorjasburg, and Mrs. William Maynes of Stirling.

Yt's man Norm Edwards occupied the chair for the evening while the speaker was introduced by Yt's man Court Miller. Considerable business was completed during the meeting the club accepting an invitation from the Salvation Army to have its luncheon meeting at the Bible Training Institute for the Blind in Toronto, Saturday, May 4th. Yt's man Mennem's rummage sale will be held at the "Y" on Saturday night.

A New Service For Car Owners

Specialized Service Garage is opened by Frontenac Auto Electric Service

Frontenac Auto Electric Service has just opened a new Specialized Service Garage at 118 Front Street, under the management of Mr. Fred Yates.

Fred Yates has had a great deal of experience in the Specialized Servicing of Automobiles, and until recently was connected with the Ford Motor Co. of Canada as pioneer "Engine Tune Up" in Canada.

Frontenac Auto Electric Service have one of the most modern and best equipped service departments in Toronto and Montreal for the service Batteries, Starters, Generators, Magnetos, Ignition, Carburetors, Fuel Pumps, Shock Absorbers, Windshield Wipers, Headlights, Speedometers and Dash Instruments.

Their equipment consists of a Weidenhoft Test Bench for Starters, Generators, Distributors, Magnetos, and Voltage Regulators recently developed by the Weidenhoft Equipment Company of Chicago. They also have a Sand Blast Machine which removes the gum formation in Carburetors and Fuel Pumps. Also a Mercury Vacuum Meter diagnosing Piston Ring and Valve Conditions, Fuel Pump Test Stand for testing Fuel Pumps, Englehard Gasoline Analyzer which measures Combustion Efficiency, Weaver Headlight Tester for adjusting Headlights, Allen Meter Analyzer for Ignition and Electrical trouble shooting, Allen Battery Capacity Test Stand for high rate discharge battery readings. Also Bench Lathe, Armature Undercutter, Armature Brush Groover, Speedometer and Tachometer Test Equipment, and special tools and instruments for Carburetors, Windshield Wipers and Shock Absorbers.

Fred Yates is a great believer in Specialized Service, his slogan is you certainly would not take your Watch to a Blacksmith for repairs, accordingly why not take your Car to a Specialist.

All Work is performed exactly to Car Manufacturers Specifications with a guarantee No Cure—No Pay.

ROAD WOULD OPEN SPLENDID COUNTRY

Effort Being Made For Road From Madawaska to Mattawa

According to Mr. H. S. Davis, Chairman of the Citizens' Committee of Madawaska, Ontario, organization of a highway from Madawaska from Belleville to Madawaska is underway for the purpose of a concerted demand upon the Ontario Government to improve the present road and to make a survey north of the territory north of Madawaska as far as Mattawa, Ontario, so as to create a new highway from Belleville to Mattawa, via Madoc, Bancroft, Maynooth and Madawaska. This road points out Mr. Davis is to be found in the current issue of the Bancroft Times, would run directly north, parallel with the Ferguson Highway and present possibilities hitherto unknown.

Such a road, declares Mr. Davis, would open up a country known only to the Indian, the trapper and the lumberman, a region which is ripe for tourist living with trout, virgin forests, whose scenery is unsurpassed in Ontario. Mountains of rock, lakes by the dozen, rolling valleys with meandering streams, and fertile land available for farming, nearly all within the limits of the famous Algonquin Park region.

"Picture the possibilities of business," declares Mr. Davis, "it would become a tourist business from one end to the other, besides leading directly to the mining fields of Ontario and Quebec. A million people to the Britain could await to travel over it," he adds.

Trade Proposal Answer Made

The Belleville Trade Group proposals for the extension of the two-way trade between Canada and the United Kingdom came under discussion in the British House of Commons on Monday, April 8. The following extract is from the official report of Hansard, the official organ:

"Captain R. Evans asked the secretary to the Overseas Trade Department whether, in view of the recent efforts which are being made by the Belleville Trade Group to-wards increasing the trade between Britain, their endeavors to extend the market for Welsh coal in Ontario and their offer to enter into reciprocal action on our part in connection with this trade, he would consider and if this Department is in touch with the interested parties and bring all it can to facilitate mutually advantageous arrangements.

Mr. Jamieson, of Oakville: I am aware of the movement in Belleville which is advocating in a general way the ideas of promoting trade between this country and Canada by barter. I fancy these ideas are rather unattractive but so far as I am aware no concrete proposal to which effect could be given has been advanced. While the Trade Group may wish to trade by barter are obvious. If any practical scheme were submitted for conducting by barter a considerable volume of trade which could not be financed by normal methods, though I should be glad to consider whether there are any means by which it could properly be facilitated."

Commenting on this today a member of the Belleville Trade Group said: "We use the word 'barter' as an expression of two-way trade and through established trade and banking channels, exchanging goods with goods. We have the normal machinery for such transactions which are bills of exchange and letters of credit, but also, the value of the goods being expressed in such documents in sterling and Canadian currency.

We have sent forward a concrete proposal which had not reached London when Col. Colville made his reply.

Capt. Arthur Evans, M.P., is the London backer for the Belleville Trade Group in the Imperial Parliament.

The contacts have been established and the trade has started. The plan now becomes national in scope. Reciprocal trade is sound in principle and sound economy. Nations must buy from those to whom they sell.

Police News

One even dozen street lights have been broken in Belleville during the past 48 hours, local police were informed by the Hydro Electric Company last night. These electric light bulbs, on street corners, are believed to have been broken by mischievous lads, who either throw stones at them or have undue air guns. Not only is this practice a dangerous one, but also a destruction of property, and the apprehension of offenders of this nature is being kept by the police department.

Concerted police drives in relation to offenders of motor city traffic by-laws are still in progress, yesterday two local motorists being summoned for failure to stop at designated "stop street" signs. Violations of the city parking laws and speeders are also being reprimanded.

Nineteen transients were released from the police station this morning, after having been afforded a warm night's lodging in the cell block. The present month has seen a general increase in the transients passing through the city.

ROTARIANS MARK CHILDREN'S DAY

Boy Scouts' Demonstrations in Branches of Training

Easter Monday was celebrated in the usual special style by the Belleville Rotary Club this week with the observance of Children's Day. Nearly forty children of Rotarians were entertained and in addition there were present eighteen boy scouts under the direction of Scoutmaster James Varley and Scoutmaster Robert Brown, who in view of the special effort which is being made to develop scouting, put on a demonstration.

Mr. Jamieson Bone, president of Rotary, occupied the chair until after luncheon when the duties were turned over to Mr. Jos. E. Boyce, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee. The early part of the program had been taken by Mr. Varley, Mr. S. Burrows and by Scoutmaster Lee B. Biggs officiated at the piano.

The Boy Scouts orchestra provided an instrumental number. Miss Sylvia Teti sang a solo. The fifth troop of Scouts gave a demonstration in resuscitation while the third troop demonstrated signalling and assistant scoutmasters gave demonstration in fricton rubs.

Rotary was privileged to hear Mr. Jack MacGregor, the internationally known baritone, who was a guest. Mr. MacGregor sang "I Love Life", "Home on the Range" and another lyric.

Easter Novelties as favors were distributed to the children.

Service at Eldorado United Church at 3.30 p.m. and in the evening at the Cooper United Church, when the Cooper young people presented their Easter pag- eant, the auditorium of the church was packed to the doors, large numbers being present from the adjoining appointments.

Rev. W. G. Fletcher opened with the worship period, then the pag- eant was presented in charge of Mrs. Harry Hass. Their were twen- ty-four young people taking part and they all did their parts well and gave a marvelous impersona- tion of the Resurrection both in the singing and the different parts taken, as to hold the attention of the vast audience throughout the whole scene; the church was beau- tifully decorated with evergreen and lilies for the occasion. Mrs. H. Hass is surely to be congratu- lated on the splendid success in the presenting of the pageant.

Y.P.S.

The regular meeting of the Eldo- rado and Union Young People's Society was held in the auditorium of the Eldorado United Church on Wednesday evening April 15th. The programme was in charge of the Christian Fellowship convener Miss Annie Holmes.

The meeting opened with quiet music with Mrs. Albert Harvey at the organ. After singing hymn "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross", Mrs. A. Harvey offered prayer. The Bible lesson Luke 22: 39-46 was read by Mr. Vernon Strebe. The worship story "Christ in Gethsemane" was very feelingly given by Rev. W. G. Fletcher, so was much enjoyed by all. This was then sung "There is a Green Hill Far Away," and a poem "Beyond the Cross" was given by Miss Helen McCaw. Then the topic "The Sig- nificance of the Cross in the lives of our Young People," and what it should mean to us, was very vivid- ly given by Mrs. F. J. Nickle and followed with a solo "The Old Rugged Cross," rendered very feel- ingly by Mrs. Albert Harvey, after which a short pageant was drama- tized entitled "In the Cross of Christ I Glory," Mrs. L. Robinson sang the solo of "In the Cross of Christ I Glory," as Mrs. Cecil Blackburn, Miss Ruth Andrews, Mrs. Clayton Blackburn and Miss Iva McCann acted the different parts, the platform of the church being arranged with the cross for the occasion. A poem "God is Love" was given by Annie Holmes and af- ter singing hymn "Love Divine, all Loves Excelling," Mr. Gordon Blackburn pronounced the bene- diction.

CIVILIAN POPULATIONS PREPARE FOR WAR AND GAS ATTACK

The possibility of war and resul- tant gas attacks on civilian popu- lations is apparently very real when European nations spend millions on civilian defence. ## BRITISH COMMONS HEARS OF TRADE GROUP

Recently the matter of the activities of the Belleville Trade Group came before the Members of the British House of Commons. This is a unique compliment for Belleville business men and it spells for Belleville business men and it spells undoubtedly a triumph for the local organization.

The Trade Group has issued a statement in reference to the plan for expansion of two-way trade with Britain by twenty-five million a year each way for fifteen years beyond present trade.

"Cheese, bacon, canned goods, apples and such farm stuffs that are usually shipped to the British market on passenger steamers and package freighters where cold storage and cool air is provided constitute the exports to a $25,000,000 in excess of 1934 shipments. The outstanding clause in the plan reads: "The goods going and coming shall be handled by those presently engaged in the trade and through established trade and banking channels.

British anthracite, coke and bituminous coming to Canada yearly in a larger volume for fifteen years will provide extra cargo ships for our wheat and grain.

"Tramp British ships coming over with coal and back with grain are featured in the plan but not included in respect to the $25,000,000. The plan is national in scope.

"Barter is used only as expressive of two way grading and the word should not be used too literally.

"Modern and scientific banking methods prevail. Bills of exchange follow the goods. There is, however, a provision covering exchange fluctuation.

"The fifteen year period is regarded as a sound thought.

"$25,000,000 in Canadian goods over and $25,000,000 coming this way yearly over 15 years shipments is a major undertaking and a fine way of implementing in a broad sense, the Ottawa agreements.

"England imports 50,000,000 tons of foods stuffs so there is ample room for the extra trade. Canada's heavy imports of domestic fuel show that the tonnage mentioned can be taken up without crowding. Scotch coal is included in the plan as well as Welsh.

"Numerous requests have been made for the above information."

Notice has been received that the Canadian authorities will study the plan.

A WEALTH OF ART

How far-fetch has attracted the greatest artists with the brush, in music, and with the chisel, and with those delicate things, words, can be realized at a glance as one thinks of the setting which has been given Easter-tide in the churches. With these outward nature is joined in the creation of that happiest expression of the meaning of the season.

All the giants in painting and sculpture, all that the sweetest singers, and the greatest thinkers on life, have created of their thought on Easter theme is poured out with the abandon of artistry which yearns to share its joys with all mankind.

Materialistic as our age has been called, the fact remains that these two great religious festivals of the Nativity and the Resurrection have become the greatest centres of works of art, all the treasury of genius being poured out gladly at the mention of the name of the man of Galilee. How much of these festivals is concerned with art? But so great is the importance in these two seasons that it is not the art that makes them but they which create or call out in men these wondrous expressions of art. It is man's effort to represent the Infinite and Perfect One that has created this art wealth for mankind.

Other seasons, other times of celebration are not so impressive in their appeal as Christmas and Easter, because thos others lack the vitality of the Life which is celebrated in these two festivals.

RE-CREATING THE UNIVERSE

Even before the mathematical physicists disturbed us with the conception of an atom composed not of matter but of events, the second law of thermo-dynamics was questioned. It is a law which tells us that heat flows from hot to cold bodies, that tea-kettles are not likely to freeze on glowing coals, and that the universe must eventually run down for lack of energy and become once more a stagnant chaos. No experiment can disprove the law. But is it necessarily true for that reason? Some relativists think not. They have invented universes which continue to almost nothing and expand again, and thus rejuvenate themselves forever. The possibilities are arresting but must be dismissed as so much mathematical poetry.

In the address that he delivered in Philadelphia, Dr. W. F. G. Swann pursued a new line of reasoning. The end of all is a matterless state of radiation. Can atoms be re-created out of that? The available evidence is against the hypothesis. A cosmic ray, a photon, or light-bullet in fashionable parlance, can knock a positron out of an atom, and the positron can combine with other free elemental particles to form new matter. This is a fact. Have we here the method whereby a dead universe may spring into action again? We need atoms. There are none in that final state of inanition. Hence the thought that photons, radiation alone, may be all that is needed.

Dr. Swann is so good a physicist that he realizes the weakness of his position. A flying photon implies energy. But energy is zero in a dead universe. Hence it is impossible to divine any process whereby flaccid photons may congregate to form new atoms. So Dr. Swann, if we interpret him correctly, sees hope only in laws and forces of which we know nothing as yet. He would himself be the first to admit that his is no more than a philosophical wish, and it is in this spirit that he considers the potentialities of radiation at all.

Physicists are indifferent to the fate of the-universe, not because they are unemotional, but because they resent the human implications. Man is a nuisance to them. To use Dr. Swann's happy phrase, he cannot be "mathematically irritated" into believing in a leaping electron. In fact, he cannot be fitted into any mathematical equation. He insists on thinking the universe was especially created as a habitation for himself—a repugnant thought. To a physicist the earth is only an insignificant speck in space, and the human more important than a photon darting from a star or an atom. For this reason, merely as an interesting intellectual exercise, he plays with the notion of a universe which may be either dying or rejuvenating itself. Probably Eddington reflects the opinion of his class when he says: "I have no great desire that an absolute law of Thermo-dynamics should succeed in averting the final running-down of the universe. It seems rather stupid to keep doing the same thing over and over again."—New York Times.

THE MONEY MARKET

Rate of ¼ of 1 per cent. for call money on the Stock Exchange (on Thursday of last week) was noteworthy as being the lowest on Wall Street's records. But the circumstance is hardly remarkable. Business in stocks, which determines demand for loans on call, has been running of late barely half as large as it was a year ago, and at the smallest total since 1922. Loans on securities by member banks are $648,000,000 less than a year ago. Meantime bank reserves in excess of legal requirements have this year reached proportions hitherto unimaginable; the Treasury's issues of short-term bills have been discounted by banks at ¼ of 1 per cent.

As a matter of fact, however, this is not by any means the first occasion when the Stock Exchange call money has fallen to nominal rates. It was quoted at ¼ of 1 per cent. in two weeks of 1904, when what was considered a moderate Stock Exchange reaction had occurred; in 1894 that was the prevailing rate during several months of Spring and Autumn. Even in the depression after 1873, when American bank resources were described as meager, the Wall Street call-money rate went low 1 per cent. in 1876, in 1877 and in 1878.

It was always said in retrospect of those older call-money periods that superabundant credit paved the way to business revival. But, as in the Nineties and the Seventies, it was often slow in producing that result. That was because requisitions on the money market sufficient to take up the slack in credit were made possible not alone because of banks' willingness to lend but because of willingness of sound enterprise to borrow, and this necessitated return of business confidence. The mistake into which our Government has repeatedly fallen was its assumption that the piling up of larger and larger available credit facilities was all that was necessary to insure business revival. If confidence in public policies as a whole were to be restored, we should have a very different picture in the money market.—New York Times.

ANTIQUE SHOP

They are by far too crowded here,
Like ladies used to spacious halls,
But forced by some harsh circumstance
To dwell in mean and narrow walls,

This small shop shoves them, row on row,
Strange neighbors, jumbled times and lands;
Louis Quatorze and Chippendale,
Four-poster beds and Adam stands.

There are a few aristocrats
On which time's touch is kind and light,
And many battered, common things
That suffer doubly age's blight.

They are too crowded here, by far,
Too rudely shouldered, piece by piece;
They should have quiet, gracious rooms,
Rose-shaded lights, long dreams' release,

There should be candles, firelight's glow,
A harpsichord, faint-voiced and sweet;
Then time's bleak, howling winds would wane,
The years' grim legions would retreat.

A TRAGIC ECHO of Austria's Nazi revolution of July 25, 1934, was heard throughout Europe on March 14, when Dr. Anton Rintelen, former Austrian Minister to Italy, was found guilty of complicity in high treason, and was sentenced to hard labor in prison for life. It was Rintelen, says the Literary Digest, who was announced anti-Nazi government radio station as "the new Chancellor" at almost the same moment that Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss was assassinated. Although it was reported soon after his arrest that he had confessed his part in the conspiracy, and directly implicated Germany in his disclosures, Doctor Rintelen denied the charges against him. Nevertheless he admitted that his policy had been one of reconciliation with Germany. He was found guilty by a court-martial against which no appeal is possible.

SOON AFTER the recent announcement that Iceland had placed a £530,000 loan in London there was talk in British newspapers that before this loan matured Iceland might be British. After 1940 Iceland may, by plebiscite and parliamentary vote, denounce the Act of Union with Denmark. Accordingly, Parliament, by the way, according to the Literary Digest, has been called the oldest parliament in the world. It was established in 930, and is known as the Althing. A few years ago, when the question was debated in Iceland's Parliament, there was not a single contrary vote.

SCOUT PROGRAM AT W. I. MEETING

Ideals of Scouting Explained in Interesting Addresses

Stirling—The Boy Scouts of Stirling presented a fine program on Thursday night, April 16th, at a meeting of Women's Women's Institute held in the Orange Hall.

The meeting was opened by the President of the organization, Mrs. Fred Thaine, who gave a very appropriate address of welcome to those present.

Scoutmaster Tom Ward was then called on the scout orchestra for the remainder of the program. In his opening remarks he expressed the hope that the program arranged by the boys would be interesting and entertaining. He then called on the scout orchestra for the opening number. This fine group of musicians are becoming more and more in demand as time goes on, and their splendid performances are greatly talked of. Pat Williams next offered a guitar solo that was thoroughly enjoyed. The next number was a first aid demonstration by Arthur Gould and George Duffin. Assistant Scoutmaster Fred Hulin then gave the address of the evening, dealing with authority on the principles of Scouting. He spoke in a fine manner of the achievements of the world-wide organization. Mr. Reg. Mathison then offered a pleasing violin solo. Jimmy Ward and Art Gould caused a little deal of merriment with the comic barber shop sketch at this time; the barber using an enormous razor —about two feet long. After the laughter subsided, Art. Gould gave a well prepared talk on scout law. An acrobatic tumbling act by John Munro and Jimmy Ward was another item on the program in which the audience was greatly interested. The last number was a novel stunt in which members of the audience were called to the platform to take part. It was later stated that the title of it was "The gathering of the nuts and those taking part were the "nuts". Every one caught the humour of it, though they were the unlucky victims.

Mr. Harper Sexsmith spoke briefly on behalf of the Wellman's Women's Institute, thanking the boys for the fine program they had given and expressed the wish that they would return at some later date.

The boys of the group are grateful to Messrs. R. H. Williams, Harry Lovblond and W. C. West for the use of their cars as a means of transportation.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hough and Douglas of Deseronto, Ont., visited the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Hough and Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Linn.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Eggleton and family of Hamilton spent the week-end with Mr. Eggleton's father, Mr. Tom Eggleton.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Harvey of Gilmour, are spending a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Wickett.

John Ashley, Bank of Montreal, Lindsay, was home over the week-end.

Mr. Gordon Bailey of Bank of Montreal, Kingston, visited his home here over the holiday.

Ben Haggerty of the Bank of Montreal, Brantford, was a week-end visitor at his home.

The many friends of Mr. George Mason will be glad to learn that his condition is considered quite favourable by his attending physician. Mr. Mason underwent a serious operation on Thursday afternoon in Belleville hospital. Miss Isabelle Murray, Reg. N., Stirling, and Miss Mabl Mason, Reg. N. of Belleville, are in attendance.

Mr. Allan Meiklejohn of Athens High School staff, is spending the Easter holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Meiklejohn.

Mr. and Mrs. Dafoit Ruth and Clifford of Toronto, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Duffin.

Miss Dorothy Morton, teacher of Deseronto, is spending a few days at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Morton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Monahon (nee Nora Fowler) and Mrs. Monahon, Sr., left on Thursday for Miami after visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Long. Mr. and Mrs. Monahon will establish permanent residence in Miami upon their arrival there.

A number of local tennis enthusiasts motored to Toronto on Friday to witness the professional tennis tournament which took place that evening in Maple Leaf Gardens. The boys spotted a real thrill out of watching the great exhibition of such stars as Vines, Tilden and Allison. Those who made up the Stirling party were, Mr. R. H. Williams, Harry Lovblond, Bill Jones and Tom Ward.

Mr. Albert Doddwell and his brother Cecil, both of Oshawa, visited friends and relatives in Stirling over the week-end.

Miss Pauline Bailey of Toronto spent the week-end at the home of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bailey.

Mr. W. Bolte of Consecon, visited friends here on Friday and Saturday.

Miss Patricia Shea of Toronto is spending a few days at her home here.

HOOK 2 SAILFISH AT SAME TIME

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson of Belleville Enjoy Fishing Trip

Mr. H. A. Johnson and family of this city, who left in their 18-foot launch cruiser for the south last Fall, following the well known water trips around the continent to Florida, where they are now enjoying an extended holiday vacation, are enjoying good fishing, according to reports.

A recent issue of the Fort Lauderdale (Florida) Daily News contains the following account of an exciting three-quarters of an hour spent by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, in landing two sailfish off the Florida coast:

H. A. Johnson and his wife, Allen, achieved the ultimate in fishing Wednesday. While trolling from their boat, also named Allen, two sails came up, grabbed their baits and rushed away in opposite directions. This was something Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were unprepared for. Out of them had to perate the boat while at the same time fight an energetic sailfish. For three-quarters of an hour they fought the two without landing either. They were in a quandary. If one let his rod down to land the other's fish they would lose one sail, something they didn't want to do. Finally, Wesley Pape's boat, the Dorothy K II appeared on the scene so Mr. Johnson signaled for aid and the two fish were successfully landed. Mr. Johnson's weighed 68 1-2 pounds while Mrs. Johnson's tipped the scales at 38 1-4 pounds. At one time the larger sail had all but ten feet of line off the small Capitol reel which Mr. Johnson was using. Both say it was just about the most exciting three-quarters of an hour they have ever spent. They formerly had spent a month in the Keys and considerable time in Palm Beach in quest of a sail but little did they dream that they would land a double header, one of the most rare occurrences in fishing.

APPOINTEE KNOWN HERE BEFORE WAR

Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Ambassador For Germany, Lived in Ottawa

Toronto, April 23.—(CP)—As the Wilhelmstrasse buzzed today with speculation on the significance of the latest promotion of Joachim von Ribbentrop to a high rank in the Nazi hierarchy as "Black-Shirted" Nazi guard troops, Donald Heins, Canadian musician, recalled some months in south Germany, studying German at Ottawa before the Great War.

General von Ribbentrop who, it is said in high Nazi circles, will soon be appointed by Reichsführer Adolf Hitler to the post of "Ambassador-Extraordinary and Minister," has a vivid impression on those, who knew him, Mr. Heins of Ottawa said.

"Tall, with a thin face, fair, wavy hair, and a bearing that "could have done credit to a prince," as Mr. Heins remembers him, Von Ribbentrop was immensely popular with the top strata of society in the capital.

"There was something mysterious and extraordinary about the handsome German living in Ottawa for no other apparent reason than to perfect his command of the English language and to familiarize himself with life in one of England's Dominions."

ONTARIO CRICKET ASSOCIATION

Office of the Secretary,
53 Yonge St., Toronto,
April 17th, 1935.

The Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Sir:

I am indebted to Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., for the privilege of reading your editorial comment on "Cricket in Schools", a copy of which he very kindly sent me.

What you had to say in your leading "editorial" was most encouraging and, on behalf— of the Ontario Cricket Association, I wish to congratulate you on its excellence and thank you.

The time is not so distant when the Bay of Quinte boasted several very fine players of cricket. A mistake was made, however, in only a number of towns throughout the province where formerly the game flourished in that no organized effort was maintained to interest the younger generation.

For over a hundred years Toronto and Guelph Cricket Clubs, also Upper Canada College, have carried on a continuous activity and no other sport in Canada enjoys, in span of organization, a comparable record. We are endeavouring to revive interest in and playing of the game in Ontario.

When it is remembered that Canada is the only part of the British Empire where cricket is not the popular summer sport, it must be appreciated we are losing out in more than one respect. Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and the West Indies send teams to England at regular intervals and undoubtedly their business relationships with Great Britain do not suffer thereby.

I am very pleased to learn that Principal A. C. Wilkin has undertaken to intgoduce cricket into the outdoor curriculum of Quinte Collegiate Vocational School. His is not an easy task as there is not an organized cricket club near-er than Peterborough and Trinity College School, Port Hope, is the nearest school where the game is played. Your continued interest and support of cricket will be greatly appreciated by the Ontario Association. On its behalf I wish to thank you for the splendid article in your paper.

Yours faithfully,
R. W. Sharp,
Hon. Secretary.

Mrs. J. Dan Hopkins with little daughter Lorraine, of Toronto, spent Easter with her mother, Mrs. Countryman, John Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cameron have returned to the city after spending the week-end in Toronto.

Miss Vera Bisbee of Amelisburg spent Easter with her sister, Mrs. John Fitzgerald.

The Easter Monday dance held in the Johnstone Academy for the social clinic was a splendid success. Guests were present from Toronto, Oshawa, Whitby, Healey Falls and Wooler and spent a most enjoyable evening. The spacious auditorium presented a very attractive appearance, the charming gowns of the ladies adding to the colorful scene. Charles Goyer's orchestra provided a fine dance program and refreshments were served during the evening.

At St. Michael's Auditorium last evening a most successful card party and social evening was held last night under the auspices of St. Michael's Athletic Club. Bridge and euchre were enjoyed during the earlier part of the evening. Prizes for euchre were won by Miss Cryderman, ladies' first; Mrs. George Brown, second; men's first, Mr. Arthur Sansome; second, Mr. Frank O'Brien; bridge, ladies' first, Miss Aileen Flagler; second, Mrs. W. Callaghan; men's first, Mr. J. Reeks; second, Chas. Punsell. A delicious lunch was served after the games. The Commodores played a splendid dance program. The appreciation of the club to all who lent their patronage was voiced by the president, James Keeta. The executive of the club, which also includes Ronald Doyle, vice-president; George Whalen, secretary; Jimmie Belair, treasurer, and representatives from each form very capably carried out the duties of hosts.

Weddings

DAVIDSON—NICHOLS

The wedding took place at St. Michael's Rectory last evening of Miss Catherine T. Nichols and Mr. Albion Davidson, both of this city. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., officiated.

The bride wore a smart silk ensemble with printed frock and matching coat. Following the ceremony a reception was held for immediate relatives and relatives at the groom's home, Herchimer Avenue, where Mr. and Mrs. Davidson will take up residence.

SHERMAN—LESLIE

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Shannonville United Church Parsonage, Saturday, April 20th, at 10 o'clock, when Miss Helen Howe Leslie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Leslie, Corbyville, became the bride of Stanley Bruce Sherman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Sherman, Melrose, in the presence of immediate relatives. Rev. W. H. Clarke officiated.

The bride was becomingly attired in navy blue with navy and hat any accessories.

The couple were attended as matron of honor by Mrs. Norma Leslie and Mr. Jay Haight.

After the happy couple left for a motor trip to Montreal and eastern points. They will reside on the groom's farm.

HALLOWAY W.M.S.

Mrs. A. Wilson entertained the W. M. S. of Halloway to dinner on Wed. April 17th. Seventy visitors and members were present to do justice to the good things provided by the hostess. At 2.30 the President opened the meeting with hymn 288 and prayer by Mr. Mutton. Mrs. Harry Townsend read the Scripture lesson, chapter of Acts.

The secretary being unable to be present, Mrs. Percy Kelley took the work. The roll call was answered by something to be thankful for.

The Easter thankoffering was taken up and a short prayer was offered on thanksgiving. Mrs. Embury Hough and Mrs. C. Bird gave the 2nd and 3rd chapters on the study book.

Mrs. G. Cadman gave a solo and hymn 568 was sung and Mr. Mutton closed the meeting.

WEDDING INVITATIONS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Please tell me how to word a response to a wedding invitation. Should it be mailed to the parents of the bride? 2. When should the wedding gift be sent?

N.

1. If the invitation is to the church ceremony only — this invitation is to a house wedding or to the reception or breakfast — this invitation "requests the pleasure of your company" — then we answer it, and at once.

This is the form for our acceptances:

Miss Julia Wells Osborne. . . .
requests the pleasure of
Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's Parents)'s
kind invitation for their daughter's wedding reception
on Friday, the first of May at five o'clock at the Main Hotel

This is the form for the regret:

Miss Julia Wells Osborne
regrets that she is unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's Parents)'s
kind invitation
for their daughter's wedding reception
on
Friday, the first of May

This acceptance or regret should be written on your "very best" letter-paper, double-sheeted, white. It should be written on the first page, and the wording should be spaced as I have indicated, to give an effect, similar in writing, to the engraved invitation.

The response should be sent to the bride's parents, if they are the ones who issue the invitations. In other words, we send the response addressed to the name or names engraved on the first line.

2. We should send our wedding gift about two weeks before the date set for the wedding — and at least ten days before. We should send it early, to help the bride-to-be, for we know that she must write her thank-you notes before the wedding. Also we don't want our present to look like a "last minute" thought.

Surprise Party for Boy Friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it a social error for a girl to give a surprise party for a boy she goes about with; but to whom she is not engaged I thought of having a surprise party for my boy friend on his birthday. Would this be a right or wrong procedure?

Of course this decision depends primarily on what your mother thinks about this. If she agrees, I see no reason why you shouldn't plan this surprise party for this friend.

CARD WITH WEDDING GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should I enclose my engraved visiting-card with a wedding gift even when I know the bride-to-be very well? Or would a note be better or sufficient.

Guest-to-be

You would enclose your visiting-card with your wedding gift. Since the bride-to-be is a close friend of yours, you would probably like to write a message on your card. So, if you are unmarried, you cross off the Miss and your last name; or, if you are married, and are sending the gift, as should be, from you and your husband, you cross off the entire name-line if it is a Mr. and Mrs. card, and write the first name underneath. This makes the card a "note", as it will be when you have written a message on it, and your message might read: "Dearest love and wishing you all happiness".

When you send wedding presents to less intimate friends, we may enclose our visiting-card as is, with no message written on it.

THE DRAMA

21 Groups From All Canada Ready To Compete For Bessborough Trophy

(By Ray Brown, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 22 (CP)—Today's amateur dramatic groups from three Canadian cities polished up the fine points of their plays for the opening day of the Dominion Drama Festival here tonight.

With a crowded house assured, players from Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa prepared to make their great effort before the critical gaze of Allan Wade, finals adjudicator, who arrived last week from London to perform his difficult duties.

A Canadian play will start the festival. From the pen of P. N. Jacobont, the one-act drama "..... and Sendeth Rain," will be given by the Royal Bank Players of Montreal as the first of a three-presentation opening night. It will be followed by "Saturday Night," winner of a group from the London Little Theatre, Philip Johnson is the author of this play. The final production of the first night will be "Rizzio's Boots," by Hal D. Stewart, winner of the Ottawa Drama League group, that was the Eastern Ontario competition.

The competition this year will bring 21 groups from all levels of the Little Theatre, with entries from 13 cities and eight provinces of the Dominion.

The Bessborough Trophy, symbolic of the highest Canadian amateur acting and production, may be won in either English or French. The teams from London and Montreal, which will play tonight, have had plenty of opportunity to look over the stage and have the necessary dress rehearsals as a preliminary to the opening night.

ADDRESS HONORS BRIDE-TO-BE

At the home of Mrs. Earle Denyet, Latta, last evening, a delightful shower was held by her Sunday School Class in honor of Miss Mabel Hodgens, bride-to-be. During the evening games was speak playing games, after which the presentation of a silver table centre and salt and peppers, was made, the following address being read by Miss Mary Hamilton:

Latta, Ontario,
April 22, 1935

Dear Mabel:—

On the eve of your approaching marriage we have gathered together to spend one more social evening with you before you take your departure from our community.

We will miss you greatly in our church and Sunday School and other organizations in which you have always lent your helping and efficient hand. We sincerely trust that your friends and associates at your new home will appreciate you as your old friends in this community have. You will not be far from us, Mabel, and we hope to see you and your husband often with us.

As a tangible token of our good will and best wishes for your future happiness, we ask you to accept this gift in remembrance of your girl friends at Latta.

Signed on behalf of your Sunday School Class of Plainfield United Church.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Denyes.

Library Corner

The Cambridge shorter history of India, edited by H. H. Dodwell, divided into three sections: Hindu and Buddist India by J. Allan, Muslim India by Sir Wolseley Haig and British India by H. H. Dodwell, offers in condensed form the published volumes of the Cambridge History of India. It contains twenty maps and one thousand pages.

The first section deals with ancient India, its sources and ancient history. It describes the conquest by Alexander the Great, the growth of the Maurya Empire and its fall and traces the development of Indian Medieval times. The second part tells of Muslim India from the founding of the kingdom of Delhi to the last of the Mughals. Part three is perhaps the most interesting to the student of modern Indian affairs. It follows the course of the early European trading companies, the Portugese, the Dutch, the French and the English, and finally brings us to the year 1919.

In the Best One Act Plays of 1932-3 and year book of the Drama in America, edited by Burns Mantle, we found the ten best plays of the year, among which are "Dinner at Eight", "Design for Living", "When Ladies Meet" "Biography" in addition to these ten plays, the volume contains the full cast for each production of the year, a summary of each plot and information about authors and actors. This volume is of the greatest interest for lovers of the theatre.

"R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada" by Andrew D. Ross Lean is a book of timely interest. In its hundred brief pages it presents a living portrait of the man who has been prime minister of Canada during the most trying years of our country's existence. The book is profusely illustrated with photographs. The fact that it passed through four editions in little over a month speaks for its popularity.

"The Challenge to Liberty" by Herbert Hoover raises a very serious question. Mr. Hoover believes that the sacred cause of liberty is definitely threatened in America today. In this book he puts into words the fears of thousands of American citizens. He compares the American System with such philosophies of government as Fascism, Socialism, Nazism and Communism. He analyzes frankly America's past abuse of Liberty and expresses the fear that the New Dealers in their attempts to make a short cut to prosperity are sacrificing real and permanent advancement and fundamental spiritual values.

THREE INJURED IN FIRE

Wedgeport, N.S., April 22 (CP).—Three persons are suffering from injuries, two serious, while the home of Vincent Richards is levelled to the ground and a loss of approximately $4,000 is being counted.

Fire broke out in the attic of the home. As it reached the brick chimney there was a dull explosion and pieces of brick and mortar shot into the street.

WHERE FIVE WERE KILLED IN NOVA SCOTIA WRECK

OCEAN GIANT HAULED OFF MUDBANK BY PYGMY TUGS

Six tiny tugs strain with all their effective strength at the stern of the giant S.S. Aquitania, ocean liner as the latter lies on a mudbank, ten miles out of Southampton, England. In this picture the Aquitania is shown slowly slipping off the bank that had kept her prisoner for twenty-five hours. No damage was done to the giant passenger ship.

CARRIES ON ANTI-EXECUTION CAMPAIGN

Gang of "Breakers" Operate in E. York

Toronto, April 23 (CP).—Police believe a gang of house breakers is operating in the East York following the burning of two cars in one section while a break-in was carried out in another area about the same time.

Both cars were set afire by a string dipped in the gasoline tank. Police think the incendiaries were intended to draw police from the other district while the robbery was committed.

LOUIS WIN EASILY

Dayton, O., April 23.—Joe Louis, Detroit negro heavyweight title contender, last night scored one of the quickest workouts of his career in slittering Biff Bennett of Chicago in 1 minute, and 15 seconds of a scheduled six-round bout.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE REGENT
"Roberta"

All the Screen Musical Triumphs Rolled Into One

All the screen musical triumphs rolled into one describes "Roberta," the feature offering at the Belle tonight and Wednesday, matinee and evening.

The company which produced "Flying Down to Rio" and "The Gay Divorcee" follows with another gay, tuneful hit which surpasses in color and entertainment values both of the delightfully successful predecessors. It simply bristles with novelties.

Starring Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, three players ideally suited to musical comedy, the picture offers every thing which goes to make up smash entertainment.

Based on the Jerome Kern hit which made stage history last season, the picture offers a treat to the eyes as well as the ears. Furthermore, it tells a thoroughly intriguing and altogether human romantic story with a bona fide audience interest equally with the delightful singing and dancing numbers.

A fashion show paraded by beautiful models is a feature which will delight both sexes. Scores of pretty girls are gorgeous.

Miss Dunne never before has looked quite so lovely or sung quite so beautifully as she does in this production, while Astaire and Rogers are positive knockouts in their dance routines.

In addition to the best of the Kern melodies, which include the original stage show, including the memorable "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes", the picture introduces new and lilting numbers.

Just a word about the dancing. there is so much talk about in this Astaire-Rogers combination that the "Carioca" and the "Continental", Astaire and Rogers have succeeded in topping their former routines in "Roberta."

Randolph Scott moves gallantly and tunefully to a dramatically romantic climax, centres about the linking theme of love in a Paris gown shop. Supporting cast of romance, melody and dancing are perfectly blended.

Added supporting entertainments are contributed by Randolph Scott, Helen Westley, Adrienne Roberts, Victor Varconi, C. Doris and Lois Alberni.

The Belle Latest News of the World and a new and funny Mickey Mouse Cartune also will be shown Friday complete this exceptional screen programme. It will be repeated again Tonight, and Wednesday matinee and evening.

"McFadden's Flats" Thursday

The season's big laugh festival will be celebrated at the Belle Thursday and Friday when "McFadden's Flats" with its seventy minutes of rip-roaring fun and cast of famed funmakers will be presented. Paul Muni, Betty Davis, Marjorie Rambeau and Eugene Pallette appear in the gripping adventure drama "Bordertown".

STONE TOMAHAWK FOUND

PORT ERIE, Ont., April 23. — (CP)—While digging a garden at Erie Beach, Frank Walker found a lone Indian tomahawk in perfect state of preservation. It is believed to have been dropped by one of the Indian Brave from Chief Pontiac who helped to build Old Fort Erie. Colonel John Montrave rounded it more than a century and a half ago.

AT THE CAPITOL
"Cockeyed Cavaliers"

Wheeler and Woolsey in a Delightful Lot of Daffy Doings

Medieval merriment, mirthful melodies, a bevy of beauties and a screamingly funny story are salient production values of "Cockeyed Cavaliers," the special request feature at the Capitol tomorrow only.

As a pair of nutty Knights, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey display themselves more earnestly laughy than ever before in this burlesque of the days of yore.

"Cockeyed Cavaliers" takes place during the colorful Middle Ages, a period invaded by Bert and Bob as two iconoclastic modern vagabonds. Their comical antics take them to Cranbury Cross, a random locale of Europe, where they unbeknownst to save petite Dorothy Lee from forced marriage to a duke. Soon they encounter the Duke's niece, her husband the Baron, and a host of other and the gaiety progresses madly, merrily, and uproariously.

Without a doubt this picture offers Wheeler and Woolsey one of their best vehicles. Their comedy wisecracks and capers set against the Middle Ages period accentuate their inimitable comedy. Miss Lee and Mary Boland duet again the right-hand ladies to the comics' mad mirth, and perform are a pretty feminine allure. Other fine performances are by Noah Beery, Robert Greig and Henry Sedley, while many stageplays gain decorum in the scenes with eye-filling pulchritude and strikingly attractive costumes.

Much of the charm of "Cockeyed Cavaliers" is due to the music. Kalmar and Ruby have written the lyrics and melodies of two tuneful songs, "I Love to Dilly Dally" and "I Love Mondays".

Added Attractions

A side-splitting comedy "Suits to Nuts"; a Novelty Reel reviewing current events and popular sport episodes in a Pepper Pot of excellent entertainment, and "Hixson-Burpee," a new Pathe different laugh riot.

Tonight Only

"The Firebird", a drama of a mother's love, starring Verree Teasdale and Richard Cortez, and Barry Tea Plates today. Complete shows at 2.30, 7.15, 9.15.

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 23.—(CP)— The news favored the advance for the Mining Board of Toronto Exchange today and a jump of about three cents in the price of Lake Shore to a new high for the last nine years threw a rosy glow over the White Metal and Base Metal pictures. Hudorado had a turnover of 24,000 shares in the first hour.

Dome gained 150 cents to 42.25 and Noranda 75 cents to 38.75. Wright Hargreaves was up 5 cents, Teck Hughes 5 and Brulorne 10, while Lake Shore and Hollinger were down 10 to 15 cents each.

Activity in Hudorado put the price up 13 cents to 1.22 while Castle advanced 2 to 34, Base Metal 1-4 and the Penny Silvers added fractions.

McWatters Gold shot up to 1.72 but sold back to 1.65, unchanged. Shiness sold up 5 to 3.10 and gained 2 cents or two were boarded also for Coe's Gold, Little Long Lac and Buffalo-Ankerite.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 23.—(CP)—The Industrial Share Section of Toronto Exchange after opening firm to strong lost its pep before noon today.

Gypsum, National Steel Car and Dominion Tar led an advance but in the steels the general tone was merely firm.

Smelters gained 2 1-2 points to 143 1-2, O.F.S. 1 and Hollinger 1-4 while the Distillery Group held around the last closing level. Brewing Corporation and Canada Malting were up small fractions.

Higher also were Beatty, Hamilton Theatre Pfd and Bruck Silk against a small drop for imperial tobacco.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, April 23 (AP).—The stock market's buoyant mood shifted to the shoulders of the metals and rails today and the two leaders apparently had little difficulty in breaking the trial to further highter levels.

Such issues as U. S. Steel, American Telephone, International Harvester, Chrysler, General Motors, American Can, Du Pont, General Electric and Western Union were slightly up or down. A spurt in bar silver in the London and New York, to new peaks since 1925 called attention to the silver group.

In the Canadian list, aside from firmness in Dome, narrow price changes appeared in shares of International Nickel, McIntyre and Canadian Pacific. On the curb Hiram Walker was made lower but Lake Shore ruled even. Dominion Government Bonds were steady. Canadian funds held unchanged at 99 9-16 cents.

Shares up 1 or more but less than 3 included U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Guggenheim, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Kennecott Copper, Anaconda, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Sugar, American Sugar Refining and Public Service of New Jersey.

Among individual firmer issues were Standards of New Jersey and California, Plymouth and Texas Corp.

COMES AT RIGHT TIME

San Francisco, April 23 (AP) — Award of the $2,000-year Paris prize of the Musicians' Foundation to Frede Vidar, 24-year-old San Francisco pianist, comes when his personal finances were at a low point.

He was vacating his studio here for lodging in Europe and, when he received the announcement of the award, Vidar, playing yesterday, "I was going to hitchhike to New York next week to enter the contest. Fortunately in the summer exhibits," he said.

SOAP SCULPTURE IN SPARE

Toronto, April 23 (CP). — Soap sculpture as a means of self-expression is not beyond the means of anyone and such leisure activities should be encouraged and assisted by libraries, Mrs. Norman W. Lyle, president of the Ontario Library Association, said the annual conference here today.

CAR TURNS OVER DRIVER IS HURT

J. A. Marisseau, Montreal Admitted to Hospital

J. A. Marisseau, Montreal commercial traveller, was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital, early today following a motor accident during which Marisseau's car turned over at Shannonville, Ont. The automobile struck the left side of the bridge, rammed to the opposite side and turned over in the road just after leaving the bridge. The car came to rest lying on its side while Mr. Marisseau was forced to release himself by climbing out of a side window. Neighbours hearing the commotion, assisted the injured driver to escape from his position.

The damage to the motor car was set at $200 while the total damage of the vehicle being badly damaged.

MOTORCYCLE CLUB AT THE OUTLET

First Ride and Competitions of Season Held on Sunday

The Quinte Motorcycle Club staged its first club run Sunday. Twenty riders left the Outlet after which they went to the Outlet Schoolhouse where skill in riding was shown by all.

There were a number of fine machines, the Indian, Harley-Davidson, Triumph, Brighton and other rear-by being in evidence.

The program consisted of a spirit, acceleration test of 1-5 mile roll-off which was won by Ernie Pepper riding a Norton in 14 sec. Second place was taken by another Norton in 15 sec, and third by Bristol of Madoc, (Norton) in 2-3 seconds. Pepper also won the bowed closely by N. Parks, Pindad and others.

A handicap race was also staged giving all makes and size of machine an equal chance.

A musical chair, and relay races followed in the all boy part and "slams and jams" followed.

Motorcycle fans were greatly enthused by the riders but no speed trials were attempted due to the condition of the road.

The club hopes to stage a real thrill for everyone in the near future.

MEN'S CHORUS TO GIVE A VARIED PROGRAM

Frank Oldfield, Baritone, Will Be Guest Soloist

Belleville music lovers are eagerly awaiting the third annual recital by the Belleville Men's Chorus which will take place tomorrow evening in the Collegiate Auditorium. The two previous concerts held by the chorus under the direction of Mr. Ross Thrasher, proved to be the delight of city's entertainment season and a similar evening of music promises to be equally successful.

This year the Chorus will have as its guest soloist Frank Oldfield, Canada's leading baritone. Mr. Oldfield is a familiar figure on the radio and concert stage and those who have had the opportunity of hearing him over the radio will be equally desirous of hearing his program tomorrow.

The high standard of performance which has been attained by the chorus made this group outstanding. Their carefully arranged programs are planning to give a delightful evening of varied and delightful songs. Following the work of the ensemble, The concert will begin at 8:15 sharp in the Collegiate Auditorium.

FALLS INTO SHRUBS

Patrolmen Rescue Boy From Peril Along Cliffside

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 22 (AP) — An eight-year-old boy, Douglas Dean, fell nearly 50 feet into the Niagara gorge at the foot of Linwood Place today and escaped with a cut on the head and body bruises.

The boy was playing with other youngsters, including William Dean, his older brother, along the rim of the bank and tumbled over the cliff when he lost his footing. He landed in the shrubbery another 50 feet at the side of the cliff. Patrolmen went down a pathway and worked their way back along the bank to the shrubbery and rescued the youngster.

INDIANS OPPOSE U. S. MIGRATION

Tribes on Reserve Near Brantford Condemn Report

Brantford, Ont., April 22—(CP)— Rumored migration of Indians from the Six Nations Reserve near here to the United States where they would live under the old system of government, particularly the chiefs, has not the general support of the tribes involved, according to Lieut.-Col. C. L. Morgan, Indian superintendent for the Department of Indian Affairs.

Col. Morgan said such reports appear from time to time and that there is always a few agitators on the Reserve the band as a whole is loyal to the King and that it is perfectly content to remain in Canada" where they are governed by a group of 12 chiefs elected from the various tribes.

The reported plan of the tribes to move to the United States was termed "ridiculous" by Col. Morgan who said these periodical rumors, "not of Shinbone Alley variety" are always "as depreciated and condemned by members of the band generally."

Col. Morgan also said that the delegates to attend the Grand Council at the Onondaga Reserve at Syracuse, N. Y., are "self-elected, self-styled and have no official authority of any description" as a farcial continuation of the old order of things when the Six Nations Indians subscribed to the travelling expenses for these holiday Jaunts."

25th Anniversary Of Marriage Is Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Fraser Aylsworth of Madoc celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary and Mr. Aylsworth's birthday at their home on Sunday, April 21st. They received the congratulations of their friends in the living room of their home which was a profusion of spring flowers, tulips, daffodils and palms. # QUAKE DEATH TOLL NOW NO. 3,045

Scorching Tropical Sun Beats Down on Misery Torn Survivors

(Copyright 1935 by the Associated Press)

Tulkoki, Formosa, April 23 — (Tuesday)— Quake Japanese government today sent 50 relief parties with doctors, water and food to aid the terror-ridden survivors of earthquakes, which on Saturday and Sunday devastated 2,000 square miles of this "island beautiful".

As I sat today on the Renzo News Agency announced officially in Tokyo that 3,045 persons had been killed in the quakes).

The scorching, tropical sun beat down relentlessly on the survivors of the misery-torn survivors, inflicting new suffering as scarcity of water assumed grave proportions. Practically all pipelines and water reservoirs had been wrecked by the earthshocks.

Meanwhile, thousands stumbled among the ruins of their homes in search of food, clothing and precious fluid. Relief was expected hourly, however, as carrier planes—the first arriving yesterday—began to arrive, carried word the Japanese Army Battalion stationed at Taichu had dispatched fifty relief parties with equipment to the stricken areas.

The airplane survey disclosed the area worst affected extended from Taichu southward to Takibu and from the eastern seacoast where the shortage head hunting tribes of the Savages", dwell.

Taipah, capital of Formosa, and Tainan, old capital where most of the European residents live, were not seriously damaged.

Early estimates of property damage ranging from $3,000,000 to twice that amount.

THE DRAMA

Adjudicator From England Praises Play Produced By Ottawa Players

Ottawa, April 23 (CP). — Four plays in French will form tonight's fare of the Dominion Drama Festival, when the Ottawa Players offer one-act English plays, two of them for the second time.

Last night's audience heard Vincent Massey, Festival chairman, and Governor Canadian Minister to the United States, declare that Canada's drama is on the up-grade. Mr. Massey said the festival owed a debt of gratitude to the Earl of Bessborough. He was also thanked those concerned with it re-garding the Duke of Kent's visit, Leading Consul. He drew attention to a cable from the retired governor in the program saying that on his return to England he would be pleased to tell of "with profound interest" the fortunes of the festival.

Highest praise of Allen Wade, adjudicator and London stare authority, came from the Ottawa Drama League for its production of the Irish play, "The Rising of the Moon" by Hal D. Stewart. Action of the play takes place on the seaside of ... Mary Queen of Scots and concerns carrings-on of that romantic monarch and David Rizzio.

Mr. Wade described the Ottawa group's efforts as "an extremely good performance of a difficult play." He was also enthusiastic in his praise of the London Little Theatre's performance of "Thursday night" by Philip Johnson, the story of a drunkard's brutality to his family.

He praised Lilyan Adams for her sensitive portrayal of the part of Jane Bryce, the wife, but suggested she failed in being out sufficiently the bitterness of a woman who had been mistreated for years. Mrs. Wade Wilson, Bentley as Jim, the husband, was not sufficiently brutal, but praised Sally Wright for her part as Mrs. Valance, a gossiping neighbor.

The adjudicator described the performance of ... and Mrs. Bain" by the Royal Bank Players of Montreal as lacking in characterization and intensity of feeling.

The play by P. N. Jacobson, a Canadian, deals with a young publicity manager of a dairy company, who learns his dying wife contracted tuberculosis from contaminated milk from his own herd. Unwittingly, he carried the baby

$750 STOLEN FROM WELLINGTON BANK FOUND IN CELLAR

Bank of Commerce was gained by the thieves of the Bank of Nova Scotia by means of forcing a rear door, Provincial Police Force announced. Practically two-thirds of the loot was found in the cellar of the building and later discovered, after days of investigation, by the authorities. Numerous arrests clues have been unearthed by the O.P.P., but not until today was positive evidence obtained in the matter. Despite the fact, that all members of the O.P.P. have been continually on the job investigating this robbery and followed every lead to their satisfaction.

Power Drills Stolen

Two robberies, previous to the Wellington bank robberies, which latter probably into the case were disclosed, when it was learned, that a power drill had been stolen in the village a few days previous to the Wellington bank robbery and a similar drill was also taken about from the village of Brighton at the same time. The power drill which was lifted at the time of the bank robbery, that a power drill had been used to force the rear brick wall into vault of the burglarized bank. Provincial Police Force and Inspector Gardner with ben are working on which police refuse to disclose. It has been definitely established that the power used in a robbery would take the matter of many hours.

Numerous residents of Wellington and the surrounding district have been questioned by the O.P.P. without a sign or indication insofar as to who the bank robbers might be. It is believed, however, and is understood, that the robbers had made another mistake, that they had undoubtedly lead to their apprehension. It is believed a number of them, O. H. Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner to Great Britain, in an address here said F. Hepburn.

You can see the fine Italian hand of Howard Ferguson as he passes at his own handiwork and now tries to cover it up by fomenting agitation in the English press," said Mr. Hepburn commenting on a reproduction of a poster from the London Morning Post characterizing Ontario's action as "a shock."

"They had better look to the Bankers they created after Baldwin signed an agreement with the United States regarding war debts and Bankers and later England broke it," said Mr. Hepburn.

Declaring people in glass houses should not throw stones, Mr. Hepburn said the Bankers should be "repudiation" had better turn attention to the situation the created after Baldwin signed an agreement with the United States."

"I wouldn't be surprised" he said, "if the situation was formented by Howard Ferguson."

Mr. Hepburn added he would "remind the English paper they should put the blame on the bankers of Canada's High Commissioner who entered into the agreement with the United States."

TOLEDO STRIKE SEEN AS THREAT

William F. Green Sees "Grave Danger" in Situation

Washington, April 22.—(AP)— "Grave danger" that the Toledo automobile strike might spread to other United States auto factories was seen today by William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor.

Green, native in the Toledo plant of the Chevrolet Company decided morning itineraries for the walkout this morning," he told reporters.

"They had participated in an election by the Automobile Labor Board which showed that 1,800 out of the 200 employed favored the United Auto Workers Union as the bargaining agency."

Resentment against the Automobile Labor Board, member Dr. Leo Wolman, was growing among the auto workers, Green said.

Returns from the recent tally of its election results showed that more than 4,000 of the 7,000 auto workers favored the Federation as their collective bargaining representative.

AFFECTIONS SUIT RETRIAL ORDERED

Chicago, April 23 (AP). — The $100,000 awarded the first wife of Dr. Frederick Peterson in a heart balance, Ont., for the loss of her husband's affections was wiped off the books by Federal Judge William H. Holly.

The former set aside the huge judgment a Federal jury had tendered Mrs. Helen Bedford-Jones nearly two months and granted a new trial to Mrs. Mary Bernardin Peterson, mother of the doctor and the widely known author. The retrial was set for May 15.

Judge Holly observed "there seemed to be little affection in Dr. Peterson" and opined the verdict was "against the manifest weight of Evidence."

None of the principals was present for the hearing on the motion for a new trial, but the first Mrs. Bedford-Jones' attorney, Royal Stout, indicated the battle would be carried on.

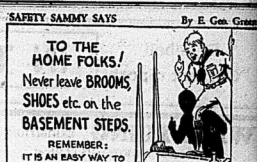
SAFETY SAMMY SAYS By E. Gen. Grant



MISSIONARIES SAFE
Toronto, April 22 (CP)—Missionaries from Canada in Formosa are safe, a cable from Taihoku to the Presbyterian Church headquarters here reveals. The cable was from the Mission Council in district stricken yesterday with disastrous earthquake.

The cable read: "No need anxiety, all are quite safe. Pl inform relatives."

McCLARY Introduces STABILIZED HEAT

The Stainless Oven Top

Stainless porcelain enamel protects the appearance of your oven top. Resists all cooking stains. Needs only a damp cloth to clean.

The Cooking Tab Elements

The famous Max-Speed Element for super-speed cooking. Found on most McClary as standard equipment. The remaining elements are the new improved Speed-Irons. Your dealer will explain their many advantages.

The Greatest Boon to BAKING and ROASTING in Years

TO an oven already accepted as one of the finest baking and roasting ovens on the market, McClary now adds Stabilized Heat! With this new feature come three distinctly new advantages: —The fastest pre-heating.—An absolutely even-temperatured oven. 3—Fool-proof Stabilizing Heat Control.

FASTEST PRE-HEATING

Set the control to the desired temperature . . . turn the single oven switch to "pre-heat" . . . a small red light glows on the switch panel . . . the oven elements release an instant flood of heat—This comes the fastest pre-heating you've ever witnessed!

POSITIVE OVEN TEMPERATURE

After the desired oven temperature has been reached, the small red light on the switch panel goes out . . . your signal that the oven is ready. The control automatically cuts off all oven elements. The oven heat will not rise above the desired temperature. If your oven is allowed to cool through delay, the control automatically turns it and brings the oven temperature back immediately.

STABILIZED HEAT

After pre-heating, put in your roast and turn the switch to "baking." Then leave it . . . the heat control will take care of everything else. That. The temperature is evenly maintained throughout the baking process. Save time . . . save worry . . . save electricity. McClary has taken the guess work out of baking and roasting with Stabilized Heat.

Cleveland Hurling Staff in Mid - Season Form, Team Being Real Threat for Pennant

Only Used One Pitcher Per Game Since Season Opens

RED SOX BLOOM

Joe Cronin, Pilot, Has Team Playing High Class Ball

(By Herbert W. Barker)
Associated Press Sports Writer)

Four games, four pitchers, three shutouts—that's part of the story Walter Johnson is persuaded is Cleveland Indians will be a constant threat in the American league pennant this year.

So far the Indians have done very little hitting on their own behalf but they haven't needed it with such pitching as Mel Harder, Wes Ferrell, Monte Pearson, and Willis Hudlin have flashed.

Harder and Hildebrand gave up only 17 hits altogether in winning Cleveland's first two games, a pair of 14-inning, 2-1 victories, and Pearson was touched for only 10 in being a 3-2 decision over Detroit's champion Tigers in 13 frames but remained for Hudlin, the veteran of the staff, to log all these records away with the Tigers as his victims.

In mid-summer, when Johnson's champions down with three hits and won a 5-0 shutout.

Two of the Tigers' hits came in the seventh but a double play ended the rally and retired Hudlin from is only difficulty. Joe Vosmik's home run with two on climaxed the fireworks for the four-run outburst at Jimmy Bridges' expense in the third and Hal Trosky's double set home Gehringer and Goslin.

Ferrell Wins Two

Meanwhile in Washington, Joe Bonin's amazing Boston Red Sox battled their way to a 4-3 victory over the Athletics in a 4-2 triumph over Jocky Harris' Senators. Wes Ferrell contributed a home run, driving in two singles to his second pitching victory by weakening in the ninth and was replaced by Rube Walberg who stopped the batsmen cold.

Zeke Bonura's two home runs drove in five runs for Chicago White Sox in the first inning to help down their game with St. Louis Browns but the Browns scored six in the same span and won out 6-5.

Jim Walkup, relieving Dick Coffman with two out in the ninth, held the pale hose to one hit the rest of the way.

The only National League game of the day saw Carl Hubbell retain his pitching form. The slender southpaw held the batting Phillies to four hits for one of which was Dolph Camilli's fifth home run of the year, and New York Giants earned an easy 8-1 victory. Mel Ott's home run and Dick Bartell's triple, double and two singles were the main factors in the Giants' 15 hit attack.

An exhibition game at West Point had New York Yankees the services of Fred ("Dixie") Walker (not outfielder) for two weeks. Walker located his right shoulder, when he slid, but a second base in the first inning. It was an injury to the same shoulder that kept Walker out of the game practically all last year.

JUNIOR BALL PLAYERS MEET

Kiwanis Club Will Sponsor Junior Baseball in City

Following the announcement made by the Belleville Amateur Baseball Association to the effect that the sponsoring of junior baseball in this city would be turned over to the local Kiwanis Club, the latter body met today following which a general meeting of all junior players and interested citizens has been called for Wednesday night at the Y.M.C.A.

The formation of a junior town baseball league as well as the entering of a local junior team in the Hastings County junior league will also be discussed at the meeting. The junior club in Belleville this year was awarded to the Kiwanis Club, but providing there are sufficient players showing sufficient interest in the pastime, a local city league will be formed, with the Kiwanis club sponsoring this project as well as the lone junior O.B.A. entry. The meeting is slated to be called at 7.30 p.m. and all junior players in this community are urged to be present in order, that a definite foundation towards the uplift on junior baseball may be established.

EARNS PLACE IN BEARS' OUTFIELD

Fern Bell, Rookie From Coast, is Timely Hitter

(By The Associated Press)

Fern Bell who hit only .323 in 43 games with Hollywood of the Pacific Coast League last year, apparently has earned himself a regular position in Newark Bears' outfield, largely because of his timely hitting.

Just another member of a young and hustling ball club, when the International League opened, Bell jumped into prominence on the first day by cracking out two home-runs.

He failed to keep up that pace the next few days but came through again yesterday with two timely blows to pace the Bears to a 7-2 victory over Montreal Royals. His single in the seventh gave George McQuinn across the plate with the tying run and then in the ninth he connected through with a triple to score Dick Porter with the deciding tally.

In the only other game played in the circuit, Baltimore Orioles continued to pile up his home runs recently to turn back Rochester Red Wings 12-8 in a game in which the lead changed hands seven times.

Woody Abernathy and George Puccinelli starred for the big guns in the Orioles' attack. They each hit home runs to bring the club's total for the year to 15. Puccinelli also cracked out a double to drive in a total of five runs while Abernathy scored four across the plate.

The remainder of the postponement of the Buffalo-Syracuse game, while Toronto and Albany were not scheduled, to play.

SLIGHT CHANGE IN PROGRAM

Pair of Good Boys to Open Wrestling Exhibition

A slight change in the wrestling programme to be presented by the Kiwanis Club at the Belleville Arena on Friday night was announced today. The card is not entirely new opening bout would be affordable the fans.

It was definitely announced that the opening bout would not be of a preliminary nature owing to the calibre of contestants to compete. Chris "Bulldog" Findlay having been signed to meet Joe McDougall, the 228-pounder from the west coast. Incidentally McDougall stands six foot three inches and tips the scales at 228 with an outstanding ring record.

The remaining two bouts on the Kiwanis Club's charity wrestling card are—main bout—Johnnie Gyroffy, Rosemary versus Sunny Dunlop, the Toronto rubberman. Both of these men rip the scales well over the 200 pound limit and have spent the winter wrestling in the west. Two new faces to a local crowd, have been signed in the persons of Jack Herman and Johnnie Dallas, both Americans. These two newcomers meet in the semi-final match of the night.

EDMONTON GRADS HAVE DAY OFF

Defeat Alumnae 58-31 to Win Second Game of Series

Windsor, Ont., April 23 (CP)—Satisfied his proteges has given one of their best performances of the current season, J. Percy Page today proclaimed a day of leisure for Edmonton Grads after their 58-31 victory over Windsor-Walkerville alumnae in the second game of the Canadian Women's senior city championship series here last night.

The peerless gray-haired mentor of basketball would be forgotten for the day and the girls permitted to do as they pleased, while they waited for the third game of the series Wednesday night. One more win will give the western women their 12th consecutive Canadian title.

In the meantime every effort will be made to have "Baby" Belanger back in the lineup, because as Page remarked: "in girls' basketball you never know what to expect. Every night a team is in form, the next night it's the reverse."

The bespectacled Belanger sprained her right ankle in the scorching third session of last night's contest, when alumnae matched point for point in what was perhaps the most exciting 10 minutes of basketball witnessed here this year.

In was in this session the courageous alumnae gave all they had in an attempts to whittle down the 10-point lead Grads carried into the last half. But when the gun went to end the period the margin remained intact—41-31—each team having scored 10 points.

The Edmonton girls came back for the final quarter entirely unaffected by the sizzling pace of the previous session, and added 17 points to their total, while their rivals, the visibly weakened alumnae, barely tried to pick up a point and left off after a few futile thrusts at the basket, when their shots rimmed the hoop but stayed subsided and they went scoreless.

Four Referees In N.H.L. Games A Possibility

Vancouver, April 23.—(CP)—Possibility of National Hockey League games being played under the eyes of four referees and finding favor in secret ambition to be known as the greatest player in hockey were post season hockey tidbits from Frank Patrick today.

The Boston Bruins mentor, who makes his home in British Columbia in the summer, frankly admitted said when the N.H.L. holds its annual meeting he would recommend adoption of the four-man referee system instead of the two used at present. The increase in officials, Patrick believes, would result in more accurate decisions, since officials were called or players penalized. Moreover, the big guns in the Orioles' attack. They each hit home runs to bring the club's total for the year to 15. Puccinelli also cracked out a double to drive in a total of five runs while Abernathy scored four across the plate.

The remainder of the postponement of the Buffalo-Syracuse game, while Toronto and Albany were not scheduled, to play.

CURRENT SPORT
DAY BY DAY

Every team in the C.O.B.L. is second to hard spring training these days amongst the Belleville entry. The Ponies opened their spring training activities with a lengthy practice over the holiday at the Oshawa 'Brewers', while the Sea Hawks, or as Peterboro were known at it, under the watchful eye of Coach Scotty Lee, this time last week. To date this has been little outward stir in the camp of the ex-Nationals, although we understand that some extensive committee-room work is taking up some valuable time. A more handful of bullsters were tossing the apple around at the Exhibition Park on Good Friday, but a general call for potential senior baseball aspirants should soon be issued from the camp of the local seniors.

Judging from the press notices regarding the work out of Oshawa, Peterboro and Kingston, a local baseball club will have more stiff opposition on their hands in 1935 than was experienced in '34. Taking a peek at the various players throughout the circuit we find that every club has strengthened its last year's club to no small degree. Every team in the Central League has added a couple of second son ahead of them and are trying to beat the gun for positions other than the usual amount of spring training. The Peterboro team has undergone a big change in personnel with Smith's Falls, champions of the E.O.B.A. as a whole, Oshawa and Kingston are also booking pre-season games. These clubs expect to manifested a keen interest in the May 5th, the King's Silver Jubilee. What of the Belleville club? Well, street rumors are to the effect that negotiations have been opened with the C.O.B.L. senior team to play in Belleville on the morning of May 24th, with the Ponies as the visiting heard up and worked the kinks out of the Hastings County team in a rather poor condition to stack up against a club that has been practicing for the past month or two.

With two good intermediate clubs within a radius of 25 miles, Napanee and Trenton, the C.O.B.L. senior club could do worse than arrange a pre-season series with one or both of these clubs, judging from the general consensus of opinion around the local baseball circles. By the day of walking until the 24th of May to get into condition has passed the stage, the Belleville club will find Central League clubs particularly anxious to engage them in a miniature manner to that practised by the major league. Although it has not been officially announced yet, it is understood the Belleville Intermediate club was in communication with the C.O.B.L. secretary-manager with a personnel interest in thatbrain of baseball. The senior franchise in the C.O.B.L. was given to the Stewart-Warner-Alemite A.C. and Kingston would only be too glad to start-Warner people have taken it over, intermediates to place as many as four new players besides the five employees of that concern, who played for the Nationals in 1934 and previous.

Taking into consideration that the Johnson Motors Co. are sponsoring the Peterboro entry and the team is to be known as the "Sea Hawks" with the Dunlop Rubber service backing the Oshawa "Brewers" in all likelihood the Belleville entry will be called something like "Radios" or the "Alemites." Then again there is an opening for a local industrial concern to capitalize on the International franchise just as the Gilbards, C.G.E. and Bata-ites compete for the senior C.O.B.L. honors. Any suggestions of a nickname for either the local seniors or intermediates will be gladly published if forwarded in.

Knowing that Bunny Dunlop is tough meaciine we tried to get Jack to meet Dunlop in the main bout of our show on Friday night, but once Kogut heard that we would have to meet Dunlop, he refused to even talk terms. It was a substitute for the better had already been made however. We signed Joe McDougall, 228, to meet Bulldog Findlay in the opening bout. Now, the fans know what a tough hombre Findlay really is and therefore will appreciate this switch as we are assured, that McDougall is a top-notcher," added Mr. Orr. Of course the remainder of the card is as arranged—Gyroffy vs. Dunlop and Herman vs. Dallas. The Kiwanis Club's feel, that they have a splendid card to greet the season with and intend to bring in better wrestlers as the season progresses. The initial show is to establish confidence of each bout on the next card and makes the winners with stronger and better opponents until we procure the best talent possible," concluded Mr. Lee.

Hodge Podge ... Understand the Wall Street softball leaguers intend to organize a circuit of their own. Also that the loop is not being looked upon favorably by some clubs this year ... Charlie Cowan, Bridge and Hill Cubs are holding impromptu workouts evenings, but will get down to real solid practice next Saturday afternoon, so says Chas.

The lacrosse moguls pulled a sandy on the boys at the annual meeting of the O.A.L.A., when it was thrust out the Peterboro scribe knowing anything about the game, ... The local boxia lads are seriously considering the engaging of Harry Wise to train the local amateurs in lacrosse team for the season. "Tis said that coaches as Harry Moore knows his lacrosse. Before the end of the week a call for junior baseball players will be made by the Kiwanis Club. It being understood, that the Kiwanis do not favor a junior city baseball league, that is not to be affiliated with the O.B.A. at present.

The local Kiwanis Club announced today that an open meeting of all junior baseball players would be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday night. The future of junior ball locally will be discussed thoroughly.

Art Young Appointed Manager "Peeney" Mills Named Coach By Senior Ball Team Directors

Appointments Will Receive Unanimous Approval of Fans

START TRAINING

First Call For Practice Likely By End of Week

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Belleville Amateur Baseball Association held on Monday evening, William J. "Peeney" Mills was appointed coach of the senior ball team, and will participate in the Central Ontario loop this season, while Art Young was named as manager. The ball fans will approve both the appointments and with a call for practices likely by the end of the week, providing the weather continues fair, the call for practice can be said to have officially opened in this city.

"Peeney" Mills will likely apply for a playing certificate although he did sing his "swan song" at the conclusion of the final game in Peterborough last year, and will be found cavorting with the youngsters adding that experience, that is so vital in winning ball games. Art Young will make an efficient manager and the business of the club will be well looked after. Art Young has been connected with ball teams in the city for some years, having taken the junior Alemites to the semi-final round for the Provincial title last year. He is well known throughout the Central League and will no doubt be connected with open arms by other club executives. The combination of Young—Mills is ideal in every particular and the fans will be in behind and renewed from his shoulders, he should develop a highly trained and smart ball club. "Peeney" has played continuously with a Belleville team since 1919, last year he coached the ball club, and was not a strong one, compared to teams that have performed in Belleville in previous years, to the playoffs with Herbertson, and with the material on hand should make as good a showing this year, although every team in the city has considerably strengthened.

An early start will be made in spring training, the first call for practices will likely be issued towards the end of the week. The diamond at the fairgrounds is in fair condition, while the boys on the club are just "raring to go". Every player, and local fan should turn out to the practices and no position on the club is closed, the player showing the best performance will get the call.

Daily Short Story

Hash House Maxie

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Now I'd never call Maxie dumb, but never under circumstances would he force Einstein to look to his laurels. He was just an ordinary farm boy who had come to the city to make good and all he seemed to do was to make good things look bad.

When the father sent him to me from the farm and asked me to get the kid a job in the city, I got him a position in a restaurant. It wasn't a bad job as jobs go, and while Maxie hadn't expected to be made chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank, he was a little disappointed over the fact that the best I could get for him was the position of pearl diver in a hash house.

Now, the name pearl diver sounds exciting, and when I wrote him to come and get it he even brought a bathing suit with him, thinking it would be useful in his new profession, not realizing of course, that pearl diving is just handwashing slang for dish washing.

But, I'll say this for the kid, he had courage. He swallowed his disappointment like a kid takes castor oil, and plunged into the job with both hands which, by the way, were so big it's a wonder the chef didn't try to slice them thinking they were hams.

The hash house in which he labored was the hangout for the sporting fraternity which operated in and around the Coliseum which, by a strange coincidence, was right across the street and Maxie, while bathing the dishes entrusted to his gentle care, could hear through the thin partitions that separated his private office from the rest of the place, many a sporting conversation.

Maxie Arrives

Everything was peaceful around the place until Maxie came to work in the hast joint. She was a cute little trick with blonde hair and baby-blue eyes. She looked to Maxie like an angel that came right out of heaven and he reached in his big, oaf-like way to protect her.

But Maxie hadn't been working in off-the-arm hash houses without learning what it was all about and, while it tickled her sense of humor to think that this big lug from the farm was always warning her against the evils of the big city, it made her feel protective towards this big kid with the soft brown eyes.

The trouble started the night old Mooliikuddy, the bus boy, came to work under the influence. That resembled the fall of Rome. The bus promptly sent him home and with little difficulty pried Maxie from his clothes and made him bus-boy.

To the mob that ate in the hash house this was a God-given opportunity. They started in by giving Maxie the bird, while he was carrying a big load of dishes. If you've ever had a paper match inserted under a bird and set afire, you can just imagine what happened then. Yep, that's right, the dishes flew all over the place while Maxie hopped on one foot and yipped with pain while the diners roared with laughter.

Maxie saw red. She dashed over to one of the diners, the one who was laughing loudest, and slapped him across the face.

"Wise guy," she yelled, slapping him again, "but because you're a heavyweight champ you think you can pick on a kid and get away with it. I wish I was a man, I'd hit you so hard, you'd bounce for a week."

The champ's face turned a neat purple. He stood up and pushed Maxie. He placed her carefully across his knee and spanked her.

Maxie went over to the champ and clumped Maxie on the floor and shoved the kid. Maxie, who probably thought he had been kicked by a mule, reeled backwards and slammed his head against the partition.

The chef, who had been distracted by the uproar and who didn't like the champ anyway, grabbed a cleaver and started for the roaring wrestler, who took one look at him and bolted across the street, leaping for the coliseum, the chef two jumps behind and Maxie, who had recovered from the push, behind him. Following Maxie came Maxie, bearing a long butcher knife in her hand and behind her strung the patrons of the restaurant, having went to many a "Yocka" and "tally-ho" as they rushed to be in at the death—and they didn't care whose death it was.

Championship

There was wrestling at the coliseum that night and the spectators at those bouts are still talking about it as the greatest wrestling show they ever saw. They were viewing a couple of slow-moving grunters when the procession burst through the door, with the champ leading. He sprinted down the aisle toward the ring and he would have made it, only a reporter who didn't like him either, stuck his foot out. The champ went down, and the chef, with a cry of triumph, swung the cleaver in a noble attempt to behead him when Maxie stopped him.

"Lemme kill him," screamed the chef.

"No", said Maxie, "I wanna thrash him."

They tried to talk him out of it but telling him he didn't have a chance. Maxie insisted that he was the wrassling champ of Cayuga County and could handle himself.

The audience agreed with Maxie, and Jimmy Dunn, the promoter, saw a chance to get a championship bout for nothing, so he was for it. The pair stepped into the ring.

Dressed as they were in their street clothes, it looked funny — but it wasn't. The champ was sore and he was out to give the kid the works. He battled and slugged and all the time the kid kept circling him looking for an opening.

The champ dove forward and tossed the kid on his ear, Maxie landed with his head outside the ropes and found himself less than an inch from Maxie's lips.

She was shouting something and she had to repeat it four times before it sunk in. He finally nodded and climbed wearily to his feet.

The champ dove again, Maxie sidestepped and as the champ's body hurtled by he leaped on his foe's back, wrapped his arms around the champ's middle and pulled loose the champ's belt.

He slid back and grabbed the bottoms of the champ's trousers and gave a mighty tug. Down came the pants. And with a quick twist, Maxie tied the bottoms in a knot. From then on it was a sack race for the champ and pure pleasure for Maxie. The hysterical audience roared as the champ twisted and turned to get out of his straight-pants and they shrieked when Maxie tossed him for the last time and proudly sat on his face.

There isn't much more to the story. Maxie and Maxie own the hash house now, and the dish washing is a big one for she looks he might have been a wrestling champ once.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper being liver and onions in pore honor, and ma said, What a disposition. Im thinking of Blanch Hipple. What a disposition, she said.

Good or bad? pop said, and ma said, Unspeakable. I expect to meet her downtown this afternoon, and we go to tawking about some mutual friends who happen to be dubble face people with but a single chaws, and that's themselfs. Blanch and I combined in agreeing that there are too many hipocritical people in the world, especially womnin who say one thing behind a person and see dont say a werd and have a thousand hidden meenings, and for both sakes it would be far better if everybody spoke rite out and said what they meant with no double nefarious or ulterior ambiguities, ma said.

But what would happen to diplomacy? pop said, and ma said, There's far too much so called diplomacy, let's have a little truth for a change. That's just what I said to Blanche Hipple and I gave her a personal example by way of an illustration. I pointed out to her that she is constantly absent minded when she plays bridge, and yet all her so called frends allow themselfs to suffer at her hands and never dream of doing her the kindness of telling her of her fault so she can correct it for her own benefit, ma said.

Did she take it kindly? pop said, and ma said, She pretended to, in fact she even smiled one of the fakest smiles I ever smountered and in the next breath started in bribe advantage of the occasion to claim that when it comes to bridge, I am the worst loser on land or sea, in other words she gave me a gratuitous insult and a cheer sky. What a disposition. I wouldn't be like her for all the king's horses, ma said. Is there anything funny? she said.

Cant I cawff? pop said.

And he got behind the sporting page and stayed there.

THE LOVE FLIGHT

by Jeanne Dixon

CHAPTER TEN

Carl shook his head, bent over the wheel and made a bee line through the army of switches and other mechanical devices. "You'll have to speak to Madame, sir. The car is out of control. I do it if I can get it to town myself. Something wrong with the gear shift and the brakes. That's going to go—but the parts to repair it."

Dolph's face darkened.

"It's a wonder you fellows would not keep your cars rolling," he muttered. "Bring out another one and I'll take Pitt in that."

Very stiffly Anne circled the blue car, pulled open the door and slid into the seat beside Carl.

"I can't wait, really, Mr. Hoag," she said. "I have work to do, and Madame has asked me to do it in the least possible time. If the car will start, Carl can drive on at once. I promised Madame she should have the gowns by noon."

There was a grinding of gears, a sputter and puffing, a staccato of backfiring like the crack of guns and the blue car moved forward, braking bronco fashion. It continued these strange antics until it was out of sight of Dolph and Pitt. It settled into an easy drooling glide.

"I was terrified, afraid you could not start it," Anne said with a sigh of relief.

"It's fit as a fiddle." Carl's jaw jutted. "I had it put on that western act to annoy Dolph. He's discovered you already, I see."

"He came into Madame's boudoir while she was giving me orders for the day. Oh, Carl, he's horrid! Geese and horrid. I'll bet he's a glutton, too."

"It never was than one. I'm afraid we're running into tough weather, Anne. I could see he had his front on the brain for which he looked at you. Dolph will be up to his old tricks, and I'll have to drive him back into the pen."

"No, no. You've got to promise you'll not get into anything like that," Anne begged. "Trouble—Carl might lose his job. Dolph will be back soon. Why couldn't she go on, quietly, without him? Is Bala west? Why must she be stirring up trouble with strife? She'd have to stop it, now. She would stop it; you'll see. I look after myself, Carl. I'd rather."

"Can't have a bird with the clipped wings? I wonder." His eyes on her lips were a caress.

"Why do you call me bird with the clipped wings?"

"Must I answer?"

"Absolutely. The truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

He drew her hand under his on the wheel.

"Because," he said, "the first time I saw you, you were like a very lovely bird. They fluttered like flapping around a cage without any chance or where you would light."

"And the clipped wings!"

"I've a very good notion you would not go without before you were frightened and began chirping. And then you would begin to grow a new set of flying feathers."

Anne finished her shopping in Chester's. Three more stops and she would be on Carl, waiting with her in the blue car at the end of the street. Mr. Beasley, Anne impressed upon the saleswoman, the importance of prompt delivery.

"Not later than twelve o'clock sharp," she was saying when a pair of arms fell around her from behind and a laughing voice cried:

"Annie! I've caught you at last. No use trying to bolt."

"Bee Bee's. Bruno Beasley! If only I hadn't—I was so sure it was the saleswoman. Anne chided her self for having been sad—for a little while longer at least.

"Darling!" Anne was told hitherto. "Now that you're here, the second can get under way. I knew it this morning when I opened your paper."

"Don't try to put me off, darling." Mrs. Bruno was officious. "Maida's in a dither! She's wired you and telephoned and done everything but dash down in person with a company of gendarmes. Those queer people Bruno said you were stopping at the Hoags' and that you're Anne Austin at their fonny old place. You did tell him you were stopping at Bala, that day you ran across the Shore Drive, didn't you?"

"I did and I am." Anne said.

"Then you've got to pack up your trunks at once and come with me. It's perfectly ridiculous, your hiding this way. And who ever heard of the Hoags! Craig gets back from Vichy next week and I'll send them him to dash down and bring some of the others. It's a bit early, but we may as well get a slice of the holidays."

Anne thanked the saleswoman with a firm, "That will be all for today."

DUKE AND DUCHESS ARRIVE IN PARIS

The Duke and Duchess of Kent leaving the Gare d'Orsay after arriving in Paris after terminating their honeymoon cruise. They came from Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, where they had disembarked from the liner Ocana.

small pitchers have big ears, and the ears of the salesmen were pointed to catch every word of this surprising conversation. Madame Rose's maid an intimate friend, a house guest of the Beasleys? The world was certainly turning topsy-turvey.

Anne's eyes, dark with determination, gazed unwinkingly into the tawny eyes of Mrs. Bruno Beasley. The time had come for action. No more evading the issue.

"I'm going to take you into my confidence, Bee Bee," Anne said, "I'm not Anne Austin. At least I'm not the Anne Austin you knew, I'm an entirely different person. But the Anne you new wants to ask you a very great favor. She wants you to forget this new Anne—to put her out of your mind as though she had never existed. Will you do it, Bee Bee? It means so much—everything to the new Anne."

Mrs. Bruno gasped.

"Bee Bee!"

"No bulk, please, Bee Bee." Anne was so serious, Mrs. Bruno's sensational cause at once concentrated as was possible. "It must be yes or no. Once, Bee Bee, you've always been a lamb. Be one now."

"Why—why of course -if there's something I shouldn't know, Suspicion, Mrs. Bruno's mind was racing faster than an engine made for this charming mystery.

Anne smiled wearily. Intrigue, scandal. Meat and red wine to the jaded palate of Anne's old world. She had better spoil the repast now, before others were called in to share the feast.

"Oh, but I want you to know," Anne hastened to explain. "I'm not taking you into my confidence. No one else can. You see I trust you, Bee Bee. You have a heart as well as a head. I'm working at Bois Joli. I employed by Mrs. Adolph Hoag."

"You mean you are—why Anne! How perfectly—well. You simply must! Whatever are you doing? I can't even guess—unless you are companion, the Hoags—socially I mean."

"I said working, darling, not gold-digging," Anne said soberly. "I'm a lady's maid. At least I'm almost a lady's maid. I'm assistant to Mrs. Hoag's personal maid."

"Annie!" Mrs. Bruno seemed about to collapse. "But of course you're hailing me." She recovered herself. "What's the joke? I hite," she added, as Anne shook her head at the end of the cryptic.

Instantly she had spoken Anne knew that she had erred into her voice when she mentioned the chauffeur, a note, a warning she had not meant to be there. And that Mrs. Bruno had caught it. Worse, she could feel a warm flush rising to wave its flag of guilty knowledge to the eyes. She forced a cough to account for the rising color. But Mrs. Bruno was not to be put off so easily.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

"Chauffeur! Anne! Don't tell me you're gone native," Mrs. Beasley said, looking at Anne closely. "Is he handsome?"

"Is who handsome?" Anne said feeling for time. She must be wary. Not overdo affectation of indifference. Already that crazy little head beside her was busy spinning webs of intrigue, of scandal with which to regale ears attuned to the merest whisper of it.

"Your chauffeur, of course. No use denying, darling. I can tell from the way you spoke——"

"Why yes. He is handsome, come to think of it," Anne cut in. "He's not half bad, either, as chauffeurs go. Rather intelligent. Thanks for calling him to my attention. He might be worth cultivating, seeing that I have no chauffeur of my own."

"Why your chauffeur, of course. No use denying, darling. I can tell from the way you spoke——"

"Why yes. He is handsome, come to think of it," Anne cut in. "He's not half bad, either, as chauffeurs go. Rather intelligent. Thanks for calling him to my attention. He might be worth cultivating, seeing that I have no chauffeur of my own."

"Oh, tosh!" impatiently, from Mrs. Bruno. "If you're going to pull the poor fellow in—and from the idea they daily dread—what rubbish! Let somebody else do the work. That's what they're for. It's up to you and me—to keep them busy."

But Anne did not abandon her purpose. Not to confuse Mrs. Bruno to keep her secret from Maida and the others a little longer. Now that things were right with Carl again, she wanted so to go on, to do one thing peacefully, to snatch her few moments of play joyously. If only they would let her alone!

"I must say we've gotten on a fine subject for reunion in Bee Beach," Mrs. Bruno rattled on, "and not a word of explanation either, not even a wee nippy of champagne to ease the shock. I'll thrust the subject behind her with Maida at its distaste. "Do stop being such a dear and tell me, Annie. Bruno's taken a room at the far end of the garage. I'll be near the upstairs bar."

"You are a lamb. Then I'll not skip. I'm afraid I'm terribly late as it is."

That red-headed freak rage you, give her the sack and come with me," Mrs. Bruno wouldn't dare of course. You keep her in her place, naturally—let her under stand that Anne Austin is Anne Austin."

Anne nodded knowingly. She had a vision of herself trying to play Anne Austin to Mrs. Hoag.

"Madame understands many things," she said, enigmatically. "I'm terribly late, and I'm not simply must tear along now. Bee Bee, you'll promise me, really, and meantime just forget you've seen Anne Austin, a dear."

Anne scudded down the street, leaving Mr. Bruno in such a whirl of astonishment, bewilderment, and of thwarted desire for throwing open the windows lately. She could get into her car and ordered the chauffeur to drive to a fashionable club and tell her all the news. But she was weak as water. It would take time to get her self in hand, to plan to convince her she hadn't been hit on the head by a falling star or worse.

Carl Case was waiting to hand Anne into the blue car. She had been fortunate in her shopping this morning. The collections were varied and well chosen so that she had been able to make quick decisions. Madame would be pleased, she was sure. She was a little nervous, Hoag and her dark eyes were fathomless wells in a refined head, but clouds of her troubled thoughts as they swirled and tumbled. Had she really succeeded in wheedling Mrs. Bruno into temporary silence? Would her cousin Maida keep to her rhododendrons and start a row? Did Mrs. Bruno suspect—about Carl? Would Craig Braden find her tempt her again with the glittering of his name his wealth the luxury she had known, tables set with lace, silver exotic foods, wines like rubies and like yellow sunshine—she ate at the servants' table, heard scandals and gardenias and her favorite golden roses with hearts like the dawn. Anne shook her shoulders threw back her head to fling off the nostalgia of dreams.

"World closing in again?" Carl asked. His hand close that his lips would graze her cheek.

"Can I help?"

"Not just now. Later, perhaps." "I'll be waiting."

"I know."

Anne moved——

Reaching Bois Joli, Anne went directly to her room. She would freshen up change into her uniform and hurry to Madame's apartment. She must make room in the gown closets for the new models. Soon, she did not know; the closets were already packed.

She stood before her mirror regarding her left cheek. It looked smooth and cool. Strange that it should look so, considering that it was burning as though a flame had brushed it ever so lightly when departing Carl had turned her head in the car. She laid her hand over the spot. Her fingers, too, were trembling. She was conscious of her heartbeat, a delicious thrill lit her breast. Even if the world did close in, it couldn't squeeze her too painfully, now.

She stopped by Bats' room to inquire if she might go to the gown closets without disturbing Madame. Madame was out, Bats informed her, and it would be quite all right for her to go wedding through the "carpet rags." Anne was in such a flame that would have seared any Anne sitting on a throne, only when summoned. No sound came from within. Cautiously Anne opened the door and stepped inside. She had a feeling she was not alone. Then she smiled and closed the door. Of course she was not alone. The astute Madame living over the rooms like a living, tangible thing. So definite so vital so arresting in word, gesture and action was Madame that even after she had gone from a place a part of her remained, vibrant, in the air.

Anne advanced to the centre of the room and stood there uneasily. Strange that a phantom presence should be so disturbing. Was she acting jittery? She'd had enough to make her nervous lately. She encounter with Mrs. Bruno this morning had not helped. If it were not for Carl——

Click! What was that? A key turning in a lock? What kept Somsons beyond, in the gown room, Madame's bed? It would be like Berta to snoop in Madame's absence.

An instinct sent Anne's eyes fleeing to the tall swinging mirror closet. She could feel her features contract to scream, but no sound came from her throat. Framed in the high nook of right, Adolph Hoag, Jr., stood in front of the door, directly opposite his body swaying unsteadily, his little button eyes blinking unwinkingly as they stood reason image of herself in the mirror.

One minute, that was an eternity of suspended animation before action!

"If I move forward, casually, as though I'd not seen him," Anne ran thought, "I may be able to reach the mirror and ring the bell that summons Bats, before he guesses what I've seen."

Instantly formed, the plan was as instantly abandoned. Those three black buttons of eyes in their inflamed fields of saffron had met her own in the mirror. She was waiting for her to move, to show some sign of fear, of embarrassment for the purpose, whatever it was. That would be his cue for action.

One chance remained. If she could gain the door to the gown room, slam it shut and lock it before his bungling body could block the way, she'd be safe—for now. There were servants' bells in that room too.

But no sooner was it conceived than escape in the direction of the gown rooms was cut off by Dolph himself who in some uncanny way had divined Anne's intention. But one course remained—to use her wits to fend for time.

"Heavens, Mr. Hoag, you did give me a fright!" Anne said turning to face him with a gay laugh and fleeing her stiff lips to a smile. "I came to get a gown at Madame's request. But I disturbed you, I'm sorry. I'll just get the gown—it's there in the closet—and be off to my room."

Anne stepped forward, toward her tormentor, and turned her head slightly. That was to give him the impression she had no fear of him.

"No you don't, baby, none o' that. Guess again." He spread his thick arms wide, shook his stumps of shoulders, and rolled his bullet head that was too small for his bulk.

She must try another tack. Scorn and cold lash him into submission.

"I hope you're not going to be unpleasant Mr. Hoag," she said. Her voice was clear and cold, her chin high, her eyes twin points of flame that would have seared any Anne sitting on a throne, only when summoned. No sound came from within. Cautiously Anne opened the door and stepped inside. She had a feeling she was not alone. Then she smiled and closed the door. Of course she was not alone. ## Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

King George and His Favorite Pastime

KING GEORGE'S favorite sport is shooting and his indigenous in this pastime from early youth has made him one of the four best shots in England.

He'll grouse shooting at Balmoral, tiger hunting in India or deer hunting in Scotland, the King is regarded as a man of rare proficiency with firearms. He is particularly fast on the "draw", and possesses an iron nerve that never fails him.

Once in India, when a wounded tiger charged an elephant on which the King was mounted, he coolly waited until the ferocious beast made a lunge for the mount and then fired, one shot doing the trick. It was a splendid illustration of coolness.

Our pictures today show the King at his favorite sport.

Second only to shooting in the King's favor is yachting; after that he prefers scooter, a game he used to play with some vigor and skill as a midshipman in the navy.

King George has two indoor hobbies, one of which has earned him fame the world over. That is stamp collecting. His stamp collection is only unique watches and clocks. Made up entirely of British Empire issues, the King's stamp collection is said to be worth over $500,000.

One sport that the King has played but in which he never became interested was golf. Only one or two occasions are recorded in which His Majesty chased the elusive pill.

RED INFLUENCE SEEN IN RIOTING AT VANCOUVER

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Ouch, Ouch, April 24. (CP) — Anxiously sought by his parents for two hours, "Bud" Gray was found fast asleep in the kennel with his newly acquired pointer.

Hamilton, April 24 (CP) — Romance has come to Miss Wilhelmina Gansorowsky from a ginger ale bottle and Lake Ontario. A note she threw overboard on a moonlight cruise last July has brought an answer from Charles F. Ward of Wilson, N.Y., who fished the bottle out of the lake this week.

London, Ont., April 24 (CP) — Moving day hasn't meant a thing to Mr. and Mrs. James Arthurs in more than 40 years. Celebrating their 58th wedding anniversary they have lived in the same home for 54 years. Probably Mr. Arthurs had enough of it when he quit making it "home work" for he was a plane mover until his retirement a few years ago.

Montreal, April 24 (CP)—When struck by an automobile which failed to stop when she crossed the street, Theodora Fergel, 16, was instantly killed. Her sister who witnessed the accident is in hospital suffering from nervous shock. Police are searching for the driver.

Montreal, April 24 (CP)—Dancing on Sunday whether it be in a cabaret, night club or a ward labor club is an infraction of the Lord's Day Act, according to a decision of the Court of Appeal court. A labor club invited its members and their wives to dance away their Saturday evening but it lasted into Sunday and resulted in a fine for the club.

Spokane, Wash., April 24 (CP)—Despite a broken leg suffered by Frank Imus for non-payment of city taxes and the story of Imus' long unemployment yesterday, laid a dollar on a table and walked out. Imus was on crutches. "We can't put a man on relief in the chair," said Deputy Sheriff George Harber. "Until the depression hit, he always has been a hard worker."

St. Louis, April 24 (CP)—Marion Kornblum, five, wasn't going to lose all his day's receipts to beadle, so he put $60 in his pockets and hid $235 in his grocery basket.

To men in a car stopped him. They took the $60. "What's in that basket?" one asked.

Just groceries" Kornblet smiled. "Well, we eat, too." They took the basket. The $235 was still in it.

Philadelphia, April 24 (CP) — Addition of a "secretary of fine arts," to the cabinet of the United States was proposed at the opening of the biennial convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs and the American Music Festival.

Warton, Ont., April 24 (CP)— He didn't want to appear a sissy before his pals, so Jimmy Hall, five, did explained to his father after his first day at school. When the teacher asked him where he was born it would have been dangerous to admit it was in a women's hospital. He thought fast and the answer came: "In the Maple Leaf Gardens."

READY FOR HOP ON SHORT NOTICE

Further Flights to Follow Successful Hop to Honolulu

Alameda, Calif., April 24—(AP)—Ready for another hop on short notice, members of the crew of the Pan-American Clipper awaited completion of the first return trip air cruise between California and Hawaii.

Further flights to Honolulu are contemplated by company officials to further additional data for the projected establishment of regular commercial flight schedules later this year.

Completion of the return 2,400-mile flight from Hawaii yesterday afternoon in 20 hours and 59 minutes was hailed as definitely establishing the commercial feasibility of the trans-Pacific service which ultimately will follow an 8,000-mile route from the Pacific coast to the orient.

McGEER BLAMES VANCOUVER RIOT ON COMMUNISTS

Subversive Organization Held Up as Cause of Strife

REDS NOT WANTED

Threat of New Disturbances Develops in Vancouver

Vancouver, April 24—(CP)—Threats of new disturbances developed in Vancouver today as a sequel to violence between police and striking relief camp workers last night, when the riot act was read by Mayor G. G. McGeer and a mob of 2,000 dispersed.

Order today police for the second time within 12 hours were called upon to break up a gathering of strikers. Two men were injured in the clash and additional arrests were made. Quiet was restored within half an hour.

Sixteen men and a youth of juvenile age, the latter also from a relief camp, are under arrest. Six police and an unstated number of strikers were injured, none seriously. Two strikers were treated in hospital for head gashes.

Reds Blamed

Vancouver has been warned by Mayor G. G. McGeer, "there is a definite organization of communistic activities which is centring on calling a general strike in Vancouver. He has forbidden further parades or disturbances.

Ottawa, April 24.—(CP)—There is reason to believe that the majority of the men who left the unemployment relief camps in British Columbia to associate themselves with those who have invaded Vancouver, did so under communistic influence, organizations, defence department officials said today. Communistic propaganda had been ripe in the camps for some months, they said, radicals exploiting the men's discontent.

Instructions had been issued to the camp authorities that all men who were known to have good records might return if they wished. The known Reds, however, were not welcome.

WHERE THOUSANDS DIED IN FORMOSA EARTHQUAKE

Death, disease and suffering followed in wake of terrific earthquake in Japanese-owned Island of Formosa. It is estimated that more than 3,000 were killed, and 15,000 injured, while at least 250,000 were rendered homeless by the eruption. Canadian missionaries resident on the island are reported safe. Illustrations at TOP are scenes from city of Taihoku showing street scenes and industrial life. Canadian missionaries in south Formosa are shown below, LEFT to RIGHT: Rev. Duncan MacLeod, Miss Greta Gould, Miss Marjory McKay (Toronto), Rev. Wm. Gauld, Mrs. D. F. Marshall, Mr. Marshall, and Dr. and Mrs. G. Gushue-Taylor, of Stratford. The latter two are in charge of Presbyterian Medical College. Also shown is the seismic seismograph at Taihoku.

DR. S. SILCOX OF STRATFORD, PREXY

Important Reforms in Provincial School System Promised

TORONTO, April 24.—(CP)—The 74th annual Convention of the Ontario Educational Association went into its second day here with a new president, Dr. S. Silcox of the Stratford Normal School, and the promise of important reforms in the Provincial School System from Duncan MacArthur, Deputy Minister of Education.

In addition, the 1,500 or more delegates yesterday and last night heard addresses on various aspects of educational administration by a host of Ontario's leaders in the field, including such nationally known figures as Hon. Vincent Massey and Canon H. J. Cody, president of University of Toronto.

Mr. MacArthur announced that a minimum salary of $500 annually for rural school teachers would be established by Legislation.

He further stated that within the next month a commission would be appointed by the Government to make a thorough investigation of means of refinancing and reorganizing the Ontario School System; and legislation would be based upon their findings.

Following this announcement, the executive of the Separate School Trustees Association of the Association passed a resolution demanding that they be represented on any commission appointed to study the financial structure of the school system.

"Education is concerned with the whole of life, not only with the means of earning a livelihood, but with the art of living," said Mr. MacArthur, "the Canadian heritage to the United States.

Canon Cody, in an address of welcome at Convocation Hall last night, stressed the establishment of a chair in Geography at the University to be filled by an outstanding Geographer, who would put himself at the disposal of the Department of Education and of the teachers. Canon Cody did not reveal the name of the professor, who will occupy the chair, but announcements for him to come here have now been received.

REFUSED LEAVE TO APPEAL

Ottawa, April 24 (CP) — Joseph Alsero, under sentence to die in Montreal on May 3 for the "rumble seat" murder of Graziella Viens, today was refused leave to appeal against conviction in a judgment handed down by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The woman met her death last May. Alsero was arrested shortly afterwards and found guilty of murder by the Montreal courts.

Music May Help to Bring World Back to Sanity Says Supervisor

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—Music may yet help to bring the world back to sanity, G. Roy Fenwick of Hamilton, President, told the music section of the Ontario Education Association in convention today.

"They tried force in the Great War," he said. "It failed. They have tried Fascism and Communism. They don't seem to be getting us anywhere. Now perhaps they may try the heart." Mr. Fenwick is music supervisor in Hamilton schools.

Music is no longer regarded as a frill, he said, and to meet the increasing demand for it in schools, the Ontario Minister of Education has intimated the subject may be made compulsory.

PLAZA BUILDING IRELAND, BURNS

Drum From Which Counterfoils Are Drawn, Destroyed

Dublin, April 24.—(CP Cable)—The Plaza Building where prizes are drawn in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes was swept today by fire rumored to be of incendiary, origin. None of the 300 young women employed in the building was at work at the time. Many of them later joined the throng of spectators and wept as the walls of the blazing structure collapsed with tremendous roar.

The elaborately decorated drum from which the counterfoils are taken in the sweepstakes drawn was found in the debris, a mass of twisted steel.

The building, of frame and brick construction, was owned by the Societat (Irish Free State) Government and contained the sweepstakes records.

Work has been in full swing in the Plaza recently in preparation for the Derby draw. An official said there were no Derby counterfoils in the building, but that some sweepstakes records were destroyed.

CONSOLIDATION SCHOOLS COME UNDER ATTACK

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—A warning to the Ontario Government to think twice before forcing consolidation of township schools on the province, was issued today at the Rural Trustees' Section of the Ontario Education Association by W. M. Warren of Renfrew.

He was applauded by delegates when he added he hadn't been a single farmer who approved of consolidation.

WHEAT CLEARANCES

Ottawa, April 24 (CP)—Export clearances of wheat during the week ended April 19 amounted to 2,148,960 bushels compared with 2,371,468 the previous week, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today. During the corresponding week last year 1,407,596 bushels were exported.

Aged Sisters Lived in Seclusion For 20 Years

Baltimore, Md., April 24 (AP)—Two octogenarian sisters, who died as they had lived for more than 20 years—together and in the utmost seclusion—were found today on scanty makeshift pallets in their squalid room.

Coroner John M. Fenlon, gave a verdict of death from apoplexy for Kate. Josephine, who lay at her feet from her sister, died of pneumonia, he said.

BAR SILVER HIGHER, EXCEEDS U.S. PRICE

New York, April 24—(AP)— Bar silver in world markets pushed above the United States Treasury price to domestic mines today, but New York Street took look for an early announcement of an advance in the treasury's price.

The New York, foreign silver for commercial use rose 1 3-4 cents to 47 1-4 cents an ounce, compared with the treasury price fixed a fraction slight ago of 71.11 cents. This follows a rise in London and the enrichment of 71.67 cents. In both London and New York the metal reached the highest levels in 10 years.

KINGSVILLE'S MAYOR DIES

Kingsville, Ont., April 24 (CP)—Funeral will be held here tomorrow of James Henry Sweet, Kingsville's first mayor, who died Monday within one hour of his 87th birthday. A blacksmith by trade, Mr. Sweet was born in Bowmanville.

DREAM COMES TRUE AS CHILD DROWNS

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, April 24.—(CP Cable)—Escott Downes dreamed he was a murderer in connection with the death of Willis Keith Baldwin, 78, former Liberal member of parliament and prominent in business and lumbering circles in the Eastern Townships of Quebec.

Interrupted as the coroner and witnesses might unravel the double funeral of Mr. Baldwin and his wife who died at Richmond, Va., while enroute home from Daytona, where she had been critically ill, a coroner's inquest was started here by Lucien "Red" Morin of Barnston, Que., and Kenneth Brown of Compton, Vt. criminally responsible for Mr. Baldwin's death. Warrants charging murder were then signed by Coroner Leonidas Bachand of Sherbrooke.

Morin testified at length during the inquest, he had been drawn well in the Windsor Penitentiary, where they worked in a cobbler's shop, he said.

BOY OBEYS MOTHER AND IS BADLY HURT

TORONTO, April 24 — (CP) — Spanked and sent onto the verandah for playing in the street, Richard Green, four, was seriously injured when the rim and tire of a car came off and struck him as he sat on the steps of his home here.

PHONE EXCHANGE IS DESTROYED

Other Buildings Saved By Efforts of Brockville Brigade

Brockville, Ont., April 24—(CP)— Fire at North Augusta, totally destroyed the central exchange building of the Leeds and Grenville Independent Telephone Company last night and damaged an adjoining structure. Loss is placed at $5,000.

It was prevented from making further headway through services rendered by a detachment of Brockville fire brigade, which used a pumper to draw water from a nearby creek in the absence of any village fire equipment.

The fire broke out in the telephone building, a two-storey frame structure, the roof of which collapsed. Another two-storey frame building adjoining was damaged.

PRISON FRIENDS HELD FOR MURDER

Coroner's Inquest Hold Men Responsible For Baldwin's Death

Coaticook, Que., April 24.—(CP)—Two young men who became acquainted with each other in the Windsor, Vermont, Penitentiary, today were charged with murder in connection with the death of Willis Keith Baldwin, 78, former Liberal member of parliament and prominent in business and lumbering circles in the Eastern Townships of Quebec.

Interrupted as the coroner and witnesses might unravel the double funeral of Mr. Baldwin and his wife who died at Richmond, Va., while enroute home from Daytona, where she had been critically ill, a coroner's inquest was started here by Lucien "Red" Morin of Barnston, Que., and Kenneth Brown of Compton, Vt. criminally responsible for Mr. Baldwin's death. Warrants charging murder were then signed by Coroner Leonidas Bachand of Sherbrooke.

Morin testified at length during the inquest, he had been drawn well in the Windsor Penitentiary, where they worked in a cobbler's shop, he said.

FAVORITE WINS CITY-SUBURBAN

Montrose Owned By Lord Woolavington Pays 7 to 2

Epsom Downs, April 24—(CP Cable)—Lord Woolavington's Montrose, the favorite, won the city and suburban, great spring handicap, this afternoon with A. Savile's British Quota second and Sir Abe Bailey's Lost Soul third in the field of 6.

Montrose,—starting at shortened odds of 7 to 2, was an easy winner by two lengths. British Quota, at 100 to 6, came in a half a length in front of Lost Soul, 20 to 1.

The distance was 1 1-4 miles.

The winner carried 125 pounds compared to top weight of 133 for Colonsaeter, an also-ran. British Quota packed 109 pounds and Lost Soul 104 pounds.

It was the 85th renewal of the famous race, worth approximately $10,000 to the winner.

Montrose, a five-year-old chestnut by Foxcatch out of sealaire, was fourth in the event a year ago.

TRADERS GATHER BUT BOARD ROOM IS NOT OPENED

Postponed Until Legal Problems Have Been Clarified

TRADING RESTRICTED

Action Taken After an Injunction Given To Firm

Chicago, April 24.—(AP)—Opening of the Board of Trade was postponed today pending clarification of certain legal problems arising from action of the Rosenbaum Grain Corporation in seeking reorganization under the amended Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Announcement of the postponement was made as traders gathered about the pits for the opening gong.

In a statement signed by Fred C. Clutton, secretary, the Board said in view of the fact a consent order was issued yesterday restraining the Board from taking certain action in connection with existing trades the opening was postponed until a time to be designated by the director pending clarification of certain legal problems now being argued before the courts."

Granted Injunction

Other principal grain exchanges were notified of the action.

The Rosenbaum Grain Corporation, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the country, was granted an injunction by Federal Judge W. H. Holly restraining the Board of Trade and the Board of Trade clearing Corporation from interfering with the company's membership.

The injunction granted, after a prolonged special session the night before, was intended to keep the brokerage houses for the exchange to petition to have the injunction set aside.

Attorneys for the Board of Trade and the Rosenbaum Grain Corporation conferred in Judge Holly's Chambers. According to trade advices it was mutually agreed all trades of the grain firm will be closed out as of today. No further trading will be done under the name of the Rosenbaum Grain Corporation until reorganization was finally effected it was understood. The question of suspension of the Corporation from the Board of Trade was not passed upon by the Court.

DIONNES' DOCTOR SAYS BABIES FINE

Dr. G. W. Smith, North Bay, Examines Quints Today

Callander, Ont., April 24 (CP)— Dr. G. W. Smith, North Bay physician chosen by the parents, today inspected the Dionne quintuplets and announced they were all wonderfully recovering from head colds. He was in consultation with Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, physician to the babes, and in his statement, commended the splendid care given to the infants.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, living 100 yards distant from the hospital in which the children were examined, were invited to be present during Dr. Smith's examination but did not appear. When Dr. Smith arrived, a man was despatched to the Dionne home to bring the parents to see him.

Today, Marie, still the sickest of the quintuplets, began to show signs to register a weight gain. She added 10 ounces to the rest of the 10-months-37-days-old children's recorded losses when placed on the scales by the nurses. Cecile, Yvonne, Cecile and Emilie were again placed on the verands in the clear sunlight but Baby Marie was kept inside.

In statement following an examination of the babes at the request of the parents, Dr. Smith reported the quintuplets were recovering from head colds during the past few days and were improving satisfactorily.

Barber Shoots Man, Both Legs Penetrated

Montreal, April 24—(CP)— Shot through both legs as he was leaving a drug store early this morning, Albert Dion, 25, is in the hospital under guard on charge of theft with breaking and entering.

Pierre Couture, a barber, told police he saw a man leaving the drug store and when he failed to obey a command to halt, he opened fire at his legs, bringing him down.

FAMILY MAROONED IN TOP OF TREE ALONG ATHABASCA

Livestock and Bridges Swept Away By Swollen River

HUGE ICE CAKES

River in Alberta Rises 12 Feet Above High Water Mark

Whitecourt, Alta., April 24 —(CP)—Swollen rushing waters of the Athabaska river are twelve feet above the high water mark and farmers in this inundated lower Athabaska valley have been driven to higher ground, losing, it is feared, much livestock and buildings.

Bridges have been swept away by the flood, and fences have been leveled by the huge cakes of ice swept along at high speed by the rushing waters.

The farm of H. Merrifield is completely under water and two members of the family were marooned for a short time in a tree.

TRANSPORT UPSETS CARS ARE DAMAGED

Three new automobiles, being transported to Ottawa on a transport, were badly damaged, when the entire load turned over in the north ditch on highway No. 2 about seven miles east of Napanee on Monday night. Frank Gaskin of Ottawa in charge of the large transport, was driving and Provincial Traffic Officer Sam Irvine, who investigated, that apparently the vehicle skidded on the soft shoulder. The three new automobiles proved top-heavy for the conveyor toppled over, when the load into the ditch. No person was injured during the accident, but the new cars were damaged to the amount of over $1,000. Insurance is carried by the proprietors of the conveying company. The accident attracted considerable attention of passing motorists especially, when the vehicles were being reloaded.

MANY RESIDENTS GARDEN CONSCIOUS

Residents of the city, more garden conscious this year than ever before, probably set a record this season for acreage of garden plots being worked and amount of seed sown, it was reported today by local seed and grain dealers, now experiencing one of the busiest seasons on record. "Judging by the amount of garden seed I've sold so far this year, every second householder will have a backyard garden at the rear of his house this year" commented one grain dealer. Staple vegetables are the standby of the majority of the amateur gardeners.

SUCKER FISHING POOREST IN YEARS

Dozens of amateur fishermen, patiently whipping the Moira River with their hook-laden fish line during the past week or so report their catch of suckers this year smaller than ever before. The unprecedented low water level of the river at the present time has resulted in a lack of fish and few being taken.

TIMBER WOLF SHOT IN McCLURE TWP.

Patiently tracking the animal after having been tempted heartily on a few occasions some time previously, Ernest Hall and Ross Cox of this city few so far shot in this county, fell a victim to the rifle of Geo. Saunders, Portland, Ontario, on Saturday this week. The pet of the animal, affectionately known as Rover, was the property of the Saunders family and county treasurer has been sent to Toronto for the regular bounty.

GULL CAPTURES SUCKER IN RIVER

A large gull, one of the many that soar silently above the river, feeding on the scrape of refuse bones, bones and entrails brought in each morning on a plump sucker, after a ten minute victorious battle with the fish, which had attempted on the sucker in a shallow pool at the lower end of the Moira, the bird tried vainly to carry the fish to a secure place. Pulling in this the gull dragged the sucker to shallow water, where, joined by his fellow birds he is busily at an accompaniment of raucous screams of the birds.

PASSOVER FEAST ENDS THURSDAY

Period Means of Consecrating Jewish Home to God

Jews throughout the world will end the feast of Passover Thursday evening at sundown after observing the holy period since April 17 in appropriate and time-honored services.

Special services during the week this evening services will be held with Rabbi Gertzel in charge. The ceremony observed will be the usual rite for the occasion.

Tomorrow evening Jewry of Belleville and district will assemble, marking the end of the period devoted to the observance of the spring festival. The festival of the Pesach is employed by the Jewish people as a means of consecrating the Jewish home to God who is the redeemer and protector of Israel. The story of the deliverance of their forefathers from bondage and servitude of the providential guidance and gives them confidence in their final redemption from oppression.

POLICE COURT

Three arrests were made by the local police last night, all being charged with intoxication. A transient giving his name as John Murphy, no address, was found staggering on Front street. He had previously been warned to get out of town by the authorities, after having been panhandling on Front Street yesterday afternoon. He appeared before Magistrate F. J. Butler, K.C., today a ten day jail sentence was meted out and he gaily had time to be incarcerated. Two other local residents faced similar charges.

An Ottawa lady complained to the police the loss of her travelling case from her parked car on Bridge Street. The lady believed the case to have been removed during her absence in a local restaurant. A reward for the return of the case has been advertised in today's issue.

Five motorists found police stickers on the windshields of their automobiles this morning after having parked in the downtown area. Police court action may follow this continued infraction of the city by-law.

Frances was looking very swish in the new fall fashions as she took a set of channels luggage when we met her shopping on Bridge street this afternoon.....Whence all the prosperity?.....Well, we were talking of names.....Well, brother, let's not, said Angus. Anyway, I'm glad to see good old watch chain not yet supplied with a wristlet.....Well, I'm glad to greet Aunt Maud, whatever, and to get the suit.....and as for the accessories.....Well, let's not go into the details, but the answer to it all is Angus McFee's old gold plan.....It's rummaged through the attic trunks .....and there are many kinds of jewelry that no one wanted or can now remember.....Well, why pay for new stuff.....Well, why buy new if no real money for it.....And here I am.....So if like Frances you want to be all dressed up and going places and doing things, you'll find Angus McFee's jewelry chain in the attic.....The current form of gold is the most in the highest in history and you can feel reasonably sure that the old jewelry you have lying around the house will be worth a fair amount. Turn it into cash value immediately..... If you do not want to wear your jewelry sell by registered mail.....Angus McFee.....Or if like Frances you want to become.....but will hold your gold for you and pay you back the full value in quite satisfied with the amount.

YOUTHS WANT JOB BUT NOT ON FARM

Like Highway Work on Account of Shorter Hours

"Say, young fellow—want a job?" A resident of Belleville yesterday who drew his pacing flivver up to the curb in front of the city hall this morning, leaned out of his vehicle and accosted a local youth, who stood on the curb in the warm shadow of the building.

"What's the wages?" countered the youth in diplomatic fashion as he surveyed the prospective employer.

"I want a kind of a handy man around the place for the next four or five months. He don't have to milk or anything like that, and he doesn't need to be experienced. I'm willing to pay him $15 a month for a start. If he's worth a little more, I'll give it to him."

"I don't want the job, Mister. If do go out I'll lose my chance on the highway. And if I don't get a steady job in a month I might get something else that's better." The youth was not a second group some distance along the street. "Try some of them up there, Mister," he invited.

The Thurlow resident stepped on the starter, backed the motor into action and approaching the second group. Again the same invitation was offered. Then over to the Post Farm work at this season of the year was not popular with Belleville youth.

Later the same farmer called at the Labor Bureau. Information Bureau, Although names have been posted of those willing to take such work, no man were immediately available.

"Frankly, some of these men don't want work on the farm. Particular" commented Superintendent Sine.....Superintendent James C. Ross.

questioned. "Some of them could get employment, but they don't want steady work, but they don't seem interested, even though they've been without work for weeks. We've placed quite a few of them since the season opened, but there's always a certain percentage who'll not stay with the job. They prefer to the highway than the farm any day."

Wages, it was learned, up to $20 a month have been offered likely looking workers, but the majority of local men are fighting shy of the offers made to them. Work on farms throughout the district.

PETERBORO LADS HAD SHORT TRIP

Seeing the World From Atop a Freight Not All Fun

Striking out to conquer the world and carve their names high on the hill of fame, two tender-aged Peterboro lads had their plans abruptly stopped in the bud, when they ran afowl of the C.N.R. officials in the local Canadian National yards late Saturday and subsequently found themselves looking at the world through bars from bars at the local police station.

The lads giving their names as James Woodcock, age 13 of 324 Union St., and Joseph Primeau, age 13 of 311 King St., Peterboro were first caught embarking from the Peterboro-Belleville night local and later followed down to the local yards of the C.N.R. yards at 11.30 p.m. last night by Special C.N.R. Officer R. Booth. At first the boys refused to divulge their identity, but upon being taken over to the city police they related their story of adventure.

The boys feeling the call of the great out-of-doors and springtime, decided to see Canada from the top of a freight train. The lads enjoyed themselves until suddenly, when they decided to launch on their great journey of adventure. They scrambled aboard a moving freight train standing in the Peterboro yards and rode inside of a car and until the train stopped just north of the Belleville station. Deciding themworlds to conquer the lads clambered from their hiding place, right into the arms of a Canadian Police.

This morning the Peterboro police were notified of the incident and the lads' parents are being sent to Belleville to take home two quite embarrassed lads. They were also put to work sweeping out the cell block at the local police station today, the lads thoroughly did their chores and were heard whistling and singing to their heart's content, little concerned with their surroundings.

Letters to the Sports Editor

"Sports' Editor,
"Ontario Intelligencer,
"Dear Sir,—In our little strong man reminder of the O.H.E. Marathon Swims Tom "Tarzan" Pedder a real swimmer or not? I say he is one of the best. Saturday he was up at Cannifton and as I was sitting by the dam he came up to me and said "Would you like to swim over with me Mac?" I looked up and it was Tom. "Going swimming?" I asked him.

"Yeah I think I'll take a dip, I have a course measured up here."

He then explained his course to me and told me the distances and said he'd like to see how much he could do in this water at a temperature of forty degrees.

"He asked me if I had a watch I told him I had.

"Well keep my time from when I dive in until I come out."

He then took his undress and soon he stepped forward displaying his well developed body and well muscled and he sure looked powerful. He then stepped on the edge of the dam and put his toe into the water. "It's pretty cold isn't it," he said.

"He stood looking at the water for a while then said, "Oh, you ready", I did and he dove into that icy cold river and for a few minutes I watched his head bobbing up to the surface gasping, he treading water. I was surprised, I expected him to come out after a short sprint, but he continued on and on and on and on, and, I followed him up and down his course. He was swimming as if he were out on his old crawl stroke that Johnnie Weissmuller, Buster Crabbe and his fiancee Jean Harlow made the foam fly. He did a half a mile and I asked him to come out, very politely he said I can do another half, I think".

"How are you feeling?" I asked.

"I'm near frozen", he said, but he went back to his task and finished a full mile before leaving the edge of the water and believe it or not he did this distance in 35 minutes and 50 seconds. I asked him what his time was in Toronto. Oakes and Nelson would be hard to beat and he said that "Buster" Crabbe would be right up there no matter how far the swim was and that Crabbe would be hard to beat in early stages.

I personally think that Tommy Pedder will be right up there too. He is built right in for it, strong enough to show that he has the real ability. Don't forget that in Peterboro first pro race at Lakefield he was 7th out of the world's best swimmers and in the 1934 race after which he completed almost eight miles and had to be taken out suffering from stomach cramps. He didn't even know he had been taken out until he was in the hospital tent. The kid had come up from Peterboro to watch place before cramps forced him out. I saw that swim and I also saw Tommy Pedder the beautiful and after being taken out. He was in the swim but he said he didn't have any intentions of doing anything like that except the swimmers he came out early. This kid has the goods, just watch him this year if he doesn't get a break and I'm sure you'll see a real swimmer out there battling called Tommy "Tarzan" Pedder.

Yours truly,
"J. B."
("Eyewitness").

"P.S.—There has been a rumor about that Pedder would swim a race with Crabbe in Los Angeles California at the C.N.E. but Tommy says he has heard the rumor but does not know anything about it."

ZEEBRUGGE DAY TO BE HONORED

Imperial Club Members to Hold Social Evening

In all the annals of Britain's naval history no more gallant action was ever fought than that heroic and glorious episode at Zeebrugge on April 22-23, George's Day, 1918. The signal "St. George for England" flashed before the attack from Sir Roger Keyes' flagship and the reply of Captain Alfred Carpenter, V.C. "Yes, and may we give the dragon's tail a damned good twist," will rank in the pages of the history of the Royal Navy with Nelson's famous signal before Trafalgar.

With the passing of another anniversary of that immortal day, men and women of the British Empire wherever they may be, gather to remember the gallant lads of the Zeebrugge Raid. The Imperial Club of Belleville to commemorate the anniversary the Belleville Empire lads' Club is holding a social evening at the Armouries on Thursday next, April 25th. Members and their wives will be hosts to the ex-service ladies and ex-members of the Club when they will celebrate the anniversary of the battle of Zeebrugge Harbour. The Belleville Imperial Club also mark the occasion of "Anzac Day" on the same date as Zeebrugge Day, a former resident of Australia will be in attendance.

Safety Campaign To be Inaugurated By Kiwanis Club

"It is not the unemployment problem, it is the unemployment problem in the world but the problem of the unemployable class", said Col. Jacobs of the Salvation Army, when he addressed the local Kiwanis Club luncheon on Tuesday, at the Queen's Hotel. Col. Jacobs has spent fifty-six years of active service in the army and out recount many incidents in is life, he being an intimate friend of the founder of the organization.

There was a large attendance of the members turned out, presided over by Cliff Harrager, the president and the latest member was Ken Mumford, one, when Charlie Bolton was introduced as a member by Frank Domenico and initiated into the club by the president. Albert Boynton, as inner guard, and Director, Don Bray as song leader had their duties to perform in the ceremony.

Harry Pirie, one of the newer members of the club, on the occasion of the day, explaining the benefits of casualty insurance and explaining the benefits to be derived from insuring the responsibility of drivers of automobiles in the event of mishaps, the speaker advising, that car owners should carry this insurance for protection. Jack McIntosh and Frank Polzwil bagging birthdays were presented with gifts and Polzwil were winners of the prizes donated by Jack McIntosh.

George Lee, chairman of the sports committee reminded the members that the annual show on Friday night and asked them to get their tickets and sell their friends and turn out to assist in the work. Jack McIntosh explained that it was the best ever to be given in this city and if funds were to be raised for the various needs of the four miles west of the city and one, four miles east, still best the crest of the Kiwanis Club and also a warning to drive safely and carefully through the city. Safety drive signs will be placing in the city for the guidance of motorists motorists. Speakers from the Department of Highways will be guest speakers at the Club on Tuesday next and will also visit the schools. It is the intention of the Club to inaugurate a safety in driving and the members will distribute the same about the city. This is a worthwhile effort and will help to cut down serious and minor accidents in the city.

The speaker of the day introduced by Captain A. W. Chapman, told his listeners of the work done by the Salvation Army in rehabilitating the unemployable class in London, this being the work of Col. Jacobs for many years. His address was most interesting and instructive and usefulness in the world. Many of those men had previously held responsible positions but through taking the downgrade in life, but some, who had been brought back from the abyss were holding positions of trust and doing good work. Jacobs said "that agitators were given short shift in the scheme and every man had to work and work hard and that the material, physical and spiritual needs were unconditionally to." The speaker was pelased for his address by Joe Smith. Dr. Reuben Sed, that the Army was doing a splendid work, that, was being done by the Salvation Army.

To Mark the Spot With Beauty Forever

The passing of a loved one leaves but one last opportunity of service —to mark the couch of eternal sleep with a memorial of everlasting beauty.

Memorials, hewn from selected blocks of granite, the stone imperishable, shaped and finished by master craftsmen, are the highest expression of memorial art. Rose are exquisitely carved. Others are beautifully simple. And, whether the resting place be a family plot, a single or the cool shadows of an ancient tree, they add the utmost in quiet dignity and perfect taste.

Of all memorial materials, granite is most important to the discerning. It will not fade or disintegrate as will some softer materials used for memorials. Centuries of sleet or rain will not alter them. Centuries of bitter cold or burning heat will not set up deterioration.

The large number of monuments placed in this cemetery show to what appreciation our readers in this city hold the work of A. C. Campbell, whose offices and display rooms are located at 21 Bridge street west. Their unusual quality and real beauty of design stand as examples of this firm's expert workmanship and designing. They are the administration of all who see them.

This firm handles the selected domestic and imported grades of granite and marble and always desiring to choose a memorial for their loved departed should consult them.

It is a pleasure for us to point to A. C. Campbell, as one of the leading memorial enterprises in Canada, and to set forth these statements as of transacting business with this organization. Honorable methods are upheld into each memorial tablet.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF MRS. FRANCIS

Well Known Prince Edward Resident Passes

Picton, April 24—On Saturday afternoon, April 20th, the funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Francis, widow of the late George Francis, who passed away Thursday, April 18th, was attended by a large gathering of relatives, friends and neighbours, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Clarence Butler, Queen Street. Rural Dean C. C. Winter took as his text "I Believe in the resurrection of the Dead and the life in World to Come." He spoke feelingly of the many good and endearing qualities of the deceased, whom he referred to as a "loving, quiet, unassuming servant of God." He referred to her work in the Anglican Church, as a member of the Guild, and to her devotion to all the affairs of the church. Beautiful flowers testified to the love and esteem in which the deceased was held.

Surving are eight children, a ninth child, Walter, having been drowned many years ago. These are Mrs. Geo. Webber, Kilchener; Mrs. Fred Hayhoe, Calgary; Mrs. Clarence Butler, Picton; George in the West; James of Nespanee; Edward, Charles and Arthur of Picton.

They were all present at the funeral with the exception of Mrs. Hayhoe and George Francis.

Mrs. Francis was born and married in the Old Country coming with her husband, when a young woman to Canada. The family home was at Bath, for a number of years then for ten years at Adolphustown. For the past twenty-five years Mrs. Francis has lived in Picton where she had a very large circle of friends, because of her cheerful disposition, spirit and kindliness. She was seventy-six years of age and had been in failing health for some weeks. The pall bearers were George Cerman, Elphael Pedlar, Arthur Dawe, Fred Fournia, Nelson Baille and Mr. Powers. Interment was made in Glenwood cemetery.

Coleman Waye

The death occurred in Toronto on Friday April the 19th, of a former well known resident of Picton in the person of Coleman Waye.

For many years Mr. Waye resided on Elizabeth Street, Picton, and later on the Bloomfield Road. Surviving are his wife, before her marriage a Miss Martin of Picton, and one son Percy Waye of Toronto.

The funeral service was held in Glenwood Chapel, Picton on Monday afternoon at 2 p.m. and interment was made in Glenwood cemetery.

Miss Margery Dodds of Toronto, spent the week-end with her parents Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Dodds, Cherry Valley.

Joy Ride in Snow Mobile Causes Death of Two

Cranberry Portage, Man., April 23 (CP)—A joy ride in a snow mobile ended in nearly Lake Athapapuskow ended in death for J. T. Mosier 45, and his nine-year-old daughter, Marie.

The two left for a spin over the ice-covered lake early yesterday, it was learned today, and the machine crashed through the ice. A lumber camp employee found the bodies in six feet of water.

CARELESSNESS is TOO COSTLY!

PASSING on a hill is just one form of haste . . . that craving to drive too fast . . . which is altogether too prevalent in Ontario.

The appalling number of motor accidents in this province means a drastic check-up on reckless drivers. Public sentiment, speaking through the courts, will be increasingly severe towards unreasonable, thoughtless motorists.

You know what you should do. How you should drive. So, for your own safety and that of others, drive carefully!

CANADA'S GIFT

Canada's gift to His Majesty King George on his silver jubilee is a gold box which will be presented on May 8th. It measures eighteen by fourteen inches by three inches deep. In the centre of the cover is a presentation plaque surrounded by hand-engraved coats of arms of the nine provinces with the coat of arms of the Dominion below the plaque. The border is of maple leaves with two applied crowns. On the underside of the lid is a picture of the Parliament Buildings, hand engraved and in the front are the letters, G.R.I., flanked by crests. The legs of the box are covered with wrought maple leaves. The lining of the box is of blue silk. On the cover is the inscription, "To His Most Excellent Majesty King George V., humble address of the Senate and the House of Commons of Canada on the occasion of His Majesty's Silver Jubilee, 1935."

The gift will be a fitting symbol of the love and affection of the people of Canada for His Majesty.

FAMOUS AS DESIGNER

Lady Duff-Gordon who died this week in London, raised the work of designer of women's dress to the highest art and repute. She founded the firm of society dressmakers, Lucille, and became the foremost of designers of the day. It was she who emancipated women from the woollen stockings and flannel underpants of the Victorian days and gave them in their stead chiffons and silks. She it was who created that word which runs in every dress journal and every newspaper as "chic"; she created the split skirt and was the pioneer in mannequin shows.

She was famous and enjoyed a wide clientele. She was of course, greater in her art than in her ability to make money. In that she was like artists in every other line.

There was no reason why the designer of dress should not become famous throughout the society world. There may not be any reason why designers of men's clothes do not become so famous. But they don't. Names of chefs are on the tongues of those who know their victuals and the creator of dishes enjoys a reputation almost equal to that of a monarch.

ST. GEORGE

Fitting tribute was paid throughout the world on Tuesday to the day of St. George, the valiant martyr who has become the patron saint of the British people. Not in the stress of the present age has Britain seen fit to consider changing the name of her saint to some mythical pagan as it seems Germany is only too ready to do. Saint George remains forever the patron saint of the tight little isle "set like a precious stone in a silver sea" in the words of the greatest of English and world poets. Somehow Saint George satisfies the changing times for the outlook of the English people remains steadfast.

The warrior-saint seems an apt symbol of the people who are at heart religious and are prepared to share their burden of the human race. Like Saint George the spirit of the people of England, with whatever faults they have, is directed towards the truth and righteousness. Somehow Saint George seems to be the personification of the spirit of the people.

The nation is well-favored whose leaders choose a worthy model. Where the heart is, the treasure is also and these words so true of the life of the individual are just as true when they are applied to the life of a race. That man and that people which pick a noble exemplar and model will grow to resemble that model. The story of the saint is an inspiring one which was heard in many forms throughout a large portion of the world. Legends which gathered about the name of this hero first are attracted about a central figure of great humanity. Round and the legends grow by the very power of the imagination of the people so that the ideal characteristics usually lived out in the lives of the greatest and least of the citizens of the land which is fortunate in its choice of patron. Legends are true in spirit if not always in fact.

So the nobility of the life which is believed to have been that of Saint George is reflected in the English people.

And even so the legend of Saint George will continue to grow into the great figure which is the British ideal. England's contribution to the world continues to be made at great cost and that contribution is leaving its deep impression on the people.

In a few days there will be great ceremonies all over England, Scotland Wales and Ireland and the parts of the Empire in commemoration of the silver jubilee of His Majesty King George Fifth and Her Majesty Queen Mary and the spirit of the people which seems to represent the spirit of Saint George in the world today. Saint George will be alive in spirit in everything in these great coming days. Those who meditate at all will see the identification of the spirit of the patron saint with that of the people and of the present honored monarch who has been in very deed a warrior of peace and happiness, though some of the most difficult times through which the people have ever passed have been in his reign. But the spirit of the King and his people remains undaunted as Saint George stood undaunted even in the presence of torture and tribulation.

England and those other parts of the British Isles are fortunate beyond the fondest dream of happiness and wealth in the ideals and the realizations of the people, while the far-scattered Dominions drink inspiration from the heritage of the people whose patron has been one of the greatest of figures in the history of the world.

"Saint George for Merrie England," Englishmen yet can shout, for no land has people with a nobler sense of public duty than those who dwell in Albion, so many of her men having been veritable Saints George. His Majesty the King is the fountain of honour and is a very noble modern exemplar of the patron Saint George and of the noble Sir Galahad, another model of British virtue. The heritage which has come down out of the long past in the development of English and British institutions is one which is felt very deeply at this time. Never was it more honored than it is today.

KIWANIANS AND SAFE DRIVING

The need of care in motor driving must be stressed at this season of the year when many motorists are preparing for the resumption of driving.

The action of the local Kiwanis Club in taking up the question of inculcating the spirit of care in motoring has launched a good work. Their activity is of a kind which cannot fail to impress those who drive for the eye is the chief factor in education and it is through the eye the club members are endeavoring to reach every driver who approaches and passes through or lives in Belleville.

The club has secured the promise of two large road signs from the Department of Highways of Ontario, which will be placed, one west of Belleville and the other east of the city, to draw the attention of motorists that they are approaching a city which has had for some years a record free of fatalities on the streets and highways and which desires to preserve that record. The highway signs will inform the motorist that he is now approaching Belleville and he will be cautioned to drive carefully. This is the first step which the Kiwanians have a safety first campaign for the spring, summer and autumn seasons as far as highway and street safety is concerned will be brought home to the driver. These two signs will be set out four or five miles east and west of the city limits.

The club's own signs which have done good service in the past at the city boundaries will still convey the caution to the motorist carefully in furtherance of the safety campaign. The signs will point out that Belleville aims to preserve its proud record of being free from street fatalities.

The club is bringing to Belleville next Tuesday to address its members and scholars of the schools of the city a representative of the Department of Highways. Folders will be distributed at the schools and will be placed in motor cars.

"Keep Belleville a no-accident city" is a worthwhile undertaking which, however calls for the closest co-operation of every driver and every pedestrian.

The Kiwanians deserve the gratitude of the city for their efforts to bring about this happy result during the driving season of 1935.

FLYING SAFETY

The extent to which the inaccessible places of the world are being opened up, and swift and comfortable air travel supplanting the old slow and—in the wilder sections—dangerous methods of river and land communication, is little realized by the majority of people. Out-of-the-way areas, which formerly were known only to the hardiest adventurers, are now the familiar points of call of transport passenger planes. In most parts of the globe commercial air routes have been established, the traffic assuming constantly growing proportions. Day after day these long air journeys are made, but little is heard of them except in the rare event of accident, when all the details of the disaster are broadcast to the world. As regards this important factor of safety, statistics just published concerning commercial aviation lines in the United States are reassuring.

Many flying accidents are attributable to unfavourable atmospheric conditions, which are usually of an uncontrollable character. Meteorological science has, however, greatly advanced in recent times and co-operation between air transport companies and official government agencies whose duty it is to study the weather is resulting in a gratifying improvement.—Hamilton Spectator.

FROM A STAFF OF SEVEN TO SIX THOUSAND STRONG

From less than a corporal's guard to the equivalent of six regiments—this graphically illustrates the growth of the Bank of Montreal's staff in 117 years.

On the 23rd of August, 1817, the first four employees of the Bank of Montreal were appointed. They were the cashier, an accountant, a paying teller and a second teller. Shortly afterward a discount clerk, a second bookkeeper and a porter were added.

These seven constituted the original staff when the modest establishment on St. Paul Street in Montreal opened its doors on Monday, November 3rd—an institution which was destined to play a conspicuous and beneficial part in the development of Canada's resources.

Throughout the many decades that have followed, the Bank of Montreal has made increasing efforts to provide a banking service always adequate to meet the requirements of Canada's progress.

The original staff of seven has grown to 6,300, loyally serving the public through 500 branches extending from sea to sea—and overseas.

CHAPTER TWELVE

Fear had gone out of Anne now, and all weakness. She felt adequate, strong with a strength that is neither bone nor sinew nor the gum of them. She felt deadly as a mostrils quivering like those of a hatchered lioness watching the arsenal at a barrier. When the thick arms drew together to encircle her she moved swiftly to one side, bending forward, then gliding under the arm to safety on the other side. Dared she try now for the door to the green room? No. There was not time. Over there, behind the table. The table would be a temporary rampart, at least.

"No use, baby." Dolph turned, was hitching back to the table, his great chested of his prey made him surly. "What I want I get, see? You think I let a low-down chauffeur beat me to it? Pal chaser? You was pushing in. I stopped him, forcing her backward to be imprisoned against the wall, pressing with a hand sloke out, fastened about a wad of grass on the table.

"Stop it!" she cried. "Stop it this minute, Stand back from the table." She reached the vase, seized it straight at the leering face. He did not believe she would do it. He was coming on. Thud! The vase flew true in the middle of his face, fell to the floor, shattering into fragments. A howl of pain. Dolph was splattering, cursing his hand clapped across his eyes. Had she blinded him—the jagged piece of porcelain? She had taken her aim straight between the glittering black button eyes. The world reeled. Oh, if only he'd stop cursing and take away his hand! Then he'd close in for it! Thank heaven— he was only blinded by the water, by the impact. The vase had not broken until it struck the floor. Rose petals dripped from his hair, from his shoulders.

"I told you to stop it." Anne's world righted itself again. She must press advantage.

A volley of oaths. "So that's the racket. Shut up, you, I'll fix you for that. I'll tame you—you—" With a lunge he had overturned the table, flung it aside, pale amphenalia, bric-a-brac clattered to the floor, broke and lunged. He had her shoulder. She tried to wrench it free. Her uniform—it was being torn off her! A nail file, long and pointed, over there on the chair! If she could reach it!—She made struggled—one more step—the file within her grasp —hateful arms pinioning her, smothering her—

Car—

"Dolph! What—" The smothering arms were being torn away from her. She staggered backward, caught her balance, pulled away the veil that shut out her vision. The pasty little bald man whom Carl called "Mr. Macdonald" in the centre of the room, his bandy legs spread apart to supp... his suddenly lowering strength, his gaping ham of a fist raised and clenched. "Swine! Fiction!" he kept repeating. The fist and the epithet were for Dolph. Hoag who sat, stupefied, on the floor rubbing his chin with his hand.

At that moment the door from the hall into the round boudoir opened and Mrs. Adolph Hoag stepped into the room. The scene meeting her eyes was too much even for the iron nerves of Mrs. ...

"Jumping Jupiter!" she gasped, her hair seeming to rise in the head like charged copper wire. "What is it? Papa! Dolph! Get up off my floor, both of you, up before I yank you up!"

Dolph, thwarted by two capable hands with red pointed nails and glittering rings, dragged himself uncertainly to his feet.

"How then." Madame surveyed the room—her breakfast with its appelling legs and raised fist—Anne with shoulder where her uniform had been torn away—the shattered vase, the broken bric-a-brac by the upturned table. "Who's been using my room for a dining hall? Out with it, Papa, you put down the fist! What is it? A crazy house I'm in?"

The pudgy little man dropped his fist. It swung, impotently, at his side. With the advent of Madame, his towering strength fell away from him.

"I came to—I came to— " he began.

"Talk up! You got a voice", Madame snapped.

"I came to tell you the new rose bushes from Hamburg—three bushes, got already—and I find this girl fighting, fighting to get away from the arms, Dolph, I try to pull him away. He is crazy strong, so I hit him hard, hard as I can. Then he let go and sits down on the floor."

Madame's eyes became two hot steel drills. They bored into and through the shrinking Dolph.

"So you're at it again, are you," she rasped, "After I warned you to let Pih alone. You're gonna pay for this, my fine nephew. You hear me? You're gonna pay."

"I didn't mean it to go so far, honest, Auntie. Aunty," Dolph whipped. "I asked her if she'd kiss me if she dared me to take it—then when I took her at her word again to fight me, I'd been having cocktails—two or three maybe—and that made me mad. If she hadn't dared me I'd never bother her. Why should I—a servant!"

"You lie!" Anne's words cracked across the room like whips. Her face was so pale it was luminous. "You didn't dare me to kiss you! Oh no! Not at all!" Shame could be venomous. "You're so hot you just looked at me and lost my head. And you expect my aunt to believe that one—as the word of a servant—against her own nephew!"

"Certainly I expect her to take my word. Why shouldn't she? It's the truth." The simplicity of the lie was the, the ring of it, had an immediate effect on Madame.

"We've had enough fireworks for one day," Mrs. Hoag said, sailing majestically across the room, picking the roses and bric-a-brac out of the way as she passed. "Pih, you go out into a fresh uniform. Dolph, I'll catch you in this room again, no matter when, or if I hear you've bothered one of my girls, I'll see you don't work another red cent from me —not a copper. Now you get out and lay low for a while. I'm sick of the sight of you, Adolph."

Madame returned to where the pudgy little man stood, still swinging his fist.

"Now, papa," she said, "let's talk about them roses. "Her voice was pitched in another key. It was as thought she had forgotten, as one clearly beloved child who had been practicious and needed soothing.

Dolph slunk from the room. Swiftly Anne righting the havoc as best she could, conscious of the purr murmur of Madame crooning like a mother pigeon to her suddenly assertive and still ruffled mate.

When she had finished. Anne stood a moment at the door. Madame left off her soothing long enough to bark, "Well, Pih?"

"It might be best for me to leave, Madame," Anne said. "I'll go without notice if you wish."

"Do you want to go?"

"No, Madame."

"Then don't."

"It may be unpleasant."

"Unpleasant—for why? Us women can look out for ourselves. If he bothers you again don't hit him with a vase. Use a brick or a hammer. No danger of cracking Dolph's skull. It's too thick."

In spite of tears that were close, Anne had to smile. Madame was certainly a character, and a sturdy one too.

"That's the ticket." Madame nodded, softened into smile. "You're a good girl, Pih. I know the good ones when I see 'em. Just don't mention nothin' to no one. Bad news travels fast and gets worse as it goes."

"Very well, Madame."

Anne, in a daze sought her room. Ought she to confide to Carl what had happened? Their comradeship had been re-established on a basis of confidence—of sharing the problems of Bois Joli between them; yet—if she told Carl what had befallen her this morning—mischief there would be trouble—another clash of a serious one. Besides, she had given her word to Madame to be silent.

Anne took off the torn uniform and hung it far back in her closet. Her hair seeming to rise in the head like charged copper wire. What is it? Papa! Dolph! Get up off my floor, both of you, up before I yank you up!"

Dolph, thwarted by two capable hands with red pointed nails and glittering rings, dragged himself uncertainly to his feet.

In spite of tears that were close, Anne had to smile. Madame was certainly a character, and a sturdy back by Mrs. Brumo and the others who were less fortunate than she.

When she had taen off her uniform and donned a dress of cool dark linen, Anne slipped out of the house, into the garden by the covered path that led to the stone bench under the oleanders. She hoped, desperately, that Carl would come to find her there. She needed him. The feel of his strength, of his calm assurance. The sound of his voice, lightly bantering, the queer husk in it when their hands touched, the tenderness that could creep into the most impersonal remark.

For an hour, two hours, she sat there, her ears straining for the sound of a footfall on the crushed shell path, her eyes searching for the night perfume of the flowers until she was drowsy, drugged with the scene and with the quiet. Then she rose and returned to her room. Still deep with the loveliness of the night, a little empty with the loneliness of it.

How much later it was that she heard a car in the drive and saw the blue car flash along the wide drive toward the garage, she did not know. She had been sitting by the window, drifting with the moon, and time had ceased to be.

The blue car. Then Carl had been sent with the convoy that carried the "locusts" to their night's feeding ground. That was why he had not found her in the garden. The emptiness, the loneliness were gone. In their place was a delicious warmth, almost an exaltation.

Was there a movement against the green screen down by the garage? Something moving? A figure emerging into the moonlight? Carl, coming toward the house! She moved her lips with his. "No more moonbingo—until I can share it with you."

He was gone striding along in the wet velvet along the walk that the muffled his footfalls.

Anne was hungry she could not sleep, but floated instead in a kind of blissful dream, halfway between sleep and consciousness rehearsal of those memories which had molded to make her happy.

* * * *

A week passed—a week hectically. Bois Joli still swarmed with the locusts. Every day some of them were killed, fluttered, fell, to be replaced by others just as voracious. Madame, busy, was getting more crickedly edgy under their continued assaults.

"I don't know where Dolph picks 'em up," she complained acidly on a morning after a particularly noisy and upsetting night. She had gone downstairs to find a house boy sweeping up shattered glasses on the terrace and to learn that one of the guests, a flamboyant platinum-headed mike, who had arrived only the day before, had been pulled from the swimming pool at an early morning hour, more dead than alive.

"Drunk!" Madame snorted. "Fell in, you think, or put in purpose? I have to keep one of the men on watch at the pool all night."

The next day it was reported to Madame that two valuable bits of bric-a-brac were missing from a cabinet in one of the drawing-rooms —a jade vase of carved jade and a miniature Simbo temple exquisitely carved in ivory.

"It's one of Dolph's pests," Madame concluded. "They've been souvenirizing."

"Oh, surely not," Anne protested. She was "feeding Madame the morning pills" from the news and society columns. "Not when you are so kind to them, so generous and hospitable."

"As for they care for that," Madame scoffed. "They think it's comin' to them. They think all they got to do is help themselves. If you'd put 'em all on a barge and sink 'em in the middle of the lake, if they couldn't swim back, it'd be no loss. I'm sick and tired of the whole Dolph for certain trash. You'd think, brought up on a gold spoon like he's had from a child, a good'un all his while. But no, Not him. A lot of hussies and pee-wees no one ever heard of before except maybe in the scandal sheets. I've had everything locked up and set a man to watch the silver, There's plenty of it inside, too.

Twice during the week Anne and Carl managed to steal away for those happy interviews which had become the purpose of Anne's living. On her afternoon off, they had gone to Seabeach and forgotten there was anything in the world except the plunging green surf that foamed over them ,the cool green sea that was a cradle for their young bodies, the clean white sand that warmed and soothed them.

Again, when Madame dismissing Anne early, she had gone to the Mona bench under the oleanders and Carl found her there. They had spoken briefly and at long intervals. A silence fell upon them. It was enough to have youth and trust and nearness and a moonlit garden.

No word of love passed between them. No lovemaking. Tenderness. The clasp of a hand, lips that touched Anne's cheek or her hair with the lightness of a bird wing in flight. That was all. She understood why it was so. There must be a reckoning day when the retaking of their lives, each for the other,

SUNNY LIVING

starts at the table

How you feel and how you look depend largely on the foods you eat. The balanced meal provides the "bulk" to prevent common constipation caused by lack of this essential fiber.

Common constipation frequently causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Yet, in most cases, it can be overcome pleasantly and safely by eating a delicious cereal.

Kellogg's All-Bran is a natural food for normal individuals. It furnishes "bulk" in convenient and concentrated form. All-Bran also provides vitamin B and iron.

Isn't this sunny way better than taking patent medicines? Two tablespoonfuls of All-Bran daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If relief is not obtained, see your doctor.

Serve All-Bran as a cereal, or use in cooking. Get the delicious ready-to-eat package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg's in London, Ontario.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Once Madame sent for Anne to fetch a wrap to her on the terrace where she had been sitting with the "locusts" after dinner. Anne was a little frightened as a flushed partridge. The scene seeming strange to her. The girls in fluttering chiffons that clung to their slender bodies, with their naked burned backs, their bobbed hair, their careless and shocking, their sly eyes under languid lids, their slim fingers hands always reaching for something—a glass, a cigarette—a quick caress. And the young men. They weren't really young at all; all the resiliency of youth gone out of them.

"Ask Mrs. Hoag," a wispy blonde in a black velvet sack so revealing that a self-respecting chemise could not have balked at wearing it in a night-club show was saying. "Dolph insists on running us to Belleville for dinner. We can't be sure to get canned and spill us out on the road. Why can't we stay here and play, or go somewhere and dance?"

Madame took the wrap Anne handed her. "You're through for the day, Anne," she said. "I'll get a long lanky weak-faced youth roused himself to remonstrate.

"If I bounced you all on a bed of cobblestones, you wouldn't even feel it," Madame retorted. "Clear out, the lot of you. Go somewhere. I want to sit in the house."

Anne's day was little short of a flight. Similar scenes, veneered to a higher polish, more publicly veiled, had been a part of the life she had left in a room under the eaves a uniform, a seat at the servants table. Somehow she had escaped. Or was by way of escaping. Loss of wealth had cut her off from surroundings not essentially unlike these —loss of wealth and position, and the actual physical privations that had gone on inside her when Craig Braden took her in his arms. She'd manage to stay out of. Since not be drawn back, worried back by her cousin Maida or bwheedled

ERNIE ENERGY

"SPEEDY" IS THE WORD, ERNIE! AND YOU GET IT FROM GRAPE-NUTS BECAUSE THERE IS MORE ENERGY AND BETTER BALANCED NOURISHMENT IN FOUR HEAPING TEA-SPOONS OF GRAPE-NUTS, WITH MILK, THAN THERE IS IN A SERVING OF CHICKEN.

Of course Ernie Energy hasn't told the whole story. Grape-Nuts is his favourite flavour, too! And it costs so little—only about one cent a serving. Specially prepared for easy digestion. Get a package for tomorrow.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and bouncy and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels. The trouble comes from your liver. It should pour two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a sick headache, your breath is bad, your skin often breaks out in blotches, pimples, aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get them two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. They are purely vegetable, act gently but surely. Do not gripe. Refuse substitutes. Do not drug stores. 25 cents. ©1981 C.M.C.Co.

OATMEAL AND DATE BARS

1 package dates, pitted
¼ cup flour
¼ cup quick quaker oats
¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup chopped walnuts
3 eggs

Cut dates into small pieces. Mix oats, flour, salt and baking powder, and add chopped nuts and dates; beat up the eggs, add sugar and mix well. Place mixture in shallow greased 8 inch tin; bake slowly in moderate oven, 325 degrees, for about 30 minutes. When cool cut into squares and roll in granulated or powdered sugar.

THE DRAMA

French Night at Drama Competition In Ottawa Highly Praised by Adjudicator Allan Wade

Ottawa, April 24— (CP)— Tonight's audience at the Dominion Drama Festival will see two plays by Canadians, the last two on the program, as the event switches back from French to English.

Last night, French night, brought four plays to the stage of Ottawa's Little Theatre, one of them by a Canadian, Mme. Emma Morrier of Edmonton, whose "Mon Sang Ne Ment Pas", the French equivalent of "Blood Will Tell", gained praise from adjudicator Allan Wade, London stage authority.

Speaking in what he said was his first French public address, Mr. Wade congratulated Mme. Morrier on the "simplicity and sincerity of her play". His one criticism of the performance by Le Cercle Dramatique de St. Joachim of Edmonton, was that it produced too much sadness and "there was too great uniformity in the characters".

The adjudicator expressed himself as "extremely moved" by the University of Ottawa Dramatic and Musical School's presentation of H. R. Lenormand's "L'Inconnue," the story of an idiot girl. He said he believed it would be difficult to give a more perfect performance of the piece.

Quebec Group Praised

A group of three from the National Conservatory of Music at Quebec gave what Mr. Wade described as a fine performance of scenes from the second act of Rostand's "L'Aiglon", the story of Napoleon's dreaming, futile son. The adjudicator found the acting of the three characters "admirable".

La Rampe of Ottawa also gained praise for its performance of the second act of Roger-Ferdinand's comedy, "Chotard et Cie," the story of a poetic son-in-law of a commercially-minded family.

At the end of the evening Mr. Wade said if he were asked to select the best performance of the night he would be unable to do so because all were generally excellent.

Tonight the audience will see "To the Dead Man", a one-act dramatization by K. W. Edge of Toronto of Charles Dickens' "The Lazy Tour of Two Idle Apprentices" and "God Caesar" by Marjorie Pri of Toronto and "Vindication" by Leonard J. Hine and Frank King.

The Dickens' piece will be performed by the Toronto Branch of the Dickens Fellowship, "God Caesar" by the Playmakers' Club of Toronto and "Vindication" by the Theatre Art Guild of Halifax.

LEAVE CANCELLED

Colombo, Ceylon, April 24—(AP)—Leaves for all government medical officers were cancelled today as a result of a new outbreak of Malaria.

The total number of deaths attributed to the malaria epidemic which has swept the island from November, 1934, to March 1935, was set at 113,811 compared with 47,107 dead during the same months of the previous year.

Hush darling HUSH!

HAVE you ever held a child in your arms —quivering and screaming from a burn? Have you ever waited those seemingly endless minutes for the druggist to rush Unguentine to you?
Then you smoothed it on gently. Almost immediately Unguentine began to draw the fire from the burn; to soothe and cool; bringing relief from the pain—and a resolution from you to have Unguentine where you can use it instantly in future.
If you have never gone through this experience guard yourself against it, by having a tube of Unguentine on hand, ready for emergency—to relieve pain from burns or scalds; to prevent ugly scars.
Eight out of every ten hospitals use Unguentine because it is entirely antiseptic while in contact with the burn or scald and does not dry out, making the dressing easy to remove, without pain.

The wise Mother keeps a tube of Unguentine in the kitchen within instant reach—and another in the Medicine Cabinet for cuts, infectious scratches and bruises.

"I ADORE YOU"...

THRILLING WORDS... BUT NOBODY SAYS THEM TO THE GIRL WHO HAS COSMETIC SKIN

SOFT, lovely skin is thrilling to a man. So what a shame when a girl lets unattractive Cosmetic Skin rob her of this charm!

Cosmetics Harmless if removed this way

Many a woman who thinks she removes make-up thoroughly is actually leaving bits of stale cosmetics in the pores to choke them. Gradually the pores become enlarged — tiny blemishes appear, blackheads, perhaps. Signs of Cosmetic Skin!

Lux Toilet Soap is made to remove cosmetics thoroughly. Its ACTIVE lather sinks deep into the pores, gently removes every vestige of dust, dirt, stale rouge and powder. Before you put on fresh make-up during the day . . . and ALWAYS before you go to bed at night, guard your complexion with this gentle soap that 846 out of 857 English and Hollywood stars use! (It's grand whatever type of skin you have . . . dry, oily, or "in-between").

LUX TOILET SOAP

P.S. Now Lux Toilet Soap is so economical you can afford to use it for the bath, too! Why not try it tonight?

OF COURSE I USE COSMETICS, BUT I NEVER WORRY ABOUT COSMETIC SKIN — THANKS TO LUX TOILET SOAP. IT'S EASY TO HAVE A GORGEOUS SKIN THIS WAY

Emmaus

And behold two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus. They talked together of things which had happened.....
Jesus himself drew near.... Their eyes were holden.... What manner of communications are these that ye have .... As ye walk and are sad .... Luke 24, 13-17.

The shadows of the cross have fled,
Glad Easter day brings joy to man;
And long the road to Emmaus led,
Two lonely figures sad and wan,

The torrid Eastern sun subsides,
And then sweet calm of ev'ning time;
Gives peace and quiet unknown for hours,
Yet heads are bowed with grief sublime.

What sorrow eating at their joy?
Their Lord arisen,?—faith so weak;
Why walk ye thus with toiling pace,
Whose greeting voice my friends ye seek?

Have ye not seen Christ crucified,
The form submissive to God's will?
Did ye not see the cruel cross,
The man upraised on Calvary's hill?

And now the day is passed away,
Long evening shadows fall;
Our hearts ache sore to see the Lord,
And hear our Master's call.

Have ye not seen the risen Lord?
Revive, increase our faith so dim;
By trust in God's own blessed word,
Ourselves, our souls but live in Him.

Abide with us through eventide,
Stay Brother stay, we pray thee still;
Thy presence breathes of joy and peace,
O Victor of Golgotha's hill.

But lo, He takes the cup divine,
He passes sacred bread and wine;
Take eat and drink, my body-blood,
GO PREACH and make they light to shine.

O, Saviour Christ, now stay with us,
Be near us in the daily task;
And when the shades of ev'ning fall,
Abide with us is all we ask.

C. C. Stewart,
Belleville.

Our King and Queen

KING GEORGE V IS AN ENTHUSIASTIC YACHTSMAN

George's love for yachting

Shortly after he ascended to the throne he had the royal yacht Britannia remodeled for racing. Since that time, except for the war years, he has raced in her nearly every year until recently. This year, in celebration of the Silver Jubilee, the Britannia will play another major roll when the King reviews the grand fleet.

When the King sails, he does so as a true sailor. And he is a sailor of no mean ability, for all his early life was spent at sea and he knows ships as well as he knows his children. When the race gets close and exciting, the King becomes no more than an ordinary seaman, taking part in the work of hauling in sheet; side by side with his crew.

That is characteristic of King George; he never tries to force his position— In fact he would rather be accounted as an ordinary individual bent on enjoying life.

The Royal yacht Britannia is a big one and meets the King's desire for a boat on which he could accommodate many friends. An old ship, it nevertheless has won a ma-

Second only to shooting is King jority of the races in which she has taken part—particularly at the famous Cowes regatta course.

The layout to-day shows three informal pictures of the King as a yachtsman and a sailor. In the centre he is shown ascending the ladder to one of the British navy dreadnaughts for inspection. In the circle, with his helmsman aboard the Britannia, BELOW, hauling in the main sheet with his crew.

CHATTERTON W.M.S.

An open meeting of the Chatterton W.M.S. was held in March Hill Church, Good Friday evening. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. B. Bleecker with hymn 168, followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Mutton.

The Scripture lesson pertaining to Easter was read by Mrs. F. Pinkle. A very inspiring and much enjoyed address was given by Mrs. M. Sine of Scott's W.M.S. on "Practical Steps for Christians of Today."

Hymn 133 was sung, after which the young people presented an Easter pageant assisted by the choir, also a solo by Miss L. Ekerton, duet by Mr. and Mrs. F. Campbell and a male quartette by Messrs. F. Campbell, B. Mills, F. Pinkle and E. B. Pinkle.

The meeting was closed by Rev. Mr. Mutton.

ZION W. M. S.

The regular meeting of the W. M. S. of Zion was held at the home of Mrs. R. Bunnett on Wed. April 10. Dinner was served to 38 Ladies and children, the proceeds, which amounted to $6.37, to go to the Mission Band.

The meeting opened by quiet music and the Devotional part was taken by Miss Olive Searles after which the president, Mrs. Searles, took charge by singing hymn 180, followed with prayer by Rev. Mr. Everson. Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Cluff, Ketchenson, Luke 23. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. Some items of business were discussed. A temperance reading was given by Mrs. Tufts. Miss Mary Wright gave a splendid report of Presbyterial held at Picton which was enjoyed by all and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Wright for her report. A solo was given by Miss Jessie Ray, "God is Love". The study book was taken by Mrs. Cecil Ketchenson which was very much enjoyed. Hymn 185 was sung and prayer by Mrs. Casey closed the meeting.

POLICE HANDLE RELIEF STRIKERS

Riot Act Read by Mayor of Vancouver After Disturbance

Vancouver, April 24. — (CP) — Mayor G. G. McGeer of Vancouver today was clothed with authority to call out the militia in case of recurrence of violence, which late yesterday brought injury to a number, and 12 relief camp strikers, reading of the riot act and several thousand dollars damage to the Dominion Government Stores furnishings of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Trouble flared when 2,000 relief camp strikers, staging one of their crowded Trafalgar Square parades to draw attention to their protests of alleged unfair and unsanitary conditions in the camps, invaded the stores.

Swarming through Vancouver's downtown business section, the men smashed up traffic for over an hour and wrecking the furnishings on the second floor of the Hudson's Bay Company's store before being ejected by police with drawn batons.

Later they marshalled their forces and paraded to Victory Square where for the first time since an Oriental disturbance in Chinatown in 1919 the Riot Act was read. After reading of the Act by Mayor McGeer the mob dispersed.

Policemen Injured

Six city policemen, including Deputy Chief Alfred Grundy were injured in the store clash. None was hurt seriously. A considerable number of strikers were injured. None was taken to the hospital as the rioters removed their fallen comrades from the store themselves.

Seven hundred men, however, managed to gain entrance to the store. Their fellows, earlier ousted and when the men were ejected the whole body charged up the street, moved on to Victory Square site of Vancouver's War Memorial.

Reinforced, several strikers broke the parade ranks and sought to overturn a police patrol car. They were held off by the police who handled the situation easily.

The jobbies gathered in the Square surrounded by Constables until Mayor McGeer read the Riot Act. After due warning, they started to disperse and there was no further disturbance.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"Traveling Saleslady"
Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell
In Their Funniest Comedy To Date

"Traveling Saleslady," one of the freshest and liveliest comedies of the season, opens at the Capitol Theatre Thursday, with Joan Blondell heading the all star cast.

Women will be especially delighted with the picture, for it shows how a young girl with initiative and personality gets the better of her male rivals in the business world.

The story by Frank Howard Clark is delightfully breezy and whimsical with hilarious situations and a most unusual climax. The dialogue is sparkling and keeps everything moving from start to finish.

Joan Blondell, in the title role, is as slim and beautiful and as full of pep and ginger as ever. This is the part that will win her fans all over again, for she is at her best as she appeared since she quit the screen a few months ago to become the proud mother of a bouncing baby boy. Her acting is snappy and full of verve and she handles every situation with skill and artistry.

Glenda Farrell, the other opposite Miss Blondell in the leading masculine role as the star salesman of a rival concern within the same store, is every bit as clever.

The story is not without its romances and share of love tangles, in addition to its comedy, for besides Blondell and Farrell the scene as the jealous rival of Miss Blondell, is the affection of the handsome Gargan. She is the proprietoress of a chain of drug stores and gives Gargan the opportunity but takes it away when she finds that romance is developing between Gargan and Miss Blondell.

Miss Farrell gives her usual capable performance and lends to and to the humor of the production.

Hugh Herbert has never been funnier than as the inebriated inventor of a combination with cocktail flavors.

Grant Mitchell does excellent work as the conservative toothpaste manufacturer who thinks that advertising means handing out razors and Al Shean, formerly of Gallagher and Shean, plays the role of the up-to-date manufacturer with great humor and skill. Ruth Donnelly is also seen in a comedy as the mother of Miss Blondell.

AT THE REGENT
"Thirteen Hours by Air"

Thrilling entertainment for the entire family is the new mystery drama, "Thirteen Hours by Air" (Dead Drood," which will be shown as a double-feature on the Regent screen with Claude Rains, Douglass Montgomery and a brilliant cast of supporting players.

The story centers round John Harper, (Rains) a famous surgeon who is choir leader in a cathedral in a little English village. But while he is a man of prominence in public, he is a victim of the drink habit, and his wife and child is a strange dual personality. Jasper is secretly in love with the fiance of Douglass Montgomery, the latter a girl is played by Heather Angel and his nephew is played by David Manners.

Into this strange triangle is injected a fiery youth in the person of Neville Landless, played by Douglas Montgomery. Landless becomes in love with Miss Angel and develops a hatred for young Drood, even going so far as to challenge him to a duel with pistols.

Drood disappears and some of his clothing is found in the nearby river. His uncle yells that he has been murdered, but Landless refuses would be to deprive you of some thrilling action.

Rains, Heather Angel, Douglass Montgomery, Valerie Hobson, David Manners and Francis X. Sullivan are truly magnificent.

Special Extra: Fans will be shown at each performance. Last complete show 8.45.

Tonight Only
"Cookeyed Cavaliers," starring Wheeler and Woolsey, is a riotous comedy farce that will make your sides ache with laughter.

WILLING TO CO-OPERATE

Callander, April 24. — (CP) — Dr. Allan Roy Defoe, still willing to co-operate with the parents of the Dionne quintuplets, today invited Dr. Emilie Smith, North Bay physician chosen by Olive Dionne, the father, to examine the babies. Following conference last night, Dr. Smith arranged to make the visit some time today. "I am very busy today, and don't know when I will be able to get out," said Dr. Smith.

MURDER CHARGE PREFERRED

Bournemouth, April 24—(CP)—Gerald Chapman, 24, is facing one of the preliminary hearing formal charges of murder were laid against Mrs. Alma Rattenbury, 31, and boy 19-year-old chauffeur, George Percy Stoner, in connection with the death of the woman's 67-year-old husband, Francis Rattenbury, distinguished architect.

Both the accused pleaded not guilty and reserved defence, after which they were remanded for a week at which time they will be committed for trial.

AT THE BELLE
"McFadden's Flats" Season's Big Laugh Festival

There is a robust and colorful comedy about real folk that should appeal to everyone from six to sixty in Paramount's "McFadden's Flats", coming to the Bella Theatre (Thursday) and Friday, matinee and evening, which introduces to the film public Walter Kelly of beloved vaudeville memory.

Kelly acts a rough-speaking but soft-hearted Irishman who rises from brick-laying to wealth. Opposite him is Andy Clyde, acting an economical Scotchman and his ancient, friendly enemy.

The picture deals with the lifelong feud between these two loveable hard sheiks, and of the romance between their children which finally brings them together.

When though Andy and Clyde pretend to be on the coolest of speaking terms, there is genuine affection between them. When Kelly's building projects are endangered by financial stringency, Clyde secretly posts the money to aid him.

The illusion of wealth prompts Kelly to send his daughter, Betty Furness, to finishing school, thus breaking up her romance with Richard Cromwell, Clyde's son. Complications ensue, overstiends himself, and when the day of reckoning comes, learns that Clyde has been supporting him. All come happily in the end when the two old cronies put their heads together and inveigl a millionaire into leading financial support to the business.

When the romantic breach between their children is healed, the old feudists have nothing left to fight about and settle down to being just friends.

Kelly, in his first film role, is the classic McFadden. Proud of figure and plain of face, he plays the part with obvious polish and pleasure. And he seems to reveal in McFadden's invincible Irishness very his fresh Irish humor and full chalice of charm.

Jane Darwell, as Kelly's wife, shares honors with him and Andy Clyde. George Barbier is ideally cast in the role of the millionaire and Donald Meek contributes a capable performance in a minor role.

Paul Muni "Bordertown"

Paul Muni is appearing in "Bordertown," at the Belleville production. The plot is crammed with thrilling situations, unusual situations, tremendous suspense and a most unusual triangular romance. Bette Davis, Eugene Pallette and Margaret Lindsay are in the features cast.

"Roberta" Leaving Tonight

"Roberta", the Queen of all musical romances, featuring Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers and Irene Dunne, closes a record-breaking four-day engagement at the Belleville theatre tonight on the screen treat that should not be missed.

ICE STOPS POWER

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 24—(CP)—Ice driven into upper St. Mary's River by winds broke the boom across the head race of the power canal of Great Lakes Power Company, and the plant in canal where power was greatly reduced. Abitibi Paper Mill and Bloom and Merchant Mills of the Algoma Steel Corporation were forced to shut down but resumed operations after midnight work by the staff of the power company to clear the ice.

HOCKEY PLAYER INJURED IN MINE

Jack Henderson, Madoc, Sustains Multiple Leg Fracture

Jack Henderson, well known Madoc hockey player, sustained a broken leg and injured back when a large quantity of tale rock fell from above and crushed him at the Madoc Tale Mine yesterday afternoon. Henderson was brought to the Belleville General Hospital by Dr. Beatty of Madoc, followed which Dr. G. H. Stobie was called in consultation. It was then discovered that Mr. Henderson's right leg was broken in five different places, while his back has been badly bruised.

The injured man was employed at the Madoc Talc Mine and was working in an underground shaft, when a portion of the face above loosened and crashed down upon him, completely burying him. It was fortunately help his narrow escape.

Before Baby Came

WOMEN who dread motherhood or who suffer from backaches or weakening pains can be helped by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. ## Best Advertising Medium is Newspaper

Advertising Makes Distinct Gain In 1934 Over 1933

New York, April 24.—(AP)—National advertisers paid $163,000,000 for newspaper space and $349,855,000 for all mediums in 1934, the Bureau of Advertising reported today to the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

The estimate indicate distinct gains over 1933 advertising expenditures, more than recovering the losses of that year to place 1934 slightly ahead of 1932.

In 1933, the bureau reported general advertisers spent $140,000,000 for newspaper space out of a total of $298,000,000.

Saying "the first quarter of 1935 finds the newspapers facing unusual competition for the National Advertiser's dollar," the report presented figures to show the Daily Press was the best buy in the magazine field and the radio as an advertising medium.

Brooklyn Dodgers Setting Pace Getting Smart Hurling, Timely Hitting and Splendid Fielding

Men of Casey Stengel May Be Hard to Dislodge From Top

CARDS SECOND

Boston Red Sox Are Coasting High in American

By HERBERT W. BARKER

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Brooklyn Dodgers, erstwhile daffiness boys of the National League, have put away such childish things as sleeping already occupied bases and cutting legitimate home runs to singles by failing to touch a base, or two or pasting another runner on the base-paths.

They're tending strictly to their baseball knitting, winning games by hard, timely slugging, especially by Danny Taylor, Linus Frey, Sam Leslie and Joe Stripp, and sharp, clean fielding marked by 12 double plays in seven games. Five of these have been vs.

Ironically enough, the Dodgers' about-face has come under the leadership of Casey Stengel, himself no shrinking violet in his playing days, nor, for that matter, even now as the club's manager.

A crowd of 30,000 welcomed Stengel's men to their home park yesterday and howled in glee as the Dodgers assailed four pitchers for 15 hits, trounced the Phillies 15-5 and took undisputed possession of first place. Home-runs by Frey and Tony Cuccinello contributed heavily to the Dodgers' big assault and Curt Davis gave creditable support in the fourth and sixth when they scored 10 runs. Dolph Camilli and Ripper Collins and Johnny Moore's third brought the Phillies two runs in the second and two more came across in the third after which Burleigh Grimes and Leonard let it a day. Bill Clark, who received credit for the victory, and Dazzy Vance gave effective relief for the winners thereafter.

Cards Now Second

The world champion St. Louis Cardinals, and New York Giants, meanwhile, moved up to late second and third places. The Cardinals walloped Boston 9-5 behind Paul Dean's seven-hit pitching, while the Giants ruined Babe Ruth's home-coming by battering Boston Braves 6-5 in the 11th on Mel Ott's home run. Ruth, making his first New York appearance in his Braves' uniform, attracted 50,000 to the polo grounds but failed to get a hit, Pittsburgh drove Tony Freitas out of the box with four singles, a four-run assault and beat Cincinnati Reds 6-4.

Developments in the American League were marked by Boston Red Sox's sixth victory in seven starts, a 7-4 conquest of the hitless New York Yankees. Red Ruffing, limited to only one hit in the first 2 1-3 innings but had to retire because of a lame back. Johnny Murphy came in and was suggested for eight hits and all Boston's runs in the next three frames. A crowd of 20,500 saw the Red Sox home opener.

Joe Vosmik's triple was the big blow in a ninth inning rally, that gave Cleveland Indians two runs and a 7-6 victory over St. Louis Browns, that left the Indians in second place with four triumphs against one defeat. Chester Morgan, rookie outfielder of the champion Detroit Tigers, dropped a fly with the bases filled and two out in the fourth and Chicago White Sox went on to score five runs and win their ball game 7-3 behind Stan Jones' effective pitching. Washington turned back Philadelphia Athletics 6-4 with a three-run rally in the eighth.

BASKETBALL

Victoria, April 24 (CP)—Victoria's rangy Ramblers defeated the Toronto Ribbons today stood on the floor and rung of the ladder that leads to the Canadian Men's Senior Amateur Basketball crown. Right on their heels, however, came Assumption College quintet, undaunted by Ribbons' first game victory in the best-of-five series for Dominion honors.

Last night the Ribbons opened the series by outscoring their east-ern opponents more than two-to-one and ran up a 47-22 triumph. But the Ramblers, with little promise in their first showing here that with a little practice all of their limited probably affected by their long train journey here, they may overtake the champions of 1933 and reverse the verdict of three years ago when the Ramblers stopped into their first Canadian crown at the expense of another Windsor team.

All Senior Players in City Requested to be at Fair Grounds

The first call for senior C.O.B.L. baseball practice was made by Coach "Peeney" Mills and Manager Art Young today, when it was announced that the Belleville "Radios" would take to the field this evening at the Exhibition Park at 5.30 pm. The announcement came directly on the heels of the appointment of the 1935 manager and coach of the local seniors yesterday.

Despite the fact spring baseball training is being entered in upon much earlier than usual in Belleville, the present excellent weather conditions coupled with the activities of the remaining three C.O.B.L. clubs moved the locale on the offensive, Oshawa, Peterboro and Lindsay already having talk-ed to the field for spring training. Coach Mills made it definitely known today that all positions on the 1935 edition of the Belleville seniors had been made vacant at the close of last season and would be awarded to the players making the C.O.B.L. squad during the pre-season training period. An extensive spring training schedule is being contemplated by the newly inaugurated Belleville executive, which may see a few pre-season games played before the umpe, cry "play ball!" for the opening of the C.O.B.L. May 24th.

New Players in City

A number of new baseball players have come to Belleville particularly since last autumn and will line up with the Belleville senior team, battling for positions. Among the new players in town are Jim Barrett, reputed to be one of the best catchers to perform in the T.A.B.A. in recent years; Art. Calhoun, who hurled for the Toronto G. & W. Cards, conquerors of the Belleville seniors in O.B.A.A. play-downs last year; Oscar McGregor, veteran Toronto infielder, who comes to Belleville highly touted as a first baseman par excellence, and Harold Hansen, also of Toronto, who batted .333 in the Greenwood Park Senior T.A.B.A. in 1934. Hansen is also an infielder and starred in his first season in senior ball last year. With the exception of Art. Scarlett, who migrated to Napanee, the entire roster of the 1934 Belleville National team will be available for competition this year.

Including Calhoun from Toronto the local senior team have Jack Williams, veteran south-paw of the locals; Ernie Smith, Belleville's

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

The baseball pot surely bubbled over in Belleville during the past 24 hours in both senior and junior ranks. Coach "Peeney" J. "Peeney" Mills was induced to return to the game he so dearly loves and take over the duties of coach, while Art Young was named manager. The announcement of the veteran sportsmen will share the spotlight during the club, thereby excluding the worries from the shoulders of one person as in the past.

The choice of the executive of the B.A.B.A. in luring Mills back into the game was a popular one, wise move insofar as he is a close student of the game and is acquainted with the weakness of the various other clubs in the league. Peeney Mills made a brilliant start in 1933 and they finished in the money, but by the addition of a few junior short-stop, Dean Ford, and Jack Williams, star curve ball artist of previous years, the locals were only beaten out in the league finals last season by a few number conditions, but, with the addition of four new players from Toronto, Peeney Mills will return to Belleville, Coach Mills will retire to the bench this year and direct play from that point, despite his "swan song," of last fall. He has called the season's initial practice for this evening at the Exhibition Park.

Directly upon the announcement of the appointment of Manager Young and Coach Mills it was announced, that the season's first practice would be held this evening. "Let it be known that all positions on our team are open and will be only awarded the players performing the best during the spring training season," announced the heads of the local senior team today. The exception of Art Scarlett the entire 1934 roster of the ex-Nationals is available while four new faces from Toronto will line up with the "Radios," and battle out for positions. Senior baseball all over the C.O.B.L. circuit has taken a decided spurt forward with the desired result is that one of the keenest baseball seasons in many seasons can be expected in the Central loop in 1935.

Just prior to the senior announcement the Belleville Kiwanis Club stated, that all was in readiness to launch the season of baseball for Junior ballsters in Belleville. In order to ascertain the feeling of the Kiwanis at the meeting of a district a meeting of all interested in Junior baseball has been called for this evening at the Y.M.C.A. The local Kiwanis Club has accepted the offer of the Belleville Amateur Baseball Association in regard to the sponsorship of a Junior O.B.A.A. team in Belleville for 1935. Besides the fostering of this club, the Kiwanis Club intends to further and organize a local Junior league, composed of three or more local Junior baseball teams. These and other questions of paramount importance to Junior baseball will be discussed at the meeting tonight.

Open night is being held by the local anglers over at the Armouries this week during and following their regular weekly casting activities. Not only do the participants get a thrill out of these indoor casting activities, but a large gallery of interested spectators follow with finished casters. Following the regular period of casting the competition committee of the "Anglers' Association will publicly make known the rules and regulations of their annual May 1st casting competition, that is open to all.

The local lacrosse moguls journeyed over to Trenton Yesterday and interviewed Harry Moore, boss of the Trenton Advocate and lacrosse expected stars, in reference to his coaching the local Aajmas box team this season. "I'll do anything to help the cause of lacrosse in the community," stated Harry as he accepted the position. Doubtlessly the local lacrosse moguls made a wise choice when they secured the services of Mr. Moore to guide their lacrosse team during the coming season. Harry is one of the veteran coaches along with the forgotten lines of Canada's national game. Immediately the Aajmas box team will get down to business in this pre-season softball loop, and under the tutelage of Harry Moore the first and second placed teams will meet in a three game play-off series. No officers were elected, but a board of tribunal of judges to settle all disputes was named and includes Messrs. Harry Williams, William Fry and Kenneth Edgecomb.

A couple of umpires was named and will be competent ones in the lowing: Dave Blackburn, Dave Wright, Bill Bowen, Bill Bowen, Grant, Harold Bawden and Don Allen. All games are to be played at the old Athletic Park, Bridge St.

The schedule to date is:

April 30—S.E.A.C. vs. College Hill.

May 2nd.—Aajmas A.C. vs. S.E.A.C.

May 6th—College Hill vs. S.E.A.C.; Aajmas A.C. vs. College Hill.

FORM OF LEAFS IN FIRST WEEK IS SURPRISING

Top International, Dropping One Game in Five Played

DEFEAT ALBANY

Ed. Chapman Bangs Out Homer and Two Singles

Although they started the season with little more than a hard hitting outfield, Toronto Maple Leafs have surprised even their strongest supporters by setting the pace through the first week of the International League pennant race.

With practically no reserve strength the Leafs bore little resemblance to the team that finished third last year, but managed to win the playoffs and represent the circuit in the little world series. They dropped their first game to Syracuse but since then have won four straight from the Chiefs and Albany Senators.

In leading back the Senators 10-5 yesterday, Calvin Chapman, second baseman, had the attack on his cousin, Ed Chapman, by banging out a home run and two singles. His homer with a man on base in the sixth inning and broke a 5-5 deadlock. Bill Beckmann, second baseman, and Ben Cantwell, catcher, also broke in the hit-per-named pitching staff, blanked the Sc tors after the fifth inning.

Porter Batting Star

Dick Porter, former major leaguer and Perry Bell, rookie outfielder, combined to give Newark Bears a 6-5 victory over Montreal Royals. Bell smacked a home run, his third of the season, in the eighth to put the Bears in front after Royals had tied and then Porter crashed through with a double to score Ed Lidbrand and Nolen Richardson with the decider.

Baltimore Orioles rapped out three more home runs to bring their total for the season to 18 in defeating Rochester Red Wings 10-7, and the circuit blows came in the first inning, in which the Orioles scored six times, and were hit by Eddie Mayo, Woody Abernathy and Roy Spencer. George Earnshaw handed the Red Wings 10 pcines in the first 4 1-3 innings but managed to steady with men on bases until relieved by Sherriff Blake in the fifth.

The Chiefs collected 17 assorted hits to defeat the Buffalo Bisons 16-3 behind the effective hurling of Bob Coombs. Johnny Watwood, Rob Bauman and Jim Bivin. Coombs connected with three hits each, the former getting a home run. It was the fifth victory in five of the season in the Syracuse park.

WALL STREET LOOP OPENS

Softball loomed on the local sport horizon yesterday when the Wall Street pre-season Wall Street League organized and drafted its schedule for the coming spring campaign. Only three teams signified their intentions to enter the league in this loop —College Hill Cubs, S.E. A.C. and the Aajmas Club being those present at the meeting. The league is slated to open at the old Athletic Park, Bridge St., next night next with the Cubs tangling with the S.E.A.C.

The rules and regulations of the league were wide and varied. The O.A.S.A. paying rules were adopted, but players of any club in the league will be eligible to participate in the loop. No baseball players who are playing with O.B.A.A. teams in O.A.S.A. softball will be permitted in this pre-season softball loop, but will be eligible to play with the clubs the first and second placed teams will meet in a three game play-off series. No officers were elected, but a board of tribunal of judges to settle all disputes was named and includes Messrs. Harry Williams, William Fry and Kenneth Edgecomb.

A couple of umpires was named and will be competent ones in the lowing: Dave Blackburn, Dave Wright, Bill Bowen, Bill Bowen, Grant, Harold Bawden and Don Allen. All games are to be played at the old Athletic Park, Bridge St.

The schedule to date is:

May 6th—College Hill vs. S.E.A.C.; Aajmas A.C. vs. College Hill.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

By The Associated Press

Mel Ott, Giants: His single in 11th drove in winning run against Braves.

Bill Werber, Red Sox: Raked Yankee pitching for double and two singles.

Linus Frey, Dodgers: His homer with bases filled helped whip Phillies.

Bill Swift, Pirates: Pitched effectively in relief role to halt Reds.

Hank Majeski, Senators: Collected double and three singles off Athletics' pitching.

Curt Davis, Cardinals: stopped Cubs with seven hits to win second victory.

Clint Brown, Indians: Halted Browns with three hits in last 4 2-3 innings to pave way for Indian victory.

Over the Air

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

No one knew what had caused the sudden break between Hal Thompson and Louise Ferris. A sort of puzzled pride seemed to keep Louise silent and those who ventured to ask Hal about it were given answers put little short of "I don't see that that's any of your business."

They had met at a winter resort where a group of mutual friends had taken cottages for the holiday season. Louise, as what is known as a "rising young actress" had a cottage of her own and Hal could usually be found there. There was a good deal of do-as-you-please about the group and they seldom even bothered each other's cottages.

The break came a few days before they all returned to the city and it was complete and definite enough for the others to realize something had happened. Now, as had been expected, did Louise and Hal see each other after the return to town.

The show business wasn't so good and Louise, as did many others, turned to the radio, where voices trained by stage experience were in demand for various dramatic features.

Radio Turned On

So far as anyone knew the first time that Hal heard her over the radio was at the home of the Cantwells. He was one of the several guests for dinner and after dinner Mrs. Cantwell began twisting the radio dial. Voices of a radio "drama" began to sound and Mrs. Cantwell said, "Here's the first thing that Louise Ferris is in."

One of those awkward pauses followed her words and everyone in the room looked at Hal. He flushed a little and said, "Why look at me? Listen to it by all means."

So they listened to one waiting to point the scene by turning it off. They heard Louise's voice, a man's voice, the voice of another woman and then Louise's voice again. It was a simple story, easily followed by the voice alone.

Suddenly as Louise's voice sounded again, Hal leaned forward in his chair. Then he half stood up only to sink back again. He muttered something but it wasn't distinct.

"What station is that coming over," he asked.

Mrs. Cantwell told him. "Do you know where it is?" asked Hal. Someone looked in a phone book and gave him the address of the station. He made hasty excuses, think really weren't excuses, and left.

"Well," said Mrs. Cantwell, "something must have happened to him. I wonder what it was."

She never learned, entirely. What happened was that Hal was headed for the broadcasting studio as fast as a taxi could take him. He got there a few minutes before Louise was ready to leave and waited for her in a corridor.

Explanation

When Louise appeared he began to talk so rapidly that she couldn't understand what he was saying. Nor did she appear to be in any mood for listening. Hal's very pointed dropping of her had naturally been a bruising blow to her pride.

"But you must listen," he insisted. "Come over here where we won't be interrupted." Louise followed him. His voice and features told of the excitement under which he was laboring.

"Listen," he said, "please try to understand. When we were up there this Winter I was crazy about you and, well, I was acting that—anyway—that you knew and didn't mind and that maybe—"

He paused for breath. "And then it came into our cottage one day," he said, "and I heard you talking to a man. You were telling him how much you loved him and that there could never be any one else. I can remember every word you said. You didn't hear me come in and I went out again.

"Wait a minute," Louise said. "Wait," he went on. "I thought you were just playing with me and it made me mad and it wasn't until tonight that I understood."

"Understood what?" asked Louise.

"What had happened," answered Hal. "That had happened," answered Hal. "That the words I heard, I heard them again over the radio tonight and realized you had merely been rehearsing with someone. You see—I loved you and—"

Louise smiled and said, "Don't tell me here."

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 24 — (CP)— The mining section of Toronto exchange steamed up again today in the silver department but the rest of the board hibernated almost quietly with activity going through at steady prices.

Explorers Gold was up 9 cents, and Wright Hargreaves the same amount, while Hollinger was off 15, Lake Shore 5, Teck-Hughes 3 and Noranda 3.

In the Base Metals Hudson Bay held at 15.10 and Falconbridge Gold at 94 for a gain of a few cents. Sudbury Basin held steady and Big Missouri steady at 47.

Eldorado with the volume leader of the silvers and it doubled its price high for the year at 2.20, holding a gain of 12 cents at 2.01 this afternoon. Bear added 4 cents, Carlin 4, Highland Bell and the small fry of the silvers were up fractions.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—Strength of the silver quotation pushed the bid for Consolidated Smelters up 6 points to 147 in the morning session of Toronto Industrial share market. Nickel lagged around 36 5-8 for a minor recession.

Consumers Gas had a morning gain of a full point while Bell Telephone sold back a point to 127. The power issues were unchanged. In the food shares Canada Vinegars Consolidated Bakeries and National Grocers while Labatt A, Improved 1-8.

Brewing Corporation issues posted moderate gains while Canada Malting was slightly off. In the liquors Alcohol A and B, Distillers Seagrams were down fractions and Walkers Consumers Gas.

Industrial Steel Car and United Steel had gains of minor fractions at noon. A gain of more than a point came out for Goodyear Common.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, April 24 (AP)—Metal shares proved a strong magnet that drew other divisions of the stock market into activity in active trading.

In the Canadian section of the market, Dome improved fractionally, while International Nickel and Canadian Pacific held about unchanged. On the Curb, Lake Shore and Hollinger were fairly steady. Canadian Funds were off 1-16 of a cent at 99 1-3 cents.

Leading shares gaining from around 1-2 to a point or more included Case, Packard, U. S. Smelting, Howe Sound, American Smelting, Consolidated Gas, Commonwealth and Southern Preferred, American Can, Du Pont, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Commercial Alcohol, Liggett and Myers "B", Standard Tin Plate and American Chain.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, April 24.—(AP)—The stock market slowed down in its trading pace during late dealings today but earlier advances of fractions to more than a point were well maintained.

At the beginning of the final hour leading metals, industrials, including aircraft, shares, and Utilities had levelled off a trifle under the earlier peaks, but the tone of the market remained steady to firm.

Shares hr/ding early gains well included Boyce Scond, American Smelting, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Liggett & Myers, Union Pacific, Consolidated Gas and American Telephone. General Motors and Chrysler held about even.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—Movement on the cash section of the Toronto Livestock Market was very limited all today's opening with a few butcher cows the only grade selling. About 500 holdovers and 600 from trade up the supply. Calves, sheep and lambs opened steady while hogs had their usual unsettled opening.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Stockyards branch were: cattle 330; calves 160; hogs 540; sheep and lambs, 460.

Cows were generally 25 cents lower than steady movement at $4.50 to $4.75 for choice and at $3.50 for common.

Calves opened steady under a light supply at $7.00 to $7.50 for choice vealers with occasional top at $8.00. Common, light calves sold at $3.00 to $4.00.

Lambs were steady as best western and Ontario feed-lot supplies sold at $7.00 with medium at $6.00. Spring lambs were scarce. Sheep sold mostly at $1.00 to $3.50 cwt.

Preparations for Commemorating Jubilee Complete

His Worship, Mayor G. O. Tice, states that the arrangements for the Celebration on May 6th of His Majesty The King's Silver Jubilee, in so far as Belleville is concerned have been completed.

The principals of the Public Schools have arranged for the pupils to report at the Schools at the usual time where they will be presented with badges commemorating the event. These badges, donated by the Board of Education bear the pictures of Their Majesties, the King and Queen. The students from each of the Schools will march to the Market Square, where the celebration will commence at 10.30 a.m. The music will be provided by the Bands of the Argyll Light Infantry, Patriotic songs will be sung by the children of the Schools.

The local militia units, comprising the Argyll Light Infantry and the 94th Field Battery, together with the Veterans Organizations and the Collegiate and Vocational School Cadets, will form up on the Armouries Lawn at 10.00 a.m. and will proceed up Pinnacle Street to Station Street, then down Front Street to the Market Square, where a feu-de-joie will be fired by the Argyll Light Infantry.

His Worship, Mayor Tice, will act as chairman and the Chaplain of the Argyll Light Infantry, Major, the Rev. Beauchamp Payne will deliver the Prayer of Dedication.

It is the wish of His Worship the Mayor that as many as possible of the citizens decorate their premises and attend on this occasion. A special invitation is hereby extended all members of the Board of Education and all City Officials.

Obituary

MRS. RACHAEL CONNERS

Death came without warning to Mrs. Rachael Conners, an aged woman, while walking along St. Paul Street near South John Street in this city yesterday afternoon. Frank A. Smith, proprietor of the Belleville-Picton motor bus line, was driving past at the time and seeing the woman collapse, went to her assistance and lifted her into his car. Upon medical aid being sent for, a second death did not occur. No inquest will be held.

The late Mrs. Conners, who was in her 78th year, was born at Newburgh, Ontario, the parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. George Sweet. She was a widow, her husband, Duncan Conners, having died some years ago. For thirty-two years she had resided in this locality and was highly respected by all who knew her. She was a member of the United Church. For some years she had made her home with her daughter, Mrs. A. B. Sexsmith, at 76 Queen George Street.

Surviving her are four daughters, Mrs. A. B. Sexsmith, Belleville; Mrs. Fred Sexsmith, Toronto; Mrs. Ross Godfrey, Oshawa; Mrs. Seymour Shaw, Toronto; four sons, George, of Belleville; Abe, of Strathcona; John, of Belleville; William of Belleville; one sister, Mrs. John Ockden, Belleville; two brothers, Luther Sweet, Napanee, and Robert Sweet of Brentown township, in Lennox county.

R.C.M.P. Constable Arrives in the City

Constable W. J. Johnson of the headquarters detachment of the R.C.M.P., arrived in Belleville on day to join the local detachment under Lance-Corporal J. C. McPhee. Constable Johnston replaces Constable H. Harris, who was moved recently from Belleville to Petawawa. The R.C.M.P. officer has seen previous service in Belleville, being stationed at the C.N.R. station yards for patrol duty.

WARMEST DAY

Wide open doors in business houses throughout the downtown section of the city, pedestrians strolling minus top coats and suit coats unbuttoned, all combined to experienced at ice cream and soda fountains as local stores all proclaimed the swiftly rising temperatures today on the warmest day of the season. A bright sun boosted the mercury to a high point of 60 degrees at noon, pushing ahead up to another inch or so, and bringing a greener tone to lawns of the city and pastures throughout the rural district.

IMPERIAL OIL BOAT TO OPEN SEASON

First boat to enter the local harbor this season is the Imperoil, Acadiaville, Imperial Oil Company carrier, is expected to arrive in port late this afternoon carrying a cargo of gas for the company's local tanks.

LAKE TROUT SPAWN SENT NEXT WEEK

The first consignments of approximately 250,000 lake trout, under culture at the local Dominion Fish Hatchery, Glen Ross, and which are expected to be distributed during the coming week through the northern lakes of Hastings and Prontenac Counties, it was stated at the hatchery today. The large consignment of maskinongs spawn taken from Beaver Creek, Marmora and the Omemee district in Victoria County is expected to be received for culture at the local hatchery this week.

BEGINS SATURDAY, APRIL 27 AND CONTINUES TO SATURDAY, MAY 4

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Tacoma, Wash., April 25 (CP) —Omar, pet octopus at Point Defiance Park, has twins.

This startling discovery was made today by A. M. Jones as he was putting food in the cage.

"Yep," Akin said, "I found two of the critters' little baby octopuses or octopi, or whatever you call them, that you ever saw. Was I surprised? Maybe you'll have to change Omar's name to Olive."

Hamilton, Ont., April 25 (CP) —One reflection fighting fire is believed to have become luncheon for a cat, but two more have arisen to take its place. A female robin daily now may be seen feeding at a kitchen window of the home of Mrs. N. Leitch; and a male at the verandah and bathroom windows of the home of W. G. Anderson.

Saint John, N.B., April 25 (CP) —"I would hate to see licensed to sell stock in New Brunswick, all the fraudulent stock now licensed in Ontario," said A. D. Holyoke, of the New Brunswick Public Utilities Board this afternoon on application of a mining company for permission to sell stock before the Board. The Board reserved decision.

Corunna, Spain, April 25 (CP) —Two women and two men were held on murder charges today following the deaths of three brothers in the wreck of the alleged practice of witchcraft for the cure of influenza. Police claim the four suspects induced the three brothers to submit to strange rites, including submersion in the river at midnight. The three brothers died of pneumonia.

Alba, Mich., April 25 (CP) — Jack is only a mongrel dog, but William Akin, his master, owes him his life.

Palmer entered an arbery while cutting timber on his farm. Bleeding and helpless he scribbled a note, fastened it to the dog's collar, and ordered: "Take this to Moran and the end would be delivered away to the home of A. Moran where Elma, wife of the latter, Moran rec ithe note and ease to Palmer's assistance before he bled to death.

Pullman, Wash., April 25 (CP) —Jealousy made Ray Ely to a fit of green ball and knocked the animal greegy with a right to the jaw at a Brewster dance hall yesterday, Police arrested J. L. Blalock of Moscow, Idaho, on charges of being drunk and disorderly and carrying a concealed weapon. They accused Blalock of wearing "brass knucks" inside a glove when he hit the lion.

Haddonfield, N.J., April 25 — (CP)—Since the homes of two policemen in nearby Camden have been robbed while they were conducting the annual "second" field has decided to play safe. A burglar alarm is being installed in the tax collector's office, which is directly over police headquarters.

Pittsburgh, April 25 (CP)—Unfortunately or unfortunately, depending out as "chorus girls" for their cap ing abilities, Mrs. Ruth McLelland Barclay, the illustrator, what it takes to be a male beauty in a show. Here are her views:

"Skin as far as a London fog and as tough as a cowhide saddle.

"Dainty hands that pack a punch like a mule.

"Legs that do a quarter mile in 50 seconds flat.

"And just a dash of well-emulsified swish."

Mooseomin, Sask., April 25 (CP) —Gladys Maddock, 34, charged with murdering her 76-year-old father in their home near here February 11, was acquitted when Mr. Justice G. E. Taylor took the case from the jury. The Crown had contended the killing was not accidental, the Judge said.

Seattle, April 25 (AP)—Undersheriff Louis J. Forbes, has plotted a ban on kisses in the county jail. Forbes said he had discovered some women prisoners were receiving narcotics, smuggled in by men visitors who would place the powder on their lips for passing it to the inmate during what appeared to be a kiss.

POLICE PROTECT THOSE DESIRING TO CONTINUE WORK

Relief Strikers at Crowland Disperse Without Hint of Plan

MAY READ RIOT ACT

Strikers Ask 25 P.C. Increase in Food and Open Voucher

Crowland, Ont., April 25 —(CP)— Relief strikers at this Welland suburb left the Ukrainian Hall here soon today and by that hour had dispersed. There was no definite indication what they planned, when work would be thrown open at 1.30 to those desiring to work on the Beatrice Sewer Project.

Earlier, crowded rocks had been placed in the hall but investigation revealed no missiles.

Sheriff H. Davidson said he was prepared to read the Riot Act if necessary should trouble develop.

Twenty provincial police officers and a similar number of men were desiring to work.

Crowland, Ont., April 25 (CP)— While heavy reinforcements of Ontario Provincial Police stood by to protect all who desired to go to work, about 300 relief recipients paraded at 10 a.m. in Ukrainian Labor Hall, beside the Beatrice Street sewer project, centre of relief protests, and conferred with the Street now from which they went on strike April 3.

Following arrival last night of 21 extra Provincial officers—three from Toronto—there was quiet in this Welland suburb until strikers resumed their picketing today.

Unemployed were informed last night by Relief Officer W. J. MacMillan that jobs were available today for all who desired and they would be amply protected.

"I've made the announcement, it's up to them," Mr. MacMillan said. He did not know whether anyone would go to work. They planned a meeting before the scheduled start of work to discuss their future course.

Price Third on Relief

Nearly one-third of Crowland's population of more than 3,000 is on relief, William Douglas, one of the strike leaders said, and 900 persons are affected by the strike.

Three hundred men, bread winners for dependents went on strike April 2, demanding an increase in relief from 20 per cent of allowance, relief for single men and an open voucher for clothing.

Douglas said the Provincial Government paid 75 per cent of relief and municipalities paid 25 per cent on the balance. He stated relief recipients were willing to work to the extent of a 25 per cent increase, but would not give labor for the Government's 75 per cent payment.

Only half a dozen men, he said, had returned to work.

"Scabs" Are "Stooging" Cry

Strikers have been called to a mass meeting tonight to "scab" the frame-up" according to placards posted on Welland and Crowland streets. The meeting will be under the auspices of the Canadian Labor Defence League.

Following the announcement by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn in Toronto last night that "any man who wants to work can go to work without fear," and that any man who those who won't work," twenty Provincial Police were sent to Crowland to be in charge of Inspector Chris F. Airey of Niagara Falls, Ont. Officers spent the night in Welland hotels.

Police paraded before Inspector Airey behind Crowland police station. Armed only with nightsticks, they were instructed by him how to act in case of emergency.

Toronto, April 25—(CP)—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn said police officials at the Legislative Buildings today said they were confident the Provincial officers in Crowland could cope with any situation, that might arise from the strike of relief workers.

Regardless of any action the strikers might take, said the Premier, there was nothing to work could do without interference.

Lawlessness will not be permitted he added, and "if they persist in terrorization, breaking heads and damaging property they will go to jail; that's all there is to it."

With reference to reports that relief strikers in London township were picketing highways and demanding subscriptions, the Premier said the practice would be stopped.

HELEN KELLER TEACHER NEAR BLINDNESS

Unless operation shortly to be performed is successful, Mrs. Anne Sullivan Macy, world-famous teacher of blind Helen Keller, will herself be plunged into semi-darkness. Miss Keller (LEFT) now is the comfort of the woman who was her "eyes" for so many years. They are shown in photo. If operation fails, their future will be darkness together in a little farm cottage near Muir-on-Or Scotland.

Belleville Better Days

Belleville Business Men Will Entertain Thousands of Patrons in Big Merchandising Event Beginning Saturday

Last November Belleville business men staged a big merchandising carnival of one week's duration, called Belleville Better Days, excellent values were given with the added inducement of the possibility of winning very valuable prizes. This event was very successful, attracting buyers from near and far, many coming from the north of Bancroft, from Kingston on the east and beyond Cobourg on the west, while Prince Edward County was well represented every day.

The success of the spring drive warrants the Belleville Better Days event which begins Saturday and continues until Saturday, May 4.

Belleville business men have made special efforts to make this event the greatest ever staged in Belleville, and with the experience of the past, and the hearty enthusiasm of all concerned there is no doubt the event will long be remembered with pleasure by all concerned.

Conditions are improving all along the line all over the world and confidence has returned resulting in an increasing demand for all kind of goods with consequent increased employment at producing centres, starting a cycle of prosperity which includes all in its scope.

In this issue of The Ontario Intelligencer the invitations of the merchants are expressed in terms which will interest all readers and save money for the thrifty shoppers who take advantage of the opportunities set forth in the advertisements.

Every page of this paper is of interest to people within one hundred miles of this city, and this special issue will be a welcome guest in fifteen thousand homes this week end. Come to Belleville and bring this paper with you as a guide and chart to your shopping.

Belleville Better Days begins this Saturday and continues until Saturday May 4, with daily feats of supervalues in all the stores listed as participating.

Especially interesting is the list of prizes which will be presented to wise and thrifty shoppers taking advantage of the event.

Read this paper every day for special announcements of great interest to everyone.

Something new every day and something doing every minute.

Only Exceptional Students Should be Sent to Normal

Principal Miller Says at O.E.S. Session in Toronto

OFFERS SUGGESTION

Toronto, April 25—(CP)—"There has been a failure to send on to the normal schools only such students as have developed the ability to think clearly, to speak precisely, to act correctly, to grow continuously and to initiate effectively, all of which are characteristics of a liberal education." Principal Everton A. Miller, of London, Ont., said in an address today to the training section of the Ontario Education Association.

Noting the great increase in the number attending secondary schools with no particular object in view, he said: "These students find it difficult to put much effort into their daily tasks because their morale is being lowered by contemplation of their prospects."

One solution of the problem might be the grafting of graduation certificates from the high schools on a basis of 90 percent on each paper but requiring those seeking admittance to normal schools as well to obtain 70 or 75 per cent on subjects which they intended to teach.

RAHARD GUILTY OF BLASPHEMOUS LIBEL, JUDGEMENT

French-Anglican Church Pastor Fined $100 at Montreal

WORDING OF PLACARDS

Defence Plea Was That Language Was Not Offensive

Montreal, April 25 (CP)—A judgment handed down today by Chief Judge Gustave Pernault declared Rev. Victor Rahard, pastor of the French-Anglican Church of the Redeemer here, guilty of blasphemous libel and condemned him to pay a fine of $100.

Rahard was arrested on a warrant of the Provincial Police charging blasphemous libel against the Roman Catholic Church through the wording of placards placed outside his church on Sherbrooke street East. Guilty police also laid charges against him for violating municipal laws regarding the erection of public signs. Recorder Aime Leblanc, however, dismissed all the charges against him in connection with the city bylaws.

Plea of Defence

Chief plea of Rahard in defence was the placards contained no offensive language and he had said nothing against the Roman Catholic Church not embraced by the Anglican creed. The Crown had maintained the statements on the placards were indecent and scurrilous writings and as they were calculated to offend people professing the Roman Catholic faith.

Notice of Appeal

Notice of appeal was given by defence counsel following sentence. The placard complained of was published in the east end of Montreal, frequented principally by French-Canadian Roman Catholics and was given added force and authority by being headed "Sermon by an Ex-Roman Priest."

The claim of the defence blasphemy produced no alleged except where Christ or Christianity as a whole was attacked under the English Common Law was dismissed by the court. His Lordship quoted a text-book on libel and slander to show "it is the malicious intent to insult the religious feelings of others by words or signs, things they hold sacred, which deserves and merits punishment." He also named a number of cases in the English courts as jurisprudence for his judgement.

Anti-Jew Signs Put on Stadium

Kingston, Ont., April 25.—(CP)— Richardson Stadium, Queen's athletic field, was defaced with anti-Jewish signs of an anti-semitic nature, when men put to work obliterating the signs.

Principal W. H. Fyfe said most of the students are away from Kingston and there was nothing to indicate students were responsible.

The wall of the stadium was almost covered with signs, daubed in black paint. One read "Jews, know thy place".

ERERA IS SUNG

Ottawa, April 25 (CP)—In the presence of a group of political and personal friends the body of the late Senator Henri Beland, prominent Liberal and former Postmaster General, was placed on board a train for his home village of St. Joseph de Beauce today. A brief Liberal service at the little parish church of Christ the King which the Senator attended previous the departure, and Requiem High Mass with Bishop Roy of Joseph. Most Rev. Guillaume Forbes, Archbishop of Ottawa, chanted the Libera, assisted by Father Richard, H. Trudeau and Rene Martin.

DRIVER NOT HELD

London, Ont., April 25 — (CP) — Mervin W. Black, driver of the city street flusher which crushed to death three-year-old Billy Hall, April 9, was freed today in city police court when a charge of manslaughter was dismissed. Black was found blameless by a Coroner's jury.

Vermilyea's 50th Birthday Will be Celebrated Sunday

Last Earthly Sunday and Last Birthday For Condemned Man Unless Department Intervenes

Harold W. Vermilyea, who will observe his 50th birthday on Sunday, April 28th, will distribute portions of a regular birthday cake presented him through donations of jail officials, among the guards who have so closely watched him in his death cell. Since sentence of death was pronounced last February.

Besides the cake, which will probably be minus the customary candles, Vermilyea will be the recipient of other little gifts and special favors to mark the occasion. Prayers daily from death on the specially constructed gallows in the execution yard of the local jail, unless special intervention is made by the Crown, Vermilyea maintains the stoic independence and calmness exhibited since his close incarceration. Although reported to be daily buoyed by the hope of executive clemency from the Department of Justice at Ottawa, following efforts of counsel in his behalf, he declares himself ready to face the eventuality of death. In the event of a commutation of sentence to confinement in an institution it is not expected Vermilyea will be announced from the office of the Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, before April 29th.

It was unofficially learned that the commutation of the death sentence will probably be commenced on Monday next.

Vermilyea since being confined under close guard following the murder of Mrs. Ida Gaines, has gained in weight, some seven or eight pounds. He varied diet of fruits and fresh vegetables and active exercise taken during regular periods in the cell corridor has been responsible for his almost perfect physical condition. Vermilyea's nights are passed in sleep untroubled through the night. During the long and monotonous hours of the day he while away the time by reading, playing games and shuffling of a dog-eared deck of playing cards through involved periods of solitaire. The remainder of the awakening hours are spent in reading the different magazines and periodicals. Newspapers are not part of the reading matter supplied.

THIRD POLITICAL PARTY ASSURED

Father Coughlin Directs Mammoth Rally at Detroit

Detroit, April 25 (CP)—The National Union for Social Justice, turned into a political force at a mammoth rally directed by Fr. Charles E. Coughlin last night, faced the United States Middle West and Canada today, promising to drive the "plutocrats" out of public office. Simultaneously, New York, Philadelphia are under tentative consideration by Father Coughlin and his associates as the next battle grounds in the organization of state units of the National Union.

Flanked by two Senators and four Representatives from Washington, the Detroit Priest pushed his Union to the front as a definite political organization. Last night, Olympia stadium, filled to near capacity by 15,000 persons, set up saives of applause for him and his fellow speakers.

Money and its use, both as profits for manufacturers and bonuses for workers, was attacked by Father drop setting for the political birth of the National Union. Aiding the efforts of Father Coughlin, first at first or 12 state rallies were Senators Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota and Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma and Rep. William Connery of Massachusetts, Martin L. Sweeney of Ohio, Thomas O'Malley of Wisconsin and William Lemke of North Dakota.

Thunderous cheers greeted caustic attacks on profit-makers and International bankers. Every disavowal of established partyism likewise was cheered.

StrongIndictment Against Germany By MacDonald

LONDON, April 25—(AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, in one of the strongest indictments of Hitlerite Germany ever made by a member of the British Government, accused that nation today of destroying European confidence in the outlook for continued peace.

The Prime Minister, in an article written for "News Letter", National Labor organ, charged the Reich with "bowling the road to peace with terrors".

The article said there are Nazis in high authority who are not even giving lip service to the cause of European stability.

"Germany has acted in such a way as to destroy the feeling of mutual confidence in Europe," MacDonald wrote. "It asks other nations to destroy their armies as a peaceful intention which it itself would not accept from its neighbors.

"Other nations cannot be pacified by such insolence and can show ample justification for their refusal.

"Germany has not won the honor and confidence she sought," the article said.

"It has aroused the suspicions of practically every nation in Europe. I do not believe any German, can honestly feel surprised that the conduct of his government has been met with prejudice when the Council of the League of Nations expressed apprehensiveness and misapprobation.

Nothing Too Much

"Leaving the question of the armament of the count for the moment," the Prime Minister wrote in another section of his attack: "How can it possibly be the line to the effect which its colossal armaments were for the sense of security or other nations?

"The most secure nation in the whole of Europe until it aroused suspicions and fears against itself was Germany.

"The people are asking for too much of those, who understand them best and sympathize with them most when they claim, that both their objects and their methods should be accepted without a question of fear or a shadow of suspicion, or that the suggestion Der Tag security, which they rejected at Berlin and the consequences it must have on their ultimate intentions and the part they propose to play in the event of the awakening hours are spent in reading the different magazines and periodicals. Newspapers are not part of the reading matter supplied.

Father Coughlin Directs Mammoth Rally at Detroit

Detroit, April 25 (CP)—The National Union for Social Justice, turned into a political force at a mammoth rally directed by Fr. Charles E. Coughlin last night, faced the United States Middle West and Canada today, promising to drive the "plutocrats" out of public office. Simultaneously, New York, Philadelphia are under tentative consideration by Father Coughlin and his associates as the next battle grounds in the organization of state units of the National Union.

Flanked by two Senators and four Representatives from Washington, the Detroit Priest pushed his Union to the front as a definite political organization. Last night, Olympia stadium, filled to near capacity by 15,000 persons, set up saives of applause for him and his fellow speakers.

Money and its use, both as profits for manufacturers and bonuses for workers, was attacked by Father drop setting for the political birth of the National Union. Aiding the efforts of Father Coughlin, first at first or 12 state rallies were Senators Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota and Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma and Rep. William Connery of Massachusetts, Martin L. Sweeney of Ohio, Thomas O'Malley of Wisconsin and William Lemke of North Dakota.

Thunderous cheers greeted caustic attacks on profit-makers and International bankers. Every disavowal of established partyism likewise was cheered.

ARMY OFFICERS EXCHANGED BY BRITAIN, GERMANY

Pre-War Custom is Revived Between Two Countries

3 OFFICERS EACH

Attached to Corresponding Unit For Six Weeks' Courses

London, April 26 (AP)— Great Britain and Germany have revived their pre-war custom of the exchange of army officers.

Three officers of each country, representing the infantry, cavalry and artillery branches, will be attached to corresponding units in the other nation's army for six weeks' courses, effective immediately.

Two British officers already are in Germany and the first German officer, a lieutenant Von Wick, has arrived at Aldershot.

'Acadialite' is First Boat in

A gold-headed cane, time-honored symbol of the season's opening of navigation for the local port was presented Captain Jenkins, master of the carrier Acadialite, Imperial Oil Company's vessel by chairman Geo. Ostrom, chairman of the Belleville Board of Harbor Commissioners at the local dock last evening following the arrival of the boat in Harbor with a cargo of gasoline for the company's local tanks. The presentation of the cane was made with due formality in keeping with the occasion and the gift, which had been made by chairman Ostrom. Present were other members of the Harbor Commission, including Harbormaster Robt. Goudy. The boat left early this morning after discharging its fluid cargo.

DR. F. W. MERCHANT IS SHOWN HONOR

A portrait of Dr. F. W. Merchant, retired Director of Education for Ontario, painted by E. Wyly Grier, was unveiled in the Coral Hall of Hart House Monday night, following a complimentary dinner to Dr. Merchant tendered by leading members of educational circles in the Province. It will be hung in the Parliament Buildings.

Dr. Merchant is a graduate of Albert College and was a school mate of Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker, of Belleville.

WEATHER

Car Side-Swiped By Large Transport

A serious motor accident was reported late yesterday afternoon at the Cemetery Crossing, when a Smith Transport side-swiped an automobile driven by Mr. William Painter of this city. Under the requirements of the law Mr. Painter, who was driving westward, slowed down at the C.P.R. crossing near the Cemetery. A large Smith transport following in his wake, attempted to pass the motor car and in so doing the trailer of the truck swerved and struck the rear of the Painter vehicle, forcing it to the side of the road. The accident was investigated by the Traffic Patrolman when it was found that the Painter car was badly damaged, but fortunately Mr. Painter escaped uninjured.

Income Tax Office Guarded By R.C.M.P.

Three R.C.M.P. constables under Corporal Christie of the Ottawa detachment, arrived in Belleville last evening to do special guard duty at the local Government Income Tax office. The "Mounties" will be stationed in Belleville for a week or ten days during the collecting of the income tax returns. The constables will be quartered in the Income Tax office during their stay. They were equipped with the conventional red coats, breeches and the usual wide rimmed hat.

CAR OWNERS NOW BUYING 1935 PLATES

Warm weather of the past few days, which has given local car owners the urge to take to the country roads of the district in their machines has resulted in a slight rush at the local office of A. Vermilyea, car license issuer for this district. At the present time an average of 20 new licenses are sold each day.

THOSE ON RELIEF MUST GET DOG TAX

If families on relief in this city wish to keep dogs as pets, then they must pay the dog tax money for needed licenses, it was intimated at the office of the Central Relief Bureau today.

Although a few dogs are kept by relief applicants in the city, their number is reported small, and so far the question of dog and dog taxes has not been a bothersome one. With the drive on by police, however, to have every dog under their pets and secure the needed license, the matter has become a more pressing one for a few families. License tags for their pets must be secured by themselves the local relief office does not officially assume these animals, it was reported.

PURPLE MARTINS INVADE CITY

Purple martins, one of the latest arrivals of the spring birds in this district have entered the city and are now busily engaged in nest building under the eaves and cornices of the downtown buildings. The noisy birds, whose morning matins begin at daybreak have been serving as alarm clocks for Front Street apartment dwellers.

SMALL NUMBER ON REPAIR WORK

A small force of men employed by the local department of public works is engaged in minor road repairing and patching with a cold patch mixture. Some cement work is also being carried on by the department, particularly at the Campbell Street, where the gutters have become badly cracked and worn.

TED' LILL EDITS CPH MERCHANDISING

"Ted" Lill, Managing Editor of CPH Merchandising, is a busy man at home with a Sullivan wrench as he is with a typewriter. He can weld both as well, editor.

Mr. Lill joined the CPH Organization about a year ago, coming directly to his new duties from his probation exercises at Queen's University. In this comparatively short time he has become a well known, and popular, in this industry, particularly through his membership in the Canadian "CPH Travelling Translents Team".

His writings in "Merchandising" have created a stir and given him a welcome into this industry.

Under his supervision a number of associate editors contribute to this reader interest of this and other publication of the Company. His enthusiasm and personality is reflected in every "Merchandising" and has contributed to a large extent to the ready welcome and reception accorded each issue.

All details of production and management of these monthly publications are Mr. Lill's responsibility. To know "Ted" is to again understand the success and popularity of the CPH Organization and its services to this industry. Merchandising.

Mr. Lill is a son of Mr. John Lill of this city.

POLICE COURT

Thursday's Traffic court proved rather short, when only three minor cases were presented before Magistrate F. J. Butler, K.C., today. Thos. Morrow, Frankford, was convicted of a charge of failing to report an accident. Sentence was withheld by the court until Monday. The accused was driving a motor car, that was implicated in an accident at the corner of Station St. and Cannifton Rd. over the week end. A third charge was one of reckless driving, the motorist having his driver's permit revoked for one month. "Maybe the cancelling of individual drivers' licence for a period will curb these reckless drivers."

All slot machine cases, not to have been heard in Monday's police court were disposed of in a special session of police court held yesterday afternoon. The numerous operators all pleaded guilty and were fined $15.00 and costs, the machines in all cases were confiscated. Appeals will be entered in reference to the confiscation, the defendants announced through their counsel.

Only ten truancies, the smallest number in over two weeks, were affords sleeping quarters at the police station last night.

"The Kingston police were notified of the boys' whereabouts and later they were returned to their homes, older and much wiser than when they struck out to see the world.

MUSIC

RECITAL IS GIVEN BY MEN'S CHORUS

Belleville Organization With Frank Oldfield Delights Audience

The annual recital of the Belleville Men's Chorus, under the baton of Mr. Ross Hunter, and with the assistance of the famous Canadian baritone, Mr. Frank Oldfield as soloist, attracted a large number of music lovers to the Collegiate auditorium on Wednesday evening and gave them a program of choruses and lyrics which brought prolonged applause as each number of the extensive program was sung. The applause was insistent at times for encores despite the wide range and the generous offering of numbers by the chorus. When the curtain closed at ten thirty and hid from view the members of the chorus one of the most delightful evenings in Belleville's musical history had been enjoyed.

From the first bars of "God Save the King" sung by the chorus, in a special arrangement, immediate contact was established with the audience, which continued until the "Long Day Closes" by Sir Arthur Sullivan, Mr. Oldfield heard.

The lyrics and the choruses had been happily chosen. The first group included "Bataille Rymn" by A. M. Gaul, "Sweet and Low", "Shadow March" and "Sportloth's "Hail Smiling Morn", which gave a delightful prelude to the feast of song which awaited the audience. Crowley's "Crossing the Bar", the favorite "Syivia" by Oley Speaks, and the humorous number "Don't Dear Old Mother" made the second group. In the third were heard "A Brown Bird Singing" by Haydn Wood, Protheroe's arrangement of "Ho, Weird Melody" "The Old Minstrel", and Faning's "Sing of the Night". The fourth selection threw more groups were sung, "Men of Harlech", "Drift" by Sanderson and "In the Gloaming" in the first; "Rolling Down to Rio" by E. German, "The Little Lamb" by Parks and "Viola" by Bliss Hands in the third; and in the third "Coming Home" by Wilson; "Viking Song" by Coleridge Taylor, and "The Long Day Closes" by Sullivan.

The numbers gave ample opportunity to test the chorus in its ability to express the spirit of a wide a range of song. The volume was full and sonorous, the shading exquisite, the pure tones, basses and baritones were well taken to bring out the riches of harmony awaiting just such treatment as was forthcoming, time and again, the chorus under the musical director succeeded in reaching that organistic finish and effect so desirable for the intensification of the interest in the auditors. The musical director, Mr. Ross Hunter, merited a large measure of praise for the interpretation of the songs, his work showing marked originality in the conception of some of the numbers, and each number was rounded out in fullness and completeness. He had no difficulty in obtaining from the chorus the effects he desired.

After each group sung by the chorus Mr. Oldfield, the well-known Toronto soloist, who is no stranger to Belleville where he has sung on many occasions, sang a group of songs. His voice, rich in tone and always responsive to the sentiment of the numbers, pleased in its manliness and richness. He was more than generous in his responses, to which he poured out song after song. His initial number, "When the Guards are on Parade" by Neville, formed an apt introduction for this rich voice. Then he sang Guilesian's "The House By the Side of the Road" and Rogers' "Because Of The Victor". His second appearance brought "To the Sisters Be Faithfully Rage" from Handel's "Messiah" and a quick example of Mr. Oldfield's gift in comic singing. He sang "Thy Poe" by Mendelssohn and "Dew, Marry Monday" by Stroud. His last group was made up of "The Corral Hip-Hay" from "The Dream Girl", the rollicking "Devonshire Cream and Cider" by Shepherd and the immortal song. "Who is Sylvia" by Schubert. As an encore "I Came By Your Window".

Mr. Alec Gordon won a large share of applause by the excellence of his accompaniment for chorus and soloist.

The members of the chorus are:—1st Tenors—President and General Manager; S. R. Burrows, Secretary-Treasurer; Ross Hunter, Musical Director; Alec Gordon, accompanist.

Solo Tenor—James Bankier, M. Edmund Day, Alfred Evans, Albert Moore, Joseph Rogers, Wm. Spalding, W. A. Skoog, Ernest Wheatley, Mus. Bac.

Second Tenors—Dr. Brown, J. Y. Doyle, Gardiner Duff, Albert Hillman, Wm. Norris, Tom McRae Allen Schryver.

First Bass—Harold Barrett, Wm. Coleman, Thomas Colclough, D. Morley Day, Bert Hopston, Harold Howard, Fred Sprague Jr.

Second Bass — S. R. Burrows, Glen W. Cassidy, Wm. Connor, H. N. Bateman, Fred W. Sprague, J. Lester Shields, B.A. J. Arnold Thomson.

KINGSTON BOYS TO RETURN HOME

Found Wandering in City After Riding a Freight

"It must be in the air."

Directly following the apprehension of two Peterboro boys in Belleville yesterday, who had run away from home and were returned to their parents, two Kingston youths were found wandering aimlessly on Front Street late last night. The lads, after being questioned by P. C. Taylor, admitted they had run away from their homes in Kingston.

The boys, Fred Washer, aged 15, and William Watts, age 13, were observed by the local police acting rather strangely near the city hall at midnight. P. C. Taylor accosted the boys and after learning they had struck out to see the world, took them to the police station, where they admitted boarding a freight train at Kingston and riding as far as Belleville yesterday.

"Where were you going?" asked Sergeant Booth, the night sergeant on duty.

"Oh, we were just out to see the country but we got homesick and have gone as far as Toronto to see a real big city," added one of the lads rather sheepishly.

"Where did you intend to sleep and eat?" asked the officer.

"To tell the truth we never gave that a thought until we got hungry a few times to eat and this tramping around is not the fun we thought it was," was the answer.

REVISION TEXT-BOOKS MAY BE UNDERTAKEN

Certain Chemistry and Geometry Will Be Changed Next Year

Toronto, April 25.—(CP)— The time has come to undertake a complete revision of text-books, Duncan Marshall, Deputy Minister of the Provincial Department of Education stated in addressing delegates to the 74th annual convention of the Ontario Educational Association.

Mr. Marshall, announcing incidentally there would be new text-books in Grade 13 Chemistry next year, yesterday said there was a serious danger in the use of authorized texts, and that teachers should be allowed more freedom in the choice of material for teaching.

In connection with the proposed new course, which would be introduced into Secondary Schools in the future, the Deputy Minister said, it would lie in the direction of a four-year course, that would be capable of division into two units. The first would be complete in itself, yet would lay an adequate foundation for the second.

Refusing to put the Association on record by taking a vote, members of the Separate School Trustees section approved of the entire abolition of promotion by examination. G. J. Driscoll of Sarnia, said there were cases of discrimination by teachers.

BABY BADLY BURNED

Markham, Ont., April 25.—(CP)— Three-year-old Mary Blake was seriously burned, when her clothing caught fire, while playing near a bonfire.

William Buchan, neighbor, grasped a blanket from a clothesline and smothered the flames, which had almost consumed her clothing.

Dr. J. A. McDonald stated her condition is critical.

SENATOR BELAND

The death of Senator Beland which came so suddenly at Kingston on Monday removed one of the outstanding Canadians of a past era. Though he was still in his sixties, he had figured years ago in some of the outstanding events in the memory of the people of Canada. The very flower of that courtesy which is so marked a quality of French and French-Canadian culture, Dr. Beland, who was travelling in Switzerland on his wedding journey when the war broke out, hastened to the native land of his bride, Belgium. There he served with the Belgian surgical hospital staff and was made a prisoner of war, because he would not leave what he felt was his duty. He spent years in a German prison camp attending to the sick and wounded men of all races. Then in 1916 his wife died, after she had been refused the privilege of seing him before she passed away. What honor the great and gallant King Albert of Belgium could give this medical warrior and servant he gave. Canada, too, did its duty by him, all parties allowing him to be re-elected by acclamation in the election of 1917. After the war he was re-elected in 1921 for the sixth time for Beauce, Quebec, and became Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment and Health in the King administration. He went to the Senate in 1926.

His death at a comparatively early age no doubt is a consequence of the ordeal through which he passed as a soldier-doctor.

Canada mourns the passing of the heroic and kindly spirit of this warrior who brought relief to suffering humanity.

INCOME TAXATION

The final day for the income tax returns with full or part payment is near at hand and the district office is rapidly becoming a place of greater activity as reports are brought in.

Those taxpayers are wise who make their payments early as they avoid the rush.

Taxpayers are becoming almost accustomed to the heavy demands of governments for income tax payments which this year saw no signs of a let-up or easing-up. Those with the higher incomes this year face the new surtax which means a considerable amount in new taxes. For the year ending March 31st, 1934 (which is largely dealing with 1932 returns), reports showed that there were 208,957 persons who paid income tax. It was in this year 1932 that the rates were increased and the exemptions reduced from $2400 to $2000 in the case of $1200 to $1000. The amount of income tax paid for the year ending March 31st, 1934, was $29,183,714. The number of taxpayers a large proportion included those with small incomes, the actual number with under $2,000 per year being 93,316 or over 45 per cent of the total. This is the class of course which feels the tax most. As earners they can not pass the tax on to anyone else. In the next higher class (those with incomes of $2,000 to $5,000) there were 46,207 taxpayers. Even the wealthier individual bears the impost with effort because, for instance, 307 persons with incomes in excess of $50,000 paid between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000; an average of $28,618, and making up some thirty per cent of all taxes paid. A heavy collection came from the class between $10,000 and $15,000, with a total of $2,735,469.

Opposition to the impose is based on the ground that the taxpayer with the smaller income in paying has to stint himself or herself while the man with the larger income of say $50,000 sees over $28,000 on the average slip away in the form of income taxes. Opponents of the tax claim that this is a brake upon the ability of citizens with large means to employ their revenues in the expansion of business, the provision of employment and in some other productive manner. In short the flow of money for investment is checked they claim and the incentive to develop dulled.

This is the situation which is faced these last few days of the month before the thirtieth of April, by which date reports must have been filed and at least a part payment made.

Those who earned money enough last year to be taxed have had to be very careful that they had money left for the purpose of paying this year the tax on last year's income.

TEA DECLARED HARMLESS

Ten thousand chemists were told the other day in New York at a meeting of the American Chemical Society that tea is harmless and should be completely vindicated of the suspicion that it contains an alkaloid. Tests had been made with albino rats, some were given water only with their food, others received tea of average strength and the rest received tea leaves. The finding was "the results translated into terms of human experience indicate that the drinking of even abnormally large amounts of tea should have no harmful effects on human beings; in the same ration to body weight, a 150-pound and would consume 48 cups of tea daily."

Another shock was the advice offered to use grass as a substitute for spinach in the case of those who could not afford the costly food. Tests made in the feeding of poultry showed that young cereal grasses as oats, wheat, barley, and rye, when cut prior to jointing in twenty days, have a biologic value from 200 to 300 per cent higher than any of twenty common vegetables.

It was also reported that a man who has just brushed his teeth has three hours more of protection from cavity-digging acids than a man who has not brushed his teeth in 24 hours.

It was also reported that a new centrifugal machine could be used to take the head-spin out of young whiskey by spinning it at high speeds. Explanation was that the centrifugal action assembled the fusel oils or heavy alcohols, further from the spinning centre and left the whiskey nearer the centre as drinkable as if it has been aged four to eight eight years in charred oak barrels.

FARM HELP NOT PLENTIFUL

In times like these with so few jobs offering, one would expect to find thousands of young single men seeking employment on the farm. That, however, is not the case. In fact young men willing to accept farm jobs for the summer are surprisingly few. Farmers offering up to $20 per month with board and washing for eight months and meeting with a disappointing response.

One would expect that in every community there would be young men not needed at home who would be willing to engage with neighbor farmers for the summer; and it is reasonable to conclude that on the unemployed lists of towns and cities there can be found the names of young men with previous farm experience. If such men do exist they are certainly not coming forward and asking for employment that provides a good living in addition to a fair wage.

The alarming feature of this situation is the scarcity of farm help in a time when so many men are unemployed and relief expenditures have grown to such staggering figures. There are grounds for the suspicion that relief policies are destroying the morale of young men and ruining them for life. It is bad enough to burden the people with a load of debt and impair the nation's credit; but if relief expenditures go further and break down the morale of the young men, then some measure of economic reform cannot be introduced a day too soon.

The authorities who administer the social and welfare legislation of the provinces and the Dominion would be well advised to consider this problem very carefully and gather some data in regard to farm employment which will have a direct bearing on welfare and relief policies.—Farmer's Advocate.

FIGHTING ANIMAL

That man is a fighting animal is a favorite saying of militarists, but it might be nearer the truth to say that he likes to see other people fight, or read about fighting. Some specimens of hockey, lacrosse, prize fights, wrestling matches and other strenuous sports have a rudimentary advice to their favorites, urging them in inflict bodily injuries on their opponents. But these remarks do not imply any inclination to take part in the encounter. A desire to see somebody hurt is not always accompanied by a willingness to accept a blow on the chin. The saying that man is a fighting animal is often heard from gentlemen who shun any kind of physical encounter, and who are shocked by the sight of a black eye as something decidedly not respectable. Some, too, are fat and scant of breadth, or past the age for any form of athletic exercise. Their love of fighting is academic rather than practical and is amply satisfied by reading red-blooded novels and accounts of battles, or by observing the conflicts of gladiators.—London Advertiser.

VITAL SCHOOL REFORMS

At a time when most of the changes suggested for our educational system are in the nature of economies, it is a great relief to hear sound form preached, as it was the other day by Prof. Duncan McArthur, Deputy Minister of Education for Ontario.

Prof. McArthur advocates two changes which are of paramount importance. First, he suggests organization of a four-years high school course for students who do not intend to go to university; secondly, he would take some of the best teachers in the second and third years of them in the primary schools, on the ground that it is the latter establishments that real teaching ability is most needed.

In regard to the first reform, little need be said. The university has dominated the high school too long and its influence has been stultifying.

Thi teacher's art is that of imparting knowledge and of training and developing. And the first-class teacher never injures the pupil by becoming too interested in the subject. The brilliant teacher is just as much the one who can get a child to enjoy and appreciate Little Red Riding Hood as the one who can interpret Euripides' "Electra" to a senior matriculation group. And the true teaching genius is needed more in the lower grades than anywhere else.—Hamilton Herald.

EVEN TODAY

Oh, who would be a prophetess,
Foreseeing distant things
And drawing from the future's face
The veil which round it clings?

For any scene, however bright,
Is still less fair than hope;
And hope goes ever dancing on
Where feet, uncertain, grope.

Now dawns a day of hours as gold
As apples on a tree,
And who can guess how sweet its fruits
Or what the yield will be?

And then a day like violets,
All memories and dreams,
Comes up the east; O, who would trade
For facts its mist-wreathed gleams?

However dear the joys we know,
Hope's joys are dearer yet;
Who knows what even today may bring
Before its sun has set?

—Aline Michaelis.

THE FAMOUS PIECE OF JAW-BONE found three years ago in East Africa by Dr. Louis S. B. Leakey, young English anthropologist, and described as "the most ancient fragment of true man yet discovered," may not be so old after all. Prof. Percy G. H. Boswell, of the Imperial College of Science and Technology, London, recently returned from a study of the East African site, and reported to the British Scientific magazine Nature, that he could find no proof that the fragment really was old. Many anthropologists, however, hold with Doctor Leakey that the jaw-bone is possibly 1,000,000 years old.

IN A CONCERTED DRIVE against counterfeiters, illicit distillers, narcotic and smuggling rings, the Treasury Department on March 15 hurled an enforcement army of nearly 12,000 men into the greatest offensive against crime ever staged in the United States. By Monday morning 2,380 arrests had been made for violations of laws under the Treasury Department's jurisdiction. This was the result of two weeks of careful, secret, preparation and a sudden combing of the underworld.

A large percentage of those arrested will be forced to face charges of non-payment of income tax, illegal as well as legitimate income being subject to taxation. This, it will be recalled, was the method used to convict Al Capone.

The agencies participating in the drive were the Income Tax Unit, which made the largest number of arrests, the Narcotics Bureau, the Customs Bureau, the Secret Service, Coast Guard and and the Special Intelligence Section of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Local authorities co-operated with the Federal Government in the round-up.

Property seized by the various enforcement sections was estimated to be worth several millions of dollars.

BRANTFORD INDIAN RESERVE MAY MOVE TO U.S.A.

Canada's Six Nations Indians may leave the reservation at Brantford and live in the United States under the government of hereditary chiefs according to reports. A delegation of three Indians, including Chief Chauncey Garlow, have left Brantford to take part in conference of Six Nations Indians in Syracuse. The conference will discuss whether or not the Six Nations Indians will support the Wheeler-Howard bill in the United States Congress which provides self-government for the Indians without interference from the whites. STIRLING

EASTER CANTATA AT ST. ANDREW'S

Mr. Stanley Northrope, Violinist of Peterboro is Guest-Artist

Stirling—In presenting their second annual Easter cantata in St. Andrew's church on Good Friday evening the choir of the church gave a remarkable performance before a crowded auditorium of enthusiastic lovers of good music. Under the direction of Charles E. Allen, musical director of St. Andrew's church, the whole production one of the most outstanding musical concerts offered in this community for many years.

The beautifully decorated church was almost filled long before 8.15 which was the appointed time for the preceding recital, given by the visiting artists to start. Special soloists were present from Peterborough and Campbellford to assist with the solo work in both the recital and the Cantata.

The efforts of the decorating committee headed by A. Duncan and Rev. J. A. Koffend, were highly commendable on this occasion, and as the visitors assembled in the dimly lighted auditorium the lovely appearance of the church served to create an Easter spirit. Silently the audience observed the beauty of the floor decorations as they patiently awaited the beginning of the program.

The front of the church was banked high with flowers of all sorts as arranged by Mrs. R. Ward, suspended from the ceiling, over the head of the choir, was an enormous white cross, around the base of which was a huge silver crown. Light effects created by concealed spotlights gave this decoration which was emblematic of the cantata itself, namely, "Cross and Crown", by E. L. Ashford, added greatly to the appearance of the church.

At 8.15 the members of the choir took their places, the ladies dressed in white and the men in the regular evening dinner jacket. The two contrasting colors were very effective under the soft glow of delicately coloured arc lights. Rev. J. A. Koffend at this time addressed the gathering with a few remarks of welcome and requested on behalf of the choir that the audience refrain from any applauding throughout the evening. This was a sacred cantata and it was the wish of the choir that all present would catch the significance of it. The National Anthem was then played softly as the choir and the audience remained standing in silence.

In the recital Mr. Stanley Northrope, violinist, of Peterborough, thrilled his listeners with a group of splendid solos. Though his others was all of the more difficult nature, he gave them with apparent ease and confidence. Mr. Northrope has appeared in Stirling before and his ability as a musician is well known to these parts. He was accompanied at the piano by his brother, Mr. J. Northrope who is also an accomplished musician.

Between each group of numbers given by Mr. Northrope, vocal numbers were offered by Miss Dorothy Sager, of Peterborough, and Mrs. Gemma Melikejohn of Watson of Campbellford. Miss Iverlea Scott also gave a fine piano solo. Miss Sager offered in her group of songs, "There is a Green Hill Far Away," by C. S. Gounod, and "Blest Redeemer". Mrs. Watson's numbers were "Hosannah" and "I Was For You." This was an outstanding recital which embraced a group of genuinely talented artists.

With the completion of the recital, the choir supported by Miss Sager, Mrs. Watson, Mr. J. Cluie, of St. Paul's church, Stirling, Miss Snider and Miss Ketchmon of Frankford, and Miss Laura Mason of Springbrook, began the first part of the Cantata, the solo parts of which were taken by Miss Sager, Mrs. Watson, Mrs. Roy Eggleton, Mrs. Chas. Parrey, Mr. G. L. Cluie and Rev. J. A. Koffend. The following numbers were given in their respective order:

Chorus—"The Lord Will Arise."

Soprano Solo (Mrs. C. Parrey)—"Weeping May Endure for a Night."

Alto Solo (Miss Sager) — "Then Was Jesus Led Up."

Bass Solo (G. L. Cluie)—"And the Tempter Came."

Chorus—"If Thou be the Son of God."

Soprano Solo (Mrs. Fargey) — "But He Answered and Said."

Quartette—"Man Shall Not Live by Bread Alone."

Bass Solo (G. L. Cluie)—"Then the Tempter Taketh Him Up."

Chorus—"If Thou Be the Son of God."

Soprano Solo (Mrs. Fargey) — "He Shall Give His Angels Charge Over Thee."

Choir—"And in Their Hands."

Miss Solo—"Then He Taketh Him Up."

Choir—"All These Things Will I Give Thee."

Soprano Solo—"Then Said Jesus."

Choir—"He Shall Charge His Angel Legions."

Tenor Solo and Chorus — "Hosanna in the Highest."

Soprano and Alto Duet—"Blessed is He."

Soprano Solo—"Ride on O King."

Male Voices—"Gethsemane."

Alto Solo and Quartette — "The Shadow of The Cross."

End of Part One.

At this point in the program Mr. Stanley Northrope played as a violin solo Handel's Largo, accompanied by his brother at the piano.

Part Two—The Crown

Baritone Solo—"The Strife is O'er."

Soprano Solo—"Christ Our Passover."

Double Quartette with Soprano Obligato—"Abide With Me."

Alto Solo—"Come Gracious Spirit."

Quartette — "And It Came to Pass."

Chorus—"Lift Up Your Heads." "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name."

Benediction.

After the program, the members of the choir were the guests at a fine social-gathering at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Koffend, where a delicious lunch was served by the ladies and a few appropriate speeches were given by several present. Mr. Koffend spoke of the pride with which he had viewed the achievements of St. Andrew's choir, and also of the musical ability of his director, Mr. Chas. E. Allen, whose efforts were largely responsible for the success of the evening. Mr. Allen thanked all the members of the choir for the splendid help done their part by attending all the rehearsals; to those from other places who had so given of their time. He was especially grateful to Miss Sager, Mrs. Watson, the Northrope brothers, Miss Ketchmon and Miss Snider of Frankford, Miss Laura Mason and Mr. J. L. Cluie, and also to Mr. and Mrs. Koffend who had offered the use of their home to make this social gathering possible.

Before taking his departure, Mr. Stanley Northrope responded to the many requests for one more number and played the ever-popular "Play, Fiddle, Play." The entire evening was an enjoyable one for the audience and the choir too who felt that their efforts had been well worthwhile.

Special Service at St. Andrew's Church

Conducting a special Easter service on Sunday evening, Rev. J. A. Koffend delivered a very inspiring message on the "Trial of Jesus Christ". A special song service of Easter hymns preceded the regular period of worship during which Mr. Arthur Duncan sang as a solo, "There is a Green Hill Far Away" by Gounod, and the choir rendered a special anthem.

In his introduction, Mr. Koffend related the story of the trial of a French officer who was tried for treason and convicted because of his racial prejudice. He was a Jew by birth, though he served faithfully in the ranks of the French army. At his trial he was shorn of his stripes and honors, and marched through the streets of Paris in disgrace. Three trials were brought about before he was proven innocent. Prejudice convicted him. Christ was never really tried. He was convicted without a fair trial by the prejudice of those in authority. Witnesses were paid and told what evidence to give, and each heard the testimony of the other. He was doomed before His trial, which was just a form of ceremony, but not carried out in the laws of the land of men. We as individuals are the judges. "We may be like Pilate, and say, 'no fault in this man,' or we may betray Him as did the Galilian readily offer to do, or we may try Him fairly by giving Him a rightful place in our hearts. We have it within our power to be a good judge and accept Christ or turn Him away. "We are always influenced by any guest manager, either for or against Christ," stated Mr. Koffend. "We are either drawn close to Him by it or more steadfastly set against Him."

This was a very fine Easter service, and the message brought by Mr. Koffend was inspiring and very suitable for the occasion.

Miss Geraldine Conley, Reg. N., of Toronto, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. A. Conley.

Mrs. Sopha and son Maitland visited over the week-end with her daughter, Mrs. Clarence Clarke.

Miss Ruth Emerson spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sid Williams.

Dr. Fred Lewis of Toronto was a week-end visitor at the home of Mrs. A. Conley.

Miss Helen Jones of Corbyville is spending the Easter holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Sandercock and family of Belleville were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Armstrong.

MANY SPEAKERS FOR FUNCTION

Royal Empire Society Meets in England at Jubilee Time

Oxford, England. — The annual summer school of the Royal Empire Society draws many visitors from overseas, and will have a specially large attendance this year of the Jubilee. Many important speakers have been arranged for the three weeks' school, to be held from July 13 to 27 next.

To mark the occasion Sid Webster Lawrence, with his Majesty's special permission, will speak on "The Crown." Sir Walter was chief of staff when the King (as Prince of Wales) visited India.

Other speakers provisionally arranged include Rt. Hon. British cabinet ministers, Sir John Simon, Walter Runciman and Leslie Hore-Belisha; the solicitor-general, Sir Donald Somervell, and two ex-cabinet ministers, the Marquis of Lothian and Lord Amulree.

Lord Bledisloe, retiring governor-general of New Zealand, Sir Edward Grigg, former governor of Kenya, Sir Alan Anderson, chairman of the Orient Line, Sir Basil Blackett, A director of the Bank of England, Professor R. Coupland, Admiral Sir Howard Kelly, Sir John Marriott and Sir Arnold Wilson, will also be present.

Members of the school will be lodged in Wadham, St. John's and Somerville colleges. There will be a number of garden parties, facilities for games and visits to places of interest, including Windsor Castle and the Royal Air Force airdrome at Abingdon.

POOR WILL HAVE JUBILEE BOUNTY

London to Spend $163,000 in Festivities, Mostly in Benefits

London.—Plans of the London advisory council for the London celebrations of the King's Silver Jubilee indicate the county council proposes to spend $163,000 on the festivities, most of it for the benefit of people in hospitals and institutions and the school children.

The council's employees are to receive a day's holiday with pay on Jubilee Day, May 6, the general national holiday. In addition to the general public holiday elementary school children in London may be given two extra half day holidays.

In public assistance institutions all inmates will be entertained May 6 with special fare, while recipients of outdoor relief will be granted an additional two shillings for each adult and one shilling for each child.

The London county council will also take its part in the general celebrations. The council will illuminate Guildhall during the celebrations, fireworks will pump Sheaffs jets of water 100 feet into the air, and a Jubilee concert will be held in the Royal Albert Hall.

THIEF GANG FIRES CONSTABLE'S AUTO

Toronto, April 24 (CP)— East York thieves who are believed to have been carrying out robberies under cover of the diversion created by setting fire to cars in nearby districts, were thought by police today to have been the persons responsible for a daring attempt on a garage safe next door to the home of Constable Herbert Darnborough.

Later they tried to set fire to the constable's car but the fuse went out before it reached the gasoline tank.

Mr. William Wilson, Front St., returned from Windsor today.

Ex-Mayor Eardley Wilmot, now resident of Brantford, is a visitor in the city for a few days.

Miss Rita Rashotte spent the week-end with her parents at Wellington.

Mrs. Goldie Jackson, Church St., is in Toronto visiting with her niece, Miss E. Louise Bush.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Trump, Pine Street, entertained members of St. George's Guild to a social evening for Mrs. Raynor, Rinecker Avenue, who is leaving this week to make her home at Minico. The evening was spent in games and table prizes being awarded to the winners, Mrs. W. Parry, President of the Guild presented Mrs. Raynor with a lovely bridge set and the recipient replied briefly. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess, closing the enjoyable function with "Auld Lang Syne."

The afternoon tea and sale of home-cooking which was held in the Parish House, Wednesday afternoon by the Women's Guild of St. Thomas' Church, was highly enjoyable and successful. Spring flowers and pussywillows in the decoration of the tea table and the tea room produced a very pleasing effect. Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne and Mrs. F. W. Potter, President of the Guild, received. Mrs. David Jones and Mrs. Geo. M. Gerrard poured tea. The serving was nicely attended to by Mrs. Mrs. Wm. Keel, Miss Norman and Miss Alice Potter. The home-cooking table was in charge of Mrs. Fleming and Mrs. R. G. Wilkinson. Mrs. John Watson acted as treasurer during the afternoon.

MOHAWK WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular April meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the Council House. The meeting opened by singing the Ode followed by the Lord's Prayer, with the President, Mrs. Bedo presiding. The Roll Call was answered by current events. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

Mrs. Robert Hall gave some very good suggestions for the holiday, planned May 24th. Mrs. Gilroy, Shannonville, Dist. President, Mrs. Simmons, Latta, District Secretary and Mrs. Murphy, Shannonville, representative for Federation Board were the guest speakers.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the ladies for their many helpful remarks.

A program consisting of vocal solos by Mrs. Clem Maracle was enjoyed, also a piano duet by Mrs. Gordon Hall and Mrs. John Brant and a recitation by Miss Etta Bell. At the conclusion the committee in charge served delicious refreshments.

WEST HUNTINGDON

ADDRESS MEETING OF CHEESE CO.

Jos. Wilson and E. Pyear Speak Before Stockholders

West Huntingdon, April 25—Busy, busy, is the word out here. The fine dry weather has rushed the spring seeding. The farmers report that the land never worked better, even the low lands are sufficiently dry to work down properly. The ladies also are extra busy endeavouring to finish the house cleaning in record time.

The Endeavours class held their monthly social evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Reid on Victoria Ave. on Tuesday evening. A fine time was had presided over this very interesting program. Mrs. J. J. Wilson of Stirling was a visitor and assisted with the worship period. After the minutes of last meeting and Roll Call, Messrs. John Moorcroft and Frank Hammond each gave excellent readings. Melville Reid and Francis gave a duet. Melville Donnan read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. Sandy McCurdy closed the meeting with prayer, after which the members enjoyed an excellent lunch and apple contest.

The stockholders of the local Cheese Manufacturing Co. held a meeting in the Orange Hall on Tuesday evening.

Messrs. Joe Wilson and Ed. Pyear of Stirling were the special speakers. Mr. Wilson is the Agricultural Representative and Mr. Ed. Pyear the newly appointed Director of the Marketing Board.

Each spoke of the advantages of what this new direct way of shipping of cheese to the Old Country would mean to the farmers. At the conclusion of the address a vote was taken and all of those present voted in favor of shipping the cheese direct. It was pointed out that it only costs about one cent per pound to ship our cheese to England, but we were being charged eight cents which goes to prove that some one is profiting great out of the cheese industry than do the farmers who have all the hard work!

The special Easter services which were held in the United Church on Easter closed on Sunday with a communion service. On Friday evening, Rev. R. J. Merriam showed lantern slides on the trial and crucifixion of our Lord.

Mr. Blake Ketcheson of Moira then gave an inspiring address. A quartette composed of Mrs. William Pitchett and Messrs. Frank Hammond, Melville Reid and Lloyd McCauley of Fuller sang two selections, also the Misses Verna Reid and Norma Ketcheson of Moira delighted with a duet "Alone."

At all of the Church then was also special Easter music the choir was assisted by Mr. Arthur Hammond.

Mr. Harry Thompson of Stirling and Rev. Hoffend gave the solo "The Old Rugged Cross."

Mr. and Mrs. John Haggerty have taken up residence in their home on Front Street after spending the winter months in Toronto.

Mr. Chas. Moran principal of the public school is spending the Easter holidays at his home in Smithfield.

Miss Evelyn McIlroy principal of the Continuation School, Foxboro, is spending the holidays at her home here.

Ray and Gerald Donnan are spending this week with their grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Sharpe of Mount Pleasant.

Mrs. Blanche Reid is moving her household effects into the vacant house belonging to Mrs. Volney Richardson of Ridge Road, and in a few weeks will be occupying there permanently.

Mrs. William Hammond is spending a few days with her daughter Mrs. Melville Yeteman of 2nd of Thurlow.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Parpey of Detroit and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cooley and Bobby of Campbellford were Sunday guests of Mrs. Sarah Parpey.

Miss Eva Wilson of Toronto was the guest of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Jas. S. Wilson a few days recently.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Hazzard of Moira were tea guests on Saturday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Donnan.

Mr. and Mrs. John Moorcroft entertained twenty-two of their friends from Madoc on Friday.

Miss Ida [illegible] spent Thursday as guest of Mrs. Elmer Post.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandy McCurdy and family were tea guests on Sunday of Mrs. M. Humphrey of Consecon.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Downing and son George of Ottawa were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McInroy.

A large number of the officials of the United Church attended the board meeting at Moira on Monday evening.

Mr. Philip Carr is attending the ratepayers association meeting held in Toronto this week.

Mr. John Ashley of the Bank of Montreal, Belleville, spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ashley.

The Misses Evelyn and Marjory McInroy spent Tuesday as guests of their sister Mrs. Frank Campion of Marmora.

Some of our people who belong to the Standard Church attended an all day service held in the Standard Church, Ivanhoe on Sunday.

Mr. Thomas Fleming of Ivanhoe loaded a car of oats at the C.N.R. depot here last week the price was 35c per bushel.

Mr. and Mrs. George Varty and family of Toronto were guests a couple of days recently of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Haggerty.

Mrs. F. Wilson, Donald and Glen spent Sunday as guests of Mrs. J. T. Wilson, Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Forsythe and son spent a day recently at Mr. Harry Thompson's.

A large number of our people attended the funeral of Mrs. Andrew McGee, Ridge Road last Friday.

A motor accident occurred on Front Street on Monday evening. When Mr. A. Ashley accompanied by Messrs. Geo. Post and Peter McIlwain were going to the board meeting at Moira, due to the rain and glaring lights Mr. Ashley failed to notice a car parked in front of Mr. Pitman's residence and in order to miss hitting the parked car he crossed the road just as another car was proceeding north causing the two cars to shake hands in a somewhat rapid fashion, fortunately no great amount of harm was done either car. Both were able to proceed under their own power and a considerable settlement was made between the owners of cars in the accident.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Ashley entertained Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wood and George, Mr. John Wood of Ivanhoe and Miss Margaret Bateman on Sunday.

CENTENARY W.A.

The April meeting of the Woman's Association was held at the home of Mrs. Ackins, Bridge Street, thirty-two being present.

Mrs. Ackins, the president, opened the meeting with hymn 4, and also led in prayer.

Mrs. Harry sang The Crumbler's Song, which was much appreciated. After the reading of the minutes and roll call, Miss Aikens gave a splendid reading entitled "The Minister's Wife." Much business was done and proceeds of the day were $8.00. A sumptuous dinner was served at noon by the hostess and the ladies present were Mrs. Nettie Parley of Belleville and Messrs. Don. Harty and Jas Jeffs, evangelists, who were holding revival service in Centenary Church.

W. M. S.

The W.M.S. of Centenary church held its April meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Aikens, Mrs. Roy Thrasher, president. The hymn 118 for the opening chorus and Mr. Harry led in prayer. Mrs. Thrasher gave a splendid and inspiring talk on 8 points of W.M.S. work. The minutes were read by Secretary Mrs. J. Radford and the meeting was handed over to Mrs. J. Kelley, group leader No. 4, who opened the programme with hymn No. 384, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," saying a few words regarding the author, Joseph Scriven, and pointing out the blessings received by countless number through the singing of the hymn.

Mr. J. O'Neil led in prayer after which hymn 179 was sung. "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" in memory of Passion Week. The Scripture lesson, Luke 10, 25, 37 was read by Mrs. Jas. Radford, after which reading "Others" was given by Mrs. R. Nicholson, in connection with our motto for the year 1935.

Miss Hazel Keen gave a fine reading entitled "An Understanding Heart".

Rev. Mr. Plant and Mr. Don. Harry sang a duet, "He was Nailed to the Cross".

Mrs. Douglas Holton gave the "Temperance" reading and Mrs. Carrison, Peace Secretary, gave a splendid reading on "Peace". Mrs. Will Calvert ended with the public reading story of "Blind Mary". Rev. Mr. Plant closed with prayer.

The members of Centenary Women's Association held a "Hard Times" Social on Monday night, April 22, a splendid supper of baked beans, Irish stew, Johnnie cake, etc., was thoroughly enjoyed with a good deal of merriment, as most of those present came attired in hard-time costumes. Rev. Mr. Plant ably acted as chairman and opened the programme with community singing. Mrs. D. Holton put on a Flower Garden Contest, and the winners were Mrs. F. Aikens and Mrs. W. Calvert. Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hubbel and Mr. and Mrs. F. Bolton were judges for the costumes and Mrs. Cassidy was presented with the ladies' prize and Mrs. Harold Cummings with the gent's prize, the presentation being made by Mrs. E. Hubbel.

Those taking part in the programme were, Miss Mildred Cassidy and Edwin Hart, guitar and singing; Miss Lena Sutherland, reading; Messrs. Arthur Calvert, violin, and Gordon Charlton, banjo. Solo given by Mrs. W. Calvert accompanied by son Alexander, guitar. Reading by Mrs. J. Kelley. Prize for the evening were $15.00. The GOLT. girls had great success with their "fish pond".

Messrs. Harry of Vancouver and O'Neil of Belfast, Ireland, have been for the past three weeks holding revival services in Centenary church, also assisting during the Sunday services and in the Sunday School; also visiting the sick and shut-in in the community and the public school. They were clever and earnest preachers and spiritually has been accomplished. They left on Saturday for Bloomfield church. Rev. Mr. Blanchard, pastor, in charge.

HAND IS DRAWN INTO MACHINERY

Victor Taylor, East Seymour, Suffers Fracture of Wrist

East Seymour—Mr. Vicor Taylor had the misfortune while cracking some grain on his farm to get his left coat sleeve caught, drawing his hand into the machine far enough to have a compound fracture of his wrist and severe lacerations. He was rushed to Belleville Hospital on Friday where it was reduced by Dr. Stobie. He is remaining in the hospital where the wounds are being dressed every day.

Mr. W. W. Little underwent a very serious operation in Nichol's Hospital, Peterboro, and is doing as well as can be expected.

Mr. and James Thompson of Memle is in Kingston General Hospital undergoing observation and treatment for an attack of the flu, contracted several weeks ago. His wife is staying with him. Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Brady of Toronto also spent a visit on Easter Day, and report he is slightly improved.

Mr. William Craighead of the 8th concession is seriously ill with pneumonia.

Master Douglas Oddie was unfortunate enough to get a barley beard in his eye and although two doctors were consulted, it seemed impossible to locate and finally after a week or so it came out itself. He suffered terribly at times.

Mrs. Will Brady of Toronto is spending some days with her aunt Mrs. A. T. Donald and Miss E. Thompson, Reg. N.

Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Bissonette of Toronto called on Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Hume and family on Easter Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnston of Campbellford, Mr. and Mrs. Harper Rollins, Mr. and Mrs. Houlter Johnston and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wilson from St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Stirling, attended divine service Easter Sunday evening, when a beautiful cantata entitled, "The Message of the Lilies" was put on by the Presbyterian choir, and ably assisted by the choir in St. Andrew's church, Stirling, and Mr. Houlter to be well done and listened to by a large congregation.

Miss Ethel Hall of the late Mr. John Wesley Harrison of Toronto took charge of the Sunday School Service was in Bumbrae Presbyterian church at the 11 a.m. service with soprano Margaret Ingram and he had many relatives in East Seymour, in the Hudson and Ingram families.

Miss Helen Barnum of Petherick Corners is visiting friends in Oddie.

Mr. Allan Hutchison of Memle, passed away on 4 a.m., April 22nd in Belleville General Hospital where he had undergone a very serious operation on Tuesday, April 16th. At first he appeared to rally Sunday took an alarming turn for the worse. Although suffering for some time he had continued his pursuit of farming until a few days before he went to the hospital. A man of integrity and sterling worth, a devoted husband, kindly neighbor, he will be greatly missed, especially in Rawdon United Church of which he was a faithful member, a valued member of the choir, a steward on the official board and most liberal in his contributions. A Liberal in politics. He leaves his wife, two sisters, Miss Margaret Hutchison, Memle, and Mrs. Percy Parr, Campbellford, R. R., and six brothers, Rev. Professor James Hutchison of Chicago University; William, Charles of Memle; Frank of Washington, D.C.; Fred and Irvine of Campbellford; George and John pre-deceased some time ago.

He had attained the age of fifty-eight years.

The funeral took place from his late residence on Wednesday, April 24th. Interment in Burbrae cemetery. The sympathy of the whole community is extended to the bereaved ones.

DRAKES AND DUCKS

No Sir Francis Drake exists, but gullible people are still investing dollars in a scheme to collect $3,000,000 said supposedly left by Queen Elizabeth's 11th century sailor favorite, Oscar M. Hartzell (above) who bilked thousands of mid-westerners of $20,000,000 with the scheme, is carrying on the fraud from prison, U. S. authorities charged after arresting Hartzell's brother, Canfield, in Chicago.

NAZI AMBASSADOR

General Joachim von Ribbentrop, who has been promoted to a high position in the S.S. (Nazi Black Guards) or black-shirted Nazi guard troops by Reichsführer Adolf Hitler. From high Nazi circles it was learned that Ribbentrop is soon to be given the rank of "ambassador-at-large with special duties." From there they say, it will only be a step to his being appointed state secretary of his foreign office to replace Bernard von Buelow, holdover from the stresemann and Bruening regimes.

WIFE IS CONVICTED

Chatham, Ont., April 25—(CP) — His wife stabbed him with scissors, striking an ugly wound in his throat, charged Charles Hill of Chatham, Mrs. Mary Ann Hill appeared before Magistrate S. B. Arnold in police court on a charge of assault and bodily harm. She was convicted and remanded for sentence.

The husband said his wife flew into a rage when he remonstrated over her talking to a stranger man in a car. He charged she made a pass at his face, which he ducked, to receive the blow on the chest.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE REGENT
"McFadden's Flats"

New Comedy Film Teams Andy Clyde and Walter C. Kelly

The memorable battle between the McFaddens and the McFadden's in their classic feud is the background of the amiable and always interesting Paramount film, "McFadden's Flats", which opens a two day's engagement at the Belle today to introduce Walter C. Kelly, beloved vaudevillian to the screen.

Supported by Andy Clyde, Jane Darwell, Richard Cromwell and Betty Furness, Kelly acts the role of the battling Irishman who rises from bricklaying to wealth without once relenting in his feud with the Scottish family.

Underneath the wordy battles of these two old hard shells is a genuine affection. When Kelly gets the financial upper hand, secretly supports his credit at the bank and enables him to complete the modern apartment flats of his dreams.

But Kelly, under the delusion that he is wealthy, splurges and soon gets into trouble again. He tries to get out by selling controlling interest with Clyde to get George Barbier, a millionaire builder, behind the business. The friendship of the two old feudists is finished between when their children fall in love.

The whole story is written and directed with rare insight into the lives and thinking of the people it portrays. There are moments of high comedy that are unusual for the use of electric lights in the barber shop, in the bricklaying contest between Kelly and Barbier with hooks for bricks—and in Kelly's party for his East Side neighbors.

Kelly, long famous for his "Virginia Judge" characterization, makes a genuine flesh-and-blood creation out of his Dougherty McFadden, with his genial democracy, his fresh humor and his hungry manner that hides a heart of gold. Clyde seems to revel in this opportunity to play the role of a tyrannical, even down to his laughing accordion.

Richard Cromwell and Betty Furness, an appealing pair of youngsters, handle the romantic assignments in a skilful and completely natural manner.

Paul Muni at His Best

Paul Muni, one of the greatest actors of the stage or screen is seen in the screen version of the Warner Bros. production "Border town", which is said to be a powerful picture in which he has ever appeared. Margaret Lindsay and Sallee Eilers complete the leading supporting roles. Popeye the Sailor in "Counting Contest" will be exhibited on the same program.

The picture "Chatterbox" as a whole is powerful and compelling entertainment and a most unusual piece that no one should miss.

Performances at 2.30, 7 and 9 p.m. the last complete show starting at 9.30. "McFadden's Flat" starts at 2.40, 7.20 and 9.20. "Border town" will be presented twice daily at 1.45 and 7.55.

Conception of Railway Is Held In Abeyance

Toronto, April 25—(CP)—Completion of the North Bay-Temiskaming highway will be held in abeyance until such time as the Federal Government and learns if it will continue contributions to Northern Ontario arterial roads, Hon. Peter Heenan, Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests told Northern Development, told a deputation from the north today.

While he had no intention to abandon the road, Mr. Heenan said it would be necessary to take into consideration the province's financial commitments and arrangements with Ottawa before giving a definite answer.

Rick is Convicted in Counterfeit Case

St. Thomas, Ont., April 25—(CP) John Rick, 30, was found guilty by Magistrate D. B. Menzies on a charge of uttering a counterfeit cent piece. His conviction followed a raid on his house here by Toronto and St. Thomas detectives. Coin dies, counterfeiting plant and arrested Rick and his brother-in-law, Fred Craig. Norman Montgomery, defence counsel, said he knew nothing about counterfeiting operations and did not know 50 cent pieces given him were counterfeit.

Rick, first of the men to be tried, will be sentenced later.

James Crandall, another of the four alleged counterfeiters, also had a hearing today and was committed charge of manufacturing the counterfeit coins.

Hamilton, April 25 (CP) — A "hand three" parade is being considered by the Workers' Unemployed Association to "do shame the capitalistic system" on the First of May, Sam Scott, one of the leaders, said today.

"We want to let the people see what unemployment is doing to men in like alongside tailored clothes and neat military uniforms," a worker explained.

"Traveling Saleslady"

Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell Reteam With Lewis Stone and Ben Lyon in "Kansas City Princess"

"Traveling Saleslady," the current feature attraction at the Capitol Theatre, brings back those two gimme girls of the screen, Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell in a riotous, romantic comedy which will keep you in gales of laughter from start to finish.

The story concerns Rufus K. Twitchell, wise manufacturer's agent of good soothpaste, which doesn't sell, however, because the old man refuses to recognize the value of advertising. To make matters worse his star saleslady quits to get married and go over to the company's chief rival.

Twitchwell's daughter wants to enter the business, but he thinks a woman knows nothing about it and her place is in the home. An interesting inventor tries to sell the manufacturer a toothpaste of different cooking flavors, but he will not listen to him. The climax, however, sees the possibilities of the new line and sells it to the former rival under a year's contract, she goes to get out the road and sell it.

She steals her father's customers from his star salesman in a fashion that is positively unimaginable, the while making love to the latter's right hook in the evening, when they call all business activities off. Jimmy, the office boy of business and romance moves swiftly to a surprising climax.

Charles Dargan has the role of Mrs Blondell's rival salesman who has designs on the boss' son of John Gargan, Hugh Herbert is the inventor, Russell Gleason and Mickey Rentschler play the part of the conservative Dougherty children and Ben Lyon is played by Al Shean, of the once famous team of Gallagher and Shean.

Others in the large and talented cast include Heinie Conklin, Johnny Arthur, Bert Roach, Joseph Crehan, Mary Treen, James Donlan and Gordon Elliott.

"The Mystery of Edwin Drood"

What happened to Edwin Drood in the famous mystery story which Charles Dickens left half completed when death took him in 1870? Speculation and the most thrilling mystery tale has caused more amateur sleuths to solve story of the past one hundred years. More than 130 prominent authors and playwrights have tried to unravel and to finish the story and 103 solutions of the mystery have appeared in printed form. The discussion became widespread in England at one time, back in 1914, that a moot court was held to try to determine who killed Edwin Drood.

Briefly, the story is that of one John Jasper, choir master and precentor in an English village cathedral, who, unknown to his church friends, is a victim of the drug habit and spends much of his time in the opium dens of the city. Edwin Drood, who is engaged to marry Jasper's beautiful young ward, Jasper is madly in love with the girl but he also has a tremendous grudge against Edwin because of having a terrible mental struggle as to which he "loves, and the lure of rauses."

He said the actors

THE DRAMA

Hope Expressed Festival Might Develop Into National Theatre

Ottawa, April 26 (CP)— Finals of the Dominion drama festival will continue tonight with presentation of three plays, two by Toronto groups and one by the Embassy players of Vancouver. The last two in the series of four plays by Canadian authors were presented last night.

Hope that the festival might develop into a National Canadian theatre was expressed last night by Lady Tupper, Chairman of the festival Committee in the address who said also, that if it were decided to move the venue of the finals she had been assured every facility would be offered for next staging at Winnipeg. Lady Tupper introduced adjudicator Allan Wade, of the mighty Julius Caesar was seen last night in a one-act satire by Merrick Price of Toronto, heavily for his wife to cure an alcoholic headache caused by wine the seduction of Cleopatra. But in her unsuccessful efforts to enslave him.

Mr. Wade praised the standing of Miss Price's piece, presented by the Playmaker Club of Toronto, but criticized the acting, finding the lines inaudible in spots and recited rather than acted in others.

Atmosphere Not Sustained

Miss Price's play followed performance of a Christmas dramatization by K. W. Edge of Toronto, presented by the Victoria Fellowship of the same city. The production of "The Dead Don't" based on parts of "Lay Your of Two Idle Apprentices" and concerns the intrigue around a young girl staying at a Doncaster Inn in the sleep-forced magician and hypnotist to be a sailor for the hand of his sweetheart.

Mr. Wade described the production as a "very, very interesting dramatic experiment" but felt the eerie, unnatural atmosphere should have been sustained more thoroughly.

Sordid horror chilled the audience in production of "Vindication" by the Halifax Theatre Arts Guild. The play, a story of a mysterious and never-strain of a family waiting for the hanging in a prison of Canada, the meaning of which is not revealed until the last scene, is by Leonard J. Hines and Frank Hines.

Cobourg to Perform

Mr. Wade expressed belief the Theatre Guild of Toronto should have "planted" more firmly in the minds of the audience meaning of their parts so that they could have brought out what the presentation lacked in "tone, and the lure of

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 25.—(CP)—Past action in the Silver stocks set a recording pace today in the Toronto Mining Market that has not been equalled in the last year, 700,000 shares changing hands in the first hour. Volume expanded to 1,200,000 by 1 p.m. prices for the White metal shares advanced strongly on the news of another boost in the U. S. Domestic price for metal and the jump of the world price to the highest level since 1924.

Eldorado Silver traded 48,000 shares in the first hour on a net price gain of 15 cents, 1½ swung up to 2.35 at the opening, backed up to 2.25 and then advanced to 2.45 on a new high and a price of 2.38 at noon. Castle saw a price of 1.25 at the opening and, and back to 1.15 and recovered to 1.23 for a net gain of 13 cents. Bear added 2 cents net Nipissing 5 cents, Premier 5, Peterson Cobalt-1, White Eagle 1-2 and Cobalt Contact 1-2.

Base Corporation gained 17 cents, and Mining Corporation 14 cents, Red Cruffle added a few cents and Falconbridge was steady at 4.05. Noranda was the most active of the senior group, gaining 1.50 cents to 940.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, April 25 (AP). — The stock market gave a boom-time demonstration today under the leadership of buoyant silver issues.

With the treasury reporting the domestic silver price to 77.57 cents an ounce, a 15-year peak, and world silver rates jumping almost as much, there was a rush for the mining shares at the start.

Practical improvement appeared among such Canadian shares as Dome, McIntyre and International Nickel. Canadian Pacific and Dominion Stores remained about even. On the curb, Lake Shore ruled fairly steady. Dominion Government bonds were narrow. Montreal funds were 1-16 of a cent lower at 99 7-16 cents.

At their best shares of Cerro De Pasco went up more than 5 points and U. S. Smelting about 3. Other metals 1 to 3 points higher. American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, Silver King, Park Utah, Anaconda and Kennecott.

Among gainers of fractions to a point or more were U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Du Pont, Johns-Manville, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, American Tobacco "B", Liggett & Myers "B", Standard Brands, Bank of New Jersey, Westinghouse and General Electric.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 25.—(CP)—The market held the main interest in the industrial section of the Toronto exchange today, both Consolidated Smelters and International Nickel crashing the base volume and forging ahead in price. The sharp advance in the world and U.S. quotations on the metal provided the impetus for the metals, chiefly Smelters which is the main Canadian producer of silver. The price mounted to 75c for a net gain of 8 1-2 points while Nickel returned the 27 mark to show a fractional advance.

Braddick dropped 1-4 and Ford A and C.P.R. remained unchanged. In the steel group, which were firm, Hamilton Bridge Pfd., off 1 1-8, Canadian Car Pfd. off a point and Steel of Canada, down 1-4. Outside of this nothing. Lower prices ruled for Canadian Converters and Penny Pascal.

The beverage group had no price changes aside from a loss of 2-4 for Distillers Seagrams and 3-4 for Walkers Common.

RAHARD GUILTY OF BLASPHEMOUS LIBEL, JUDGEMENT

Question of Intent

"In the language used calculated and intended to insult the feelings and the deepest religious convictions of the great majority of persons among whom we live?" he asked, quoting from a case in Canadian Law.

"If so, they are not to be tolerated and we must not do things that are outrageous to the sensibility of propriety among the persons amongst whom we live."

Quoting from the published placard, Judge Perrault declared the language used was offensive and injurious to Roman Catholics and of such a nature that they could not do so without breach of the peace."

English Common Law

He said the English Common Law relative to blasphemous libel has greatly changed with the principles and doctrine and jurisprudence have attended thereupon rather to the intention of the author and to the terms used in the writing rather than to the actual subject treated.

"It may be well understood," he told the crowded courtroom, "that there is no question here of religious doctrine but simply of the legal question. To wit: The application of Article 198 of the Criminal Code."

58th Wedding Anniversary of Trenton Couple Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. George A. White Receive Friends at "Woodleigh"

Trenton, April 25 (Special)—Friday night was the scene of a delightful reception at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. Samuel W. Young of the Anglican Church of the Ascension performing the ceremony. Today Mr. and Mrs. White are receiving the best wishes of their friends and relatives at their home on Queen St. Since their marriage Mr. and Mrs. White have resided in Trenton.

One of the few, but greatest disappointments in their lives, was the disastrous fire, that raged through their beautiful home "Woodleigh" last January. Many rare books and beautiful antique furniture was destroyed. For fifty-four years Mr. and Mrs. White lived in that home. Mr. White was born in Sidney township, ninety years and four months ago, his boyhood days on a farm, where the new airport now stands. Later he entered the milling business in Trenton which he carried on until twenty-five years ago, when he retired. The business is now in the same place being continued by

House and House on Front St. Mr. White's grandfather, Reuben White, was a general member of Parliament for eighteen years. Mr. White thinks that Trenton today is much different than they were fifty years ago. People of those days were more sociable and homelike but the old gentleman admitted, that there are too many things today to attract their attention in other ways. He told us of the time, when the old Grand Trunk engines were fired with wood. He also remembered when all along the York road was one dense forest, where now the finest orchards in the province are situated. Although Mr. White will reach ninetieth year on May 17 he says he has an ache or a pain.

Wife Born in Murray

Mrs. White was born in Murray township but as a girl resided in Trenton until her marriage, when she came to Trenton. Her father, Ezra Stephens, was a man who became famous as the land for the right-of-way for the old Grand Trunk on the Murray Canal. Ezra Poole, Mrs. White was an extensive traveller and has crossed the Atlantic fourteen times. She told of the most adventurous trip, when she was returning from Europe on the Mauretania just after the outbreak of the Great War. It was reported, that enemy destroyers were pursuing the passenger liner bound for New York. The officers and crew of the giant liner were highly praised by Mrs. White, who stated, that they landed in Halifax instead of their original port of New York. When she returned to Trenton she plunged into war work with the Local Red Cross and Women's Aux. While is a life member of the National Council of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire. She was seventeen times elected as a National Councillor. A piece of her handiwork, that has gained distinction is the service flag with the name of every soldier from Trenton, who joined the service during the war. The fallen heroes' names are in gold with the others in green letters, making one inch square. Every stitch was done by Mrs. White. She was also the leading organizer of the movement to purchase the land, where now stands Governor Simcoe Park and Mrs. White supervised the workmen, when the Carolina poplars were planted. She has also helped form the Daughters of the Empire raise $16,000.00 during the war. The Governor Simcoe Park has Trenton's Roll of those killed during the war on a Memorial Arch, which was erected through the efforts of the I.O.D.E.

A taxi ride around the surrounding country will be a "honeymoon trip" today, as told by Mrs. White, who boasts, that the pair have never quarrelled in the fifty-eight years of wedded bliss. Mrs. White will attain the eighteenth year in October.

Football League Meets

A new plan was adopted by the Trenton Football League to stimulate the interest in the game that has prevailed the past two seasons. Instead of a couple of strong teams that discourage younger players, it was decided to have all players over fifteen years of age register with the secretary D. D. McNeil and then each team from Trenton that enters will draw fifteen names from a hat to complete a team. Pitchers will be drawn separately. This will mix the good with the new men and also equalize the strength of each team. New men will be developed for future stars. Before the date that the town's entry must be in for the play-downs of the C.A.S.A., a team will be chosen from the loop to represent Trenton.

Norman Kidd, the president was in the chair. The draw for players will be made on May 7 with the league opening on or about the fourteenth of May.

George's Day Observed

Members of the Sons of England and Daughters of England from Belleville, Picton and Deseronto were guests of the local branches on St. George's Day, the banner gathering convened in the Orange Hall where a splendid program was presented. After the program was completed lunch was served and dancing, both round and square was enjoyed by the old and the young alike until the early thirty.

The following program was presented: Opening with "O Canada," address of welcome by H. Allson, president of the S. O. E.; chairman's remarks, W. Rose; "Queen Empress of Belleville; song, "Lollipop Ship", Misses L. Ward and L. Woods; tap dance, Margarite Behan; duet, Pat and Norman; dialogue, Misses Allen, Cunnell, Woods, H. Cooney and E. Cooney; song, Misses W. Woods and H. Cooney; recitation, "Are you a Shirker," M. Hill; song, "Alice Blue Gown," Misses L. Ward, G. Woods, M. Hill, G. Hill, L. Allen and T. Beale; tap dance, Miss H. Gerhardt; solos, Mrs. Hill, president D.O.E., the last bit of entertainment being provided by twelve members of the S.O.E. in hoboes around a camp fire. Music on the harmonica, guitar and songs were mingled with the many jokes that brought rounds of laughter. Those in the playlet were Tom Smith, O. Ward, R. Roberts, E. Cunnell, J. Ward, W. Baker, R. Sherpard. E. P. Jones, G. Wood, A. Andrews, W. Rose.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, April 25 (AP)— With silver prices spurting to 15-year peaks, shining issues today led the stock market in a sharp advance. Although scattered soft spots appeared in the profit taking flurries, the list as a whole, held around the best levels of the session.

WOMEN CRAMMED HALLS OF ART

London.—Extraordinary scenes occurred at the opening of the first exhibition of Steuben glass at the Fine Arts Society showrooms. Society women, beautifully gowned and richly jewelled, were twisted and crammed together in the narrow space.

When Lord Lee of Fareham arrived to open the exhibition he had to stand on a chair to make himself heard. He said it was the first exhibition of American art ever held in Bond street. "I know less about this kind of art than a Hindu does about skates," he added.

The crowd was so great that for a while nobody could get either up or down the stairs. A burly commissionaire was wedged in among a mass of struggling women. Steuben glass is a new product made by Arthur Houghton, Jr., an American. With the exception of fused quartz, it is the most transparent material on earth.

READ NEWSPAPER WITH BIBLE TOO

Advice Given By Church Leader When Women Ordained.

London.—In view of the note being taken in the presbyteries of the United Church of Canada regarding the ordination of women to the ministry, it is interesting to note that Miss Edna Victoria Rowlinson, a former teacher who graduated with a B.A. honors degree at London University, was ordained recently at the Cowper Congregational Church, East Dereham.

She is the only woman minister in Norfolk and one of 17 in the Congregational Union. She became the pastor of the large church which is a memorial to William Cowper, the poet, when she received an invitation after preaching there as a supply teacher.

Dr. A. E. Garvie, an ex-president of the Congregational Union and a noted theologian, in an address, declared: "Read the Bible, but read your newspaper also and know where you are. It is no use denouncing the sins of the eighth century B.C. because the prophet of those times read his newspaper."

Wants Civics Taught As Pathway to Life

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—"The biggest business of one country — education—is deplorably lacking in efficient management," the retiring trustees section of the Ontario Education Association was told today by C. O. Carruthers, chairman of the London Board of Education. "In the place of training for university edcoations, which he said were not desired by many pupils, he would like to see courses in civics, government, personal health and hygiene, economics, homemaking, domestic science, and the cultural subjects. The latter not taught as in Canada like a science but as a pathway to living.

MAN AND INSECT STAGE NEXT WAR

Toronto, April 24.—(CP)—Scientists believe the war of the future will not be between man and man but between man and insect, A. E. Baker, professor of Systematic Entomology and Zoology at the Ontario Agricultural College, London, said in an address today to the Natural History Section of the Ontario Education Association. Insects are the dominant animal group, he said, because of their powers of reproduction, he explained.

to the daily newspaper come flashing the engrossing incidents that are at this very moment making today's history. The whole atmosphere of the daily newspaper is comprehensive action—dealing with things of the moment that have just happened, or are about to happen.

When white paper leaves the printing presses in the daily newspaper office, it is no longer some inert material, but an active powerful force reaching the thousands who thirst for its contents.

Practically every Canadian family reads a daily newspaper.

It is an essential part of daily life and without it all would feel a distinct loss—nothing can take its place.

On the newspaper's pages also are advertisements placed there by thoughtful, energetic and far-seeing merchants and producers. The best traders in Canada—the firms which grow in strength and prestige year after year—know that the daily newspaper is as necessary to them as their raw material. When the fight is hardest—they have often proved this—it pays to strengthen their newspaper lists.

THE LOVE FLIGHT

by Jeanie Dixon

The morning following the interval in the garden Anne was with Madame making a list for shopping when Berta came to the round boudoir. Berta was an active thorn on the Anne side. Carl had been compelled to speak to her in no uncertain terms. She slumped about in Anne's presence like a clumsy bear, mumbled, but walling his chance.

"It's her," she said, standing in the door and gazing balefully at Anne. "A woman who says she's a relation and's got to see you for a few minutes comes, the same as front door comes, the same as Frederick. "Shall I send them like a lamb-head," Madame barked at Berta. "Say what you got to say and get out."

Berta turned and clumped, darkly, from the room.

"I'm sorry, Madame," Cotor drained from Anne's cheeks. "I don't know who is asking for me—I've given no one permission to call. Let me henceforth speak to whoever it is about using the main entrance."

"All right, Pfil," Madame pressed a bell. Beta answered at once. "You go down and tell whoever it is wants to see Pfil to come up here. We're busy."

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Anne sat at table in the round boudoir, her eyes fixed on the shopping list Berta had interrupted.

Madame bounced on her bed, her booming was a jumble of words, meaningless to Anne, as the items she had written in her notebook were meaningless, a jumble of words that dissolved and blurred against the white page. She tried to grasp the pencil firmly to direct it to follow her command, but her fingers had lost their control.

Who came to force their way into this new world of theirs to disturb the danger security she had won for herself? Lately she had felt as though she might have reached reasonably solid ground; as though she were actually making progress. Madame had confidence in her. The other servants liked her, and Carl were the best of friends, the most understanding of confidantes against that time when, the Fates willing, they might be something more.

And now—was she to lose this precious ground gained by the sheer doggedness of her will, her determination to be free of the wastern, of the peacocks and panderers?

Who would seek her out in this, her voluntary exile?

Bruno Bruno! No. This was scarcely a man's business.

Mrs. Bruno! Yes, She too would be likely to thrust herself into a situation which promised the unusual. She, Bee's curiosity would carry her where the archangels themselves walked in fear.

"You'd better stop at Ardene's," Madame was saying. "Get some of that paint for my face. Choose a pink kind that smells like geranium—I got a kind like leather, anyway, but down here it's worse than a pair of old rubber boots. Don't let him stick you with a lot more beauty truck—it's no use with a face like mine—"

A light knock at the door.

"Come in," Madame boomed.

Suddenly Anne's throat felt as though a noose had been slipped about it. Her forked light breathing was painful, a rasp. The door opened. Anne closed her eyes—she was filled with fiery darts—she opened them again.

Maida Sturdam, tall and haughty and trembling with angry excitement, had come into the room.

"Anne!" her cousin demanded, halfway to the inert figure at the table. "What is the meaning of this?" Her head moved imperiously, taking in the room. She ignored Madame entirely in the swift invective.

Anne rose from the table. Maida's insolence afforded a tonic for courage. Strength flowed back into Anne's limbs, indignation kindled at the portals of her mind and loosed her tongue. She ignored the question—the curling "this".

"Why have you come, Maida?"

she asked. "Why do you insist on making a tangle of other people's affairs? You've no right to intrude on the privacy of Madame. Nor on my privacy, for the matter of that."

"I'm making it my right," Maida's nose, always high and pinched, rose to a sharp point. Her prominent slate-grey eyes were opaque and hard as flint. "It's no fault of mine you happen to belong to a family which has a few vestiges of pride left, in spite of all you and your kind keep doing to destroy them."

"If you're the keeper of the family pride" Anne said coolly, "you should keep the skeleton in your hearing. Madame Hoag is not interested."

Maida made a slate-grey raking survey of Madame—as though, for the first time, she were aware of an alien presence. She discarded Madame with a sift of her pinched nose.

"I've come to you, Anne," she said curtly. "Pack your things at once. I shall wait."

"There's no use issuing orders," Anne's indignation broke through. "What Maida, should dare ride in high horse over Madame, in Madame's own house! I've no intention of obeying them. I was employed here. I work for Madame. I assure her maid. I shall go on with my job —unless Madame doesn't want me, in which case you've kicked up such a fuss—"

"I think Mrs. Hoag will be able to dispense with your services. She probably doesn't know who you are and what you are, Anne Austin, save that you are trying, deliberately, to disgrace your family, to degrade and mortify us. Why heaven only knows! There's been enough of it—without you."

Anne caught the significance. Her father's screaming headlines—Banker Shoots Self Cleaning Up—Accident—Austin Portrait Opt—the Innuendos, the clever between line suggestions that after all the bullet was not an accident.

"Be careful, Maida. Even I might be driven to speak out, present." Anne's face was a mask, a white frozen mask.

"Don't mind me," Madame cleared her throat the better to aid her part of the dialogue. She was rather enjoying this unexpected encounter. It was a clear up. I won't need you till morning."

"Then I am to understand," Maida addressed Madame, "that you will no longer harbor my cousin in your house?"

And so saying, she touched a match to the fuse of Madame's temper.

"You're to understand nothing," Madame boomed, "unless I tell it to you. Pfil here is my maid and a damn good one. If she's somebody else too, it's none of my business. Whadda you mean bustin' into my house and pesterin' my servants? Who Are you, anyways? A nervy sort of girl. Clear out. Scat! Pfil and my gre buy."

Maida drew in her breath between pointed white teeth, expelled it again in a short staring silence. Then she held a mirror of this game Amazon with the flaming hair, past wrath at the crudeness of her display.

"I shall wait outside in my car, until Anne comes to her senses," she managed.

"You'd better not try it," Madame chuckled. "You might starve to death waitin'. Pfil, do you want to stay here at Bow Jolly?" She did not look at Anne. Her voice held that maternal note she used when she spoke to "papa".

"Yes, Madame," Anne pleaded. "Oh, I do want to stay. I want to stay more than anything else I must stay."

"Then you do," Madame picked up the cup of coffee she had poured just before Maida entered and drained it.

"I don't suppose there's any use of reminding you, Anne, that there's Jock and the children." Maida had found a voice to throw and cling to.

"Who's Jock and the children?" Madame wanted to know. "Never heard of 'em." This was Madame's fight now. She'd taken it over.

"Jock is my husband. The children are—our children. Semg Maida —smug and grand about what was here.

"What've they got to do with Pfil?"

"They have this to do—Jock can take care of Anne, in her own way, among her own people. We'll do it —gladly—rather than have—this. If she's going to disgrace the children over—"

"Aw shut up blathering about disgrace!" Madame roared. "You'd think Pfil'd been robbing poor boxes. If your kids are the kind that can be destroyed by a little good honest work they ain't worth raisin'. It'd be better for 'em to be in a sack and drown 'em."

A strangled scream of protest against what her own ears recorded, of shocked horror, escaped Maida. She turned and fled from the room.

* * * *

Anne sat again at the table, trying to concentrate on the list. She couldn't. She owed some explanation to Madame for Maida's intrusion for her insistence. Madame could very easily have sent her packing for bringing such disturbances into an already troubled household. Madame owed her no loyalty except what she had earned by conscientious service. And for this Madame was blind.

"I had no idea she'd come here," Anne said suddenly, looking up from her notebook straight into the bright eyes of Madame. "I have deceived you, Madame—about my name. It is Anne Austin. But I'm not Anne Austin, not any more. Not since I broke away from them—from Maida and the others. I'm Anna Brent—I want to be Anna Brent—I've a right to be Anna Brent. That other—Anne Austin —is dead. I want to keep her dead. I want to bury her deep down where she can't come back to life and to cheat me. I'll sell herself to the highest bidder—"

Anne paused for breath. She had forgotten Madame. She had forgotten Maida. There was only herself and Brent. She wouldn't go back —and leave Anne—leave Carl—. She sobbed quite frightened sobs that shook her throat.

"Easy now Pfil. Just you take it easy." Madame was uncomfortable in the face of such bald emotion. "You ain't goin' to pester you little makin' a monkey of yourself, not while you're under my roof."

Anne's sobs subsided. She ought to tell Madame why she changed her name, why she had thrust Anne Austin behing her and struck out on her own. Madame had been kind.

"I changed my name—" she began, her eyes wide, staring into Madame's. "I changed my name—"

"Never you mind about that," Madame spoke almost harshly. "If you wanta change your name it's your own affair. I'm concerned your'n Pfil. Go put some cold water on your face so's we can get busy. I'll be back in a half a shake."

Anne rose obediently. Half an hour later she was in the blue room with Carl, bound on her errands. But Maida's visit had left her more than a little wan of lips and cheek.

"Oh, Up," Carl began, leaning close, spoke gently against her ear. She never realized then that she had been drooping into silence, into an unawareness even of his presence while the storm broke through which she had just passed jiggled crazily through her mind.

"Oh—I—I was thinking," she said vaguely.

Obviously." He smiled into her eyes, encouraged her to smile. "I could hear your mind ticking." "When her smile came he said, more seriously, "Anne, what's wrong?"

She shook her head. "Not—just—yet." She'd have to get to solid ground alone.

"I'll be standing by," he vow. Knowing that makes me keep my head up."

That was the barest that either of them had ever come to a confession of what was in their hearts.

That evening Madame dismissed Anne as soon as Anne had finished helping Beta with the table for dinner.

"You get out, Pfil," she said kindly. "Go some places. Have some fun. You're too young to be mooping. I'll clear up. I won't need you till morning."

Anne obeyed—night off. They would go places together.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

Two days later Anne had an appointment at ten o'clock in the morning, at Clive Celeste's to look over models of evening wraps lately arrived from Paris. She arrived early and was in one of the garishly repressed French salons when she saw a slim young girl come into the room and pesterin' my servants! Who Are you, anyways? A nervy sort of girl. Clear out. Scat! Pfil and my gre buy."

Maida drew in her breath between pointed white teeth, expelled it again in a short staring silence. Then she held a mirror of this game Amazon with the flaming hair, past wrath at the crudeness of her display.

"I shall wait outside in my car, until Anne comes to her senses," she managed.

"You'd better not try it," Madame chuckled. "You might starve to death waitin'. Pfil, do you want to stay here at Bow Jolly?" She did not look at Anne. Her voice held that maternal note she used when she spoke to "papa".

"Yes, Madame," Anne pleaded. "Oh, I do want to stay. I want to stay more than anything else I must stay."

"Then you do," Madame picking up the cup of coffee she had poured just before Maida entered and drained it.

"I don't suppose there's any use of reminding you, Anne, that there's Jock and the children." Maida had found a voice to throw and cling to.

"Who's Jock and the children?" Madame wanted to know. "Never heard of 'em." This was Madame's fight now. She'd taken it over.

"Jock is my husband. The children are—our children. Semg Maida —smug and grand about what was here.

ame Hoag's own home ,though, for her nonsense."

"I didn't know she was going. If I'd known, I'd stopped her—somehow. But now she's down—you're coming back, Anne. You simply can't go on being a maid, a servant to that horrible old woman. Surely you can see you can't do that."

Anne went cold with anger. She was up now, bristling defense.

"If by horrible old woman you mean Madame Hoag," she said stiffly, "we can have nothing more to say to each other. Madame Hoag is my employer and my friend. She is one of the kindest people I know. I respect her and I shall go on serving her as long as she'll have me."

"Darling;" Mrs. Bruno did not bother to hide her impatience. "Don't be Quixotic. It isn't done. You've carried this whim quite far enough. It's getting to be a bore, really. Maida's having hysterics all over the lot and firmly Braden's storming at Bruno and at me because we haven't done something about you all this time. So stop trying to be odd and mysterious. We're all rather fed up."

Anne laughed. She had to laugh as though they cared, actually, any of them. Mrs. Bruno cared, yes. Madame was uncomfortable in the face of such bald emotion. Maida's hysterics and Craig Braden's storming at Bruno and at me because we haven't done something about you all this time. Do stop trying to be odd and mysterious. We're all rather fed up."

Anne laughed. She had to laugh as though they cared, actually, any of them. Mrs. Bruno cared, yes. Madame was uncomfortable in the face of such bald emotion. Maida's hysterics and Craig Braden stormed. Hysterics and storms were poor weapons. They dulled the appetite for pleasure, sheltered the play hours by the length of their flutter.

"I'm sorry, Bee Bee," she said, "but I must go. I'm sorry you've let you put them out! Leave word you are not at home. Please. Don't you see, Bee Bee, I've got to? Let them do their setting elsewhere."

"But they're setting, darling. Really they're not." Mrs. Bruno articulated was as the coarse. Getting matter. "Maida's completely bowled over—she's having her doctor down from Toronto—and Craig is so low he's pathetic. I can't see why you banished him from you, or why he allows you to do it. After all, Craig's not a child. He can have practically any woman he wants for the asking."

Anne winced at the gesture of dismissal.

"I've nothing against Craig," she said. "Nor against Maida. I simply just happens Maida and I have nothing more along we've nothing in ists. If they'll not bother about me ever any more, if they'll drop me completely, well, that's all I ask. I'm sure they'll be much happier, and so will I."

"Oh, well, if you're going to be like that, I suppose there's nothing to be done!" Mrs. Bruno's drawling sway, imperceptibly but surely it was lost—and Craig is so queer pattern that refused stubborn ly to be stamped on any one mold. one envied and aped and strove to grasp for his, for her own. Didn't all the world envy her riches, and leisure, and laughter? Except a few queer ones. Better to be that person outside looking in on their own queerness.

This is what Mrs. Bruno was thinking as she dusted powder from her jeweled vanity onto the tip of her nose and ran a gold-encased stick over her lips. She didn't think as much in so many words because she was by no means introspective of her nose and ran a gold-encased stick over her lips, She didn't think as much in so many words because she was by no means introspective nor deep and parsed, and was content to round out her "in the middle the night" to go and reason with Anne. Instead, she was bored, and lonely, and her failure with: "Anne's an impossible little prig if she'd rather fetch and crary for that old fright than be Mrs. Craig Braden,? and have everything—let her go it. I'm sure I don't give a rap and Craig shouldn't either. He's lucky to be rid of her."

"Absolutely nothing to be done about it." Anne said with finality.

"Frightfully hot, isn't it?" Mrs. Bruno's voice was as the coarse. Getting away from this stranger was rather awkward. It would be pleasant in the cabana and get into shorts. Goo-bye darling. Sorry to have bothered you."

Anne sat in a dim corner of the salon trying to force her mind to sort out the relative merits of black velvet and white satin and white velvet edged with lynx, of silver-grey taffeta self-ruched, of dull green satin with a cascade of sequined—seaweed washed up on the sands of Sahara.

"An original Jenny," the saleswoman was saying, sweeping across the room with the self-conscious calibre awy salewoman in sky-grey of Celeste's. "Designed exclusively for Celeste. Only one model. Isn't it too perfect?"

"Unusual." Anne conceded," but not the thing for Madame." The model arrived evening wraps from Paris were disappointing. Or was it herself that was lacking at them with eyes sighted to disappointment. She felt listless, disputatious, on guard. People were always at one trying to persuade to their own advantage, trying to bend one's will. Mrs. Bruno, pecking at her. This saleswoman, fawning, insistent.

"And the grey taffeta?" persuasively. "It's from Jenny, too, her best model."

"No. Just the green please." Anne brusquely. She was not going to be seived and smoothed and slid into other people's moulds. She was not capable of making decisions without having oil poured on her head and two glasses held to her eyes. And she would make them.

"Yes, Miss Brent. "A little cursor of sarcasm at the end of the "Brent". Speak-up minx. After all, Miss Brent was nothing but a maid, Celeste would be furious. Celeste was counting on three of the models, at least, for the Hoag person. "You should take the grey, really. Perhaps you'll change your mind. I'll put it away for a day or two—not let it be shown to the others—in case you should want it."

"Indeed," Anne's voice was brittle. Anger, resentment were rising within her, rising to her throat, to the tip of her tongue. People would go on trying to persuade her about her will, to pour oil on her head; to slide her into a way that was not her way but their own way. She bit back her anger. After all, the saleswoman was not to blame, Flattery, cajolery, was her business. "Madame will not want the grey taffeta." She added more pacifically.

Anne stepped out of Celeste's into the fierce white crystal sunshine. Then suddenly the sunshine was gone, drained away, leaving her cheeks—her face—to face with Craig Braden. The bigness, the handsomeness, the masculinity that filled her vision, shutting out all the brightness about her. That odor of well-being, of too careful grooming, which had enveloped her the night on the bombproof verandah during Bruno Beasley's house party and made her faint and sick at the pit of it, quivered in her nostrils.

"Up!" Craig's voice was as the coarse. Getting

"I've been—— busy." The other self of her, back in the shadow, was watching, warily, out of the corner of her eye. Why should Craig Braden, the great, Craig the desirable, the sought-after, wait for her? Why should he try to "catch up with her" when she had given him to understand, so distinctly, that she did not want to be caught up with?

"Not too busy, I hope, for a spin. one night but fell a prey to the "easy comer" drinks behind the bar and found sleep there, the result being three years' penal servitude.

Combination of Heavy Hitting With Excellent Mound Work Make White Sox Real Threat

Take Four Out of Five From Champions, the Detroit Tigers

BLANTON WINS

Pirate Rookie Wins His First Two Starts in National

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer)

A year ago Chicago White Sox, usually as a considerable expense, had as if they might go somewhere and finished instead at the bottom of the American League. This spring as the popular choice for the other two, they have begun to make threatening gestures at the leaders, Cleveland and champion Detroit Tigers.

With a combination of heavy hitting and veterans and rookies alike plus a couple of excellent pitchers, the White Sox have the "freshman" right hander, John Whitehead, the pain back and shoulder from out of five decisions from Detroit so far for a total record of two victories in eight stints.

Whitehead, who made his big league debut last week by limiting the champions to six hits and three runs, had pitched yesterday to win 10 to 4. One of the blows was Bill Knickerbocker's first baseman's triple by Mickey Cochrane, both in the second inning when they two sets scored all their runs.

As backing the rookie got two homers by Jimmy Dykes, one each by Al Simmons and Vernon "Snuffy" Stirnweiss, the latter a three-run blow that enabled the Sox to come from far behind to win.

Rookie Loses Own Game

In contrast to Whitehead's easy triumph, Pat Malone, a "recruit" with a good bit of previous major league experience, turned in a four-hit game for the Browns and lost it 5-3 to Cleveland when he walked in the old man in the ninth with the bases loaded. The triumph, their fifth in six starts, kept the Indians in second place, ahead of Chicago.

The third American League contest saw Philadelphia, with Bob Burke tossing a steady game, edge out the Athletics 3-2 despite Jimmie Foxx's third home run of the year. The league leading Red Sox and New York Yankees were rained out.

Another outstanding rookie, flinger Darrell (Cy) Blanton of Pittsburgh, backed up a great opening performance when he limited the 11 Cincinnati batsmen and allowed only six hits to earn the Pirates a 5-2 victory with the aid of a four-run rally in the eighth. In his first start Blanton shut out the Cardinals with one hit.

Fine pitching also marked the other National League contests. Van Mungo, Dodger hurler, came to a 4-1 triumph over the Phillies, allowing only four hits, while Lon Warneke, Hal Schumacher, the Giants' big right hander, improved upon that performance by limiting the Ruth-less Braves to three hits, losing a 1-0 decision. Walter's ninth inning homer and knocking in one run himself. The Reds rallied to start because of a slight cold and struck out later in a brief appearance as a pinch batsman. Lon Warneke rang up his third victory, a 2-1 decision, going 10 innings to beat the Cubs. 7-6 when Dizzy Dean was kicked for three hits in the extra frame.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Cy Blanton, Pirates: Struck out eleven batters in pitching six-hit victory against Reds.

Joe Moore, Giants: Batted in winning game against Braves with homer.

Bob Burke, Senators: Scattered eight Philadelphia hits to win 3-2.

Augie Galan, Dodgers: Batted Cardinal pitching for four hits.

Van Mungo, Dodgers: Held Phillies to four hits, fanning nine.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

King Baseball reigned supreme once more at the local Exhibition Park last night, when the local senior aggregation held their initial work-out of the season. Fully 30 players answered a belated call to attend the season's initial practice, but not in vain as the players settled into the spirit of the spring-like weather and tied down to work with a vengeance. Coach Mills was probably the busiest man around the diamond, but his spirit of satisfaction, following the showing of the players, in Keelf proved most interesting.

Just prior to the practice, W. E. Rowsome, chairman of the Belleville Athletic Commission, was on hand and announced that the team would be known as the Stewart-Warners for 1935 C.O.B.L. competition. Five juniors, three received from infielders and a host of outfardeners went through an hour of stiff practice under the watchful eye of Coach "Foamy" Mills. A number of players still broke that at last season's "Peeney" Mills had been found and the local massive ball at bat and greet play will increase from the bench. Dean Ford, Nicky Sero and Sonny Green were others to be travelling at mid-season form.

Although Curt Casey was an absentee last night "Radios" had no less than five proven hurlers on the mound during the practice session. Also individual following from its own centred area. When the Kiwanis Club offered to foster junior baseball in the city this old idea came into being once again. Today we find four junior baseball teams, coming from various parts of the city, competing in a league as prevailed before the war. The Rotary Club, the Hall Mill and West Mill were all represent ed and the fur started to fly last night. Managers were appointed and directly following the meeting, se lections were made. Interesting in the relative strength of their clubs, with the Kiwanis Club and the T.A.B.A. have manifested interest in baseball among the younger elements. Their object should prove a boom to the game locally, and as "Ernie" Rowsome, president of the B.A.B.A. said—"in two years time we will no longer have to import baseball players with such enthusiasm as is shown among these youngsters, we can keep just as good material at home." He's up to the fans to support these kids.

Frank Boucher To Hold Trophy For All Time

Oklawa, April 25—(CP)—The Lady Byng Trophy, given by the wife of Canada's Governor-General, a familiar figure, will become the permanent possession of Lt. Col. Gilmour, senior, Frank Boucher of New York Rangers of the National Hockey League.

This was the information conveyed to Walter Gilmour, acting secretary of the Ottawa Journal, last night by Frank Boucher, brother of the trophy donor, according to Gilhooly, the N.H.L. press boy writes. Col. C. Willis, O'Connor, senior aide-de-camp at Government House here, that Boucher will forever hold the trophy, emblematic of sportsmanship and ability for which his name has become associated. The dark-haired player has won it seven times since Lady Byng donated it in 1925.

At present on her way to England Lady Byng wrote Col. O'Connor desiring the trophy bearing her name to be permanently given to Boucher.

Stewart-Warners Have 30 Out At First Practice of Season

Fielding and Hitting Nearly as Good as in Mid-Season

The largest first-night turnout of aspiring baseball players to grace the local ball yard in many years answered the call of spring training issued by the Stewart-Warners at the Exhibition Park last evening when over 30 ballsters cavorted about under the watchful eye of Coach "Foamy" Mills for well over an hour. A fine galaxy of diamond stars in the rough limbered up with a short period of fielding and batting practice, interspersed with a number of the 1934 Nationals came ex-junior players staging their first attempt in senior company, while three proven Toronto players added to the prowess of the practice, much to the satisfaction of Manager Young.

(Ossie Mellroy smacks one)

The fore-part of the evening was devoted to a light fielding practice with Coach Mills dishing the pellets around the infield with ease. Following the homerings of the players' arms the work-out developed into mid-season activity as the fielders snapped the ball around with dexterity. While the infielders were labouring profusely, an array of outfielders were shagging flies in the outer garden. On the west side of the diamond, in the bull pen, five hurlers were seen slowly warming up and getting the kinks out of their arms. Headed by Jack "Chief" Williams, the hurling corps on hand included Art Calhoun, ex-C.O.B.L. and O.B.A. pitcher of Toronto, Ernie Smith, Bud Wilkins and Bill Hamblett, of the local junior ranks last season. Following the warmingup period, batting practice was undertaken, the fielders taking turns tossing the spherical over the plate for a short batting practice period.

Barclay Will Do

Jim Barclay, star receiver from Toronto, did the receiving during the fielding practice and impressed the fans as being a catcher of the first school. Barclay's throws were always accurate despite the early-ness of the season. During the batting practice Coach Mills donned the catcher's outfit and shared the perch with "Sonny" Green for well over 40 minutes, with all above named hurlers taking their turns on the hillup, but no actual scoring down was permitted. Around the infield Baker and Darnley were seen working out with ease at first, two ex-Juniors, Met Little and Nicky Sero laboured at the keystone sack and took the eyes of the fans with their sensational pickups. Over at short Dean Ford returned to his old love with the same dash and assurance that carried him to heights in the C.O.B.L. last season. At third Ossie Mellroy, ex-T.A.B.A. fire-pot, assumed the limelight with his mercurial fielding and doubtlessly assured himself a berth, that little thought may be needed around the question of who's who at the hot corner. In the outfield slugging fame was seen Alex Weir, Sonny Green, Sony Gray, ex-junior star; Harry Morgan, Mase Rigby, Earl Darrah, Johnnie Kerr and numerous others to swell the opening practice of the Stewart-Warners.

Following the workout, which proved most prolific and was witnessed by a large gallery of fans, Coach Mills announced that the "Radios" would take to the field again this evening. Saturday afternoon and every night next week in preparation for the coming C. O. B. L. season.

Pro Football in Colleges Forecast

Pittsburgh, April 25—(AP)—A future in which collegiate football teams as a matter of course will be composed of "professional" talent is ex-pected by Dr. Clarence Spears, college trained and sponsored by the Duluth Eskimos of the National League, who trained and coached Ernie Nevers, Ernie Caddel, D. Tyson, who classes amateurism as "a piece of snobbery."

Dr. Spears, Dartmouth professor and member of the University of Pittsburgh athletic advisory board, 1,500 physical education teachers last night in Pittsburgh convention should be substituted for the existing athletic "hypocrisy" in the country's colleges.

"Amateurism in sport in the United States is really a piece of snobbery out of place in a democracy," he said. "Tyson said before the American Physical Education Association. Amateurism is a hangover from the days of the English aristocracy.

He asked if it were not quite inconsistent "to praise students for working their way through college by waiting on fraternity table, which is often done daily, and blame them for earning a little money by playing football, which they do very well."

NEWARK BEARS TAKE LEAD IN INT. LEAGUE

Win Six of Last Eight Games By One Run Margin

If the theory, that the teams that win the close ones are the ones from which are in the pennant fight at the finish holds true through the current International campaign then Newark Bears appeared to be headed right for the top spot.

The Bears already have taken the lead by that method, winning six of their eight games by one run margins, and hadn't lost only one close decision. In the past three days they have pulled as many games out of the fire with ninth inning rallies, turning back Buffalo 4-3 in the series opener yesterday.

It's the old adverse "break" Newark might have won that game most decisively, Bill Beschberger, who already had belted one home run, came up with Frankie Kiley on first and Ossie Orwoll on third in the third inning. He succeeded in "hitting the ball out of the park" but it struck a wire and bounced back into the field for a double that drove in the winning run. Ollie Carnegie of the Bisons also hit for the circuit.

The slugging Baltimore Orioles trailed along behind second place at half-game behind Newark by scalping Buffalo 11-2 and preparing to invade Toronto that dropped the Leafs to third place. The Orioles smacked five more homers, including Vincent Puccinelli's seventh of the year, to run their season total to 23.

On the other side of the picture, Albany and Rochester got the benefit of Baltimore's slump by a pair of mound duels from Montreal and Syracuse respectively. Ken Chase, Maywood Reboer, 39-year-old Rochester veteran, limited the Royals to seven hits and scored the first run off Ry Vandenberg, who gave only three hits in the last seven and one minute. Jimmy Carthyen of Albany was the hero in the Montreal-Albany game by the Bisons at 1 through the Royals outhit the Senators 9-2. A pair of Montreal errors in the fifth inning gave the Bisons the first which never was overcome.

EDMONTON GRADS WIN CAGE CROWN

Defeat Alumnae of Windsor Third Straight Time 44-31

Windsor, Ont., March 29—(CP)—The Canadian Women's Basketball championship has been accounted for once more. J. Percy Page's Edmonton Grads, who have been early today for Toronto on the first leg of their journey home after experiencing what their coach termed "the toughest series yet," in defeating the Windsor Alumnae. Another chapter was concluded in the Canadian basketball story last night, when the Albertans defeated Windsor-Wayfield alumnae 44 to 31, to gain the Canadian crown for the 12th consecutive time.

It was the third straight victory for the Grads over their easter opponents, the first game ending 31-30 and the second 36-31, Windsor was leading 18-11. Last night's contest, before a packed house, was a repeat of the two previous fixtures, was nonal fouls being called, 16 of which went to the losers.

From a basketball standpoint, play ragged, marked particularly by the numerous fouls, and the lack of accuracy of shooting players. The losers were handicapped themselves on the ball in their efforts to break up the short, speedy passing attacks of the Grads.

The winners led 15-8 at the end of the first quarter, 25-15 at half time and 32-18 when the third period was terminated. Each team scored 13 points in the final session.

Stamping herself as one of the best feminine basketballers in Canada Wills Hyttenrauch gave a flawless display to top all participants. Playing for the entire 40 minutes and never sparing herself the slim alumnae forward polled five field goals and counted five free efforts for a total of 15. Doris Peale, chunky Grad guard, led her teammates in the point-getting with six field goals for a total of 12, while Capt. Margaret MacBurney and tall Noel MacMillan split the remaining points equally. Miss MacDonald had 12 free throws, six of which scored on.

JUNIOR TOWN LOOP FORMED BY KIWANIS

City Divided Into Four Zones For Playing Purposes

DEVELOP YOUTH

Four teams were represented to compete in the Belleville Junior Baseball League, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, at a largely attended meeting of personages interested in that branch of baseball held in the C.O.A. The city was divided into four zones, each team captain being selected into whose hands the formation of teams was left. The teams in the league are the Hall Mill, South End, East Hill, West Hill and eight players. Representatives from each named section were present when the league was formed and junior local baseball was placed on a firm basis and backed by the Belleville Junior Baseball Association and sponsored by the local Kiwanis Club. The league decided not to affiliate with the O.B.A.A. this year.

W. E. Rowsome, chairman of the B.A.B.A., welcomed the players and interested citizens to the gathering and explained the workings of the parent body. "It is our hope, that by forming the players and the public can succeed to the Kiwanis Club, the

Easter Day Services

St. John's Anglican Church

The services for Easter Day at St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc came as a natural and joyous culmination to the week-night services of Lenten services and duties of the week of witness and the three hour service of Good Friday, with its gloom and sadness.

The beautiful little church was radiant from it spring decoring which had been done with loving and willing hands by the members of the ladies' Guild and was very bright and beautiful with potted daffodils and the flowers on the window and bedecked the large west window. Around the Lectern and Prayer desk were potted lilies and daffodils and the flowers on the altar were large Easter lilies, very daffodils, interspersed with red tulips. Those were presented "to the glory of God" and in loving memory of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Spurr and their children, John William Spurr, Isabel Moore Spurr, Gertrude, wife of Dr. B. M. Spurr, also of Leslie, Harold and Ted Mickle, Mrs. T. L. Nickle and family.

Lighted candles also lent of their brightness and cheer to the Easter Festival. Beginning with the Processional Hymn, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today, Alleluia", the morning service was opened with the Easter salvation, then followed the confession and absolution. The Psalter anthem "Christ Our Pass over" (Humphrey) was sung after which the choral communion service was rendered. The anthem "He Lives" (T. Lincoln Bates) was well rendered by the choir. Other hymns used were "He is risen, He is risen" and after communion, at which about forty-five attended, came the "Gloria in Excelsis" the Benediction and the Recessional hymn, "Christ the Lord is Risen today".

A full surpliced choir, a large and reverent congregation and beautiful flowers all assisted in making the fervent, Easter message of the rector, Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne, most effective. The sermon was taken from the text "He is not here but has risen" Luke, 24:6.

St. Peter's Presbyterian Church

The services of Easter Day were observed in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc, by a large congregation. Many visitors and friends from abroad were also present. Suitable music was rendered by the choir, Following the offertory, Mrs. (Dr.) A. C. Crawford sang most acceptably, the classic song by Hawley, "Christ Has Opened Paradise". The pastor, Rev. W. A. Hunter, B.D., based his sermon on the words of the Apostle Paul, "Christ being raised from the dead, dieth no more". Miss Marion Robertson presided at the organ. Easter lilies and pink tulips, the gift of the Ladies Aid Society, decorated the Communion Table.

At the evening service, Rev. Mr. Hunter, Chaplain to the men in the government road camps gave a vigorous and interesting account of the religious work being done in the camps. He stated that during the last two years, as chaplain, he had visited forty-eight camps, walked two thousand miles and distributed four tons of books and tracts. He had travelled 20,000 miles and had received a friendly and hospitable welcome, in the camps.

Trinity United Church

The Easter services in Trinity United Church were exceedingly well attended. In the morning communion was celebrated and ten persons united with the church on profession of faith. The choir rendered two beautiful anthems "O Death Where is Thy Sting" and "He is Risen". The pastor, the Rev. G. W. Rivers took for his subject, "Keeping The Feast" taking his text from the First Corinthians, verse eight, chapter five, "Let us keep the Feast."

The evening services were of special institution as the choir rendered the beautiful Easter cantata "The First Easter," the solos being taken by Mesdames Wesley Hulin, George White and Zwercher and Miss Norma Fair, by Messrs Wm. Fletcher, W. Rose and A. Abbott.

The quartette comprising Mrs. Dr. Eagleson, Mrs. Wesley Hulin, Miss Edna Salisbury and Miss Norma Fair also sang most acceptably.

The cantata was under the direction of Mrs. Leslie Ashley.

On Monday evening about forty members of Trinity United Church gathered in the basement to hold a very appetizing turkey dinner. Following the sumptuous repast, Will Fletcher acted as toast master and choir president Will Fletcher conducted the following program:

Toast to the King—Wm. Fletcher, God Save The King.

Toast to the Church—R. Wellman and Rev. G. W. Rivers.

Toast to the visitors—A. Abbott and Mrs. Jas. Kincaid.

A cheque for fifty dollars was presented to the church by the choir and received by Rev. Rivers. Mr. A. Abbott moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Will Fletcher for his work in the choir's interests. Mr. Will Fletcher moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Leslie Ashley for her unstinting efforts and devotion to the work of the choir. All present responded very heartily.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL PRESENTS COLORS TO R.C.M.P.

Looking down on the first and only ceremony of its kind — the presentation of their first guidon or colors to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police which took place during the visit to Regina, Sask., training barracks of the famous force by Gov.-Gen. and Lady Bessborough, en route home on special farewell tour of the Dominion. Major-General J. H. MacBrien, commissioner of the force, flew to Regina to accept the colors from his excellency. The photographer has caught the moment of the consecration of the colors just before the presentation and was one of the most colorful ceremonies the west has seen since great war days.

SUCCESSFULLY PASSED EXAMS

Thomasburg, April 25—Easter day the queen of festivals was observed in a fitting manner by both the Methodist and United Churches.

In Christ Church at 9 a.m. there was choral communion service with the Rector the Rev. F. C. Beaver being the celebrant to almost fifty communicants.

The church was beautiful to behold and at Confirmation, the chancel being adorned with potted flowers while the altar looked beautiful with Easter lilies. The lilies were later presented to the sick members of the congregation. The Rector delivered an excellent message befitting this festive Easter season.

The hymns for this service were "Welcome Happy Morning," "Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia," "Christ the Lord is Risen Today" and "Christ the Lord is risen today Alleluia." The Easter service was held at 3 p.m. in the United Church. Easter lilies, potted plants and daffodils added to the beauty of the church. Rev. R. B. Herrington the pastor delivered a special message from his remarks from the words found in I. Cor. 15-20, "But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept". Reading with the murmuring waterfalls. The choir entered the church singing processional "Christ the Lord is Risen Today." Other hymns were "Crown Him With Many Crowns," "Ye Saints" The Risen Christ is Glorious and "The Head that once was Crowned with Thorns is Crowned with Glory Now." During the service the choir rendered two anthems.

The last of a series of Lenten services was largely attended in the Christ Church on Thursday evening. The Rector Rev. F. C. Beaver based his remarks from the text "Father Forgive Them for They know not What they Do," also dealing with the seven utterances of our Lord from the cross. Special Lenten hymns were used at this service.

NEW ZEALAND LETS BRITAIN DECIDE

When Britain is at War, We Are at War, Says Premier

Ottawa, April 24—(CP)—Prime Minister G. W. Forbes of New Zealand sees no necessity for discussion of sanctions or of the foreign policy being pursued by the government of the United Kingdom he said in an interview here today. He said New Zealand had been kept informed as to the progress of the negotiations carried on by Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, with Germany and other European powers and as to the proceedings at the Stresa Conference.

"When Great Britain is at war, we are at war," was the New Zealand leader's blunt pronouncement on the international policy of his country.

N.Z. Sees Signs Of Better Times

Ottawa, April 25—(CP)—Economic conditions in New Zealand are definitely on the mend, unemployment is decreasing, trade with Britain increased and the government has balanced the budget with a surplus of $6,000,000 following a long series of deficits. This was the encouragement of the free-wheelers Dominion brought to Ottawa today by Prime Minister G. W. Forbes who is on the way to London to attend the King's Jubilee celebrations.

OWES HIS LIFE TO DOG

Edmonton.—Ray Winters owes his life to his dog. When fire broke out in his shack the dog barked loudly, awakening Winters who fled to safety. Winters, police say, is the individual who placed a dummy on a chair in his home to keep mischievous children away. The act resulted in a call to police to investigate a "murder".

QUOTA, CURRENCY WARS BRANDED

Tariff Wars Blamed By Percy Bates of S. S. Line

Liverpool, April 24 (CP-Havas)—World prosperity will not return until quota and currency "wars" are ended, Percy Bates, Chairman of the Cunard-White Star Lines, declared here today at the annual meeting of stockholders.

"The company cannot prosper," he said, "until prosperity returns to the Atlantic trade. The Atlantic trade cannot prosper until the world prospers. There is war today —universal war. The weapons are not navies, armies or airplanes, but tariff quotas and shifting currencies. Every change in the tariff quotas or in currency levels is nothing more than a bottle move in this war."

PADLOCKED SON'S LEGS

Colombo.—A mother who kept her son's legs padlocked together when she went to work, was discharged with a warning when she appeared in court, accused of "wrongfully confining". She said it was done to prevent her son from running into the road.

London Completes Her Gala Dress For the Jubilee

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 24 (CP Cable) London is rapidly completing her gala dress for the Silver Jubilee of the King's accession to the Throne.

All public monuments on the route of the Royal procession for the great thanksgiving service at St. Paul's Cathedral on May 6 are undergoing an exceptional scrubbing and polishing. The great cross above the dome of St. Paul's has been given a new gilt coating, as have the "pineapples" adorning the cathedral's western tower.

That extraordinary monument marking the site of Temple Bar, where the King will receive the "city" sword from the Lord Mayor, has had a thorough washing down although it is beyond the ability of anyone to make this memorial beautiful or even intelligible.

Unfortunately for some of the visitors, who may not have seen London before, is the fact in the general overhaul many of London's most attractive features have been temporarily obliterated. The great gothic pile of the law courts, for instance, is well hidden behind the stands erected for spectators, as are two churches of St. Clements and St. Mary's, standing picturesquely like islands in the middle of the Strand.

If the seats are taken as eagerly as the promoters anticipate, both churches however will reap more in ticket money than perhaps in a year's offertories.

The final gracious procession way from Buckingham Palace has the appearance of something like Wembley stadium with tiers of seats. Several clubs in Pall Mall offer members a seat at the window with breakfast or luncheon for five guineas apiece—about $25. But 15 guineas—$75— without refreshments is quoted for "window accommodation for four or five" in St. Paul's churchyard, where the arrival of their Royalties and the accompanying ceremonies may be viewed.

Three Extra Freights Leave

Sarnia, Ont., April 24 (CP)—Further evidence of economic improvement was furnished today when three extra Canadian National freight trains left the local terminal eastbound. Six trains in all were cleared, the other three regulars.

CHILDREN MOVE ON TO TORONTO

Will Bring Attention of Government to Relief Workers

Welland, Ont., April 24—(CP)—Forty one children, packed in a glistening red truck, left Crowland at one o'clock today for Toronto, where they will stage daily demonstrations in front of the parliament buildings in Queen's Park in order to draw attention to the case for their parents, striking Crowland relief workers.

Prior to the departure, the children led a parade of the strikers into the city of Welland. At the bounds between Welland and Crowland t strikers were informed by Pol Chief Arthur Davies they would n be permitted to hold a para through Welland streets. T marchers then left the roadway a filed along the sidewalk into the c in orderly fashion.

The children bound for Toron will halt in Hamilton for lunch. is expected they will arrive Queen's Park after four pm.

The truck is bearing banners a placards carried by the children.

Although sporadic instances alone throwing occurred yesterd and the mobbey of Reeve Fred Kilgour of Crowland was slightly i jured, when struck by a flying m sile there were no signs of viole today.

OWL THRIVES ON PUBLICITY

Edmonton.—For giving a hotel guest a bad start by hooting from the fork of his bed, a great northern owl that entered through an open window was treated to a personally conducted tour of business offices here.

Newsmen's cameras caught him in an indignant pose atop a typewriter, staring fiercely at the flash operator. But the bird warmed to publicity and strutted proudly about the office while reservation for a perch was made at the zoo.

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

The King and the Duke of Connaught.

Son of Queen Victoria and uncle of King George, the Duke of Connaught had considerable influence on the British royal family.

Long experience in court life, to say nothing of his military and diplomatic career, made the Duke of Connaught one of the King's most trusted advisers from the moment he ascended the throne.

To-day he still retains that status, though he is well past the eighty-year mark.

the occasion of the ceremony of the installation of the new Knights of the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath, of which the Duke is great master.

In 1911 the Duke of Connaught held the position of Governor-General of Canada, the first royal prince to have so appointed. His daughter Princess Patricia, was famed through the land for her charm and loveliness, and a Canadian army unit was formed when war broke out called the Princess Pats. They had an entirely different fame however, winning the reputation of being one of the hardest fighting units at the front.

WOMEN IN QUEBEC

"Women are not people, at any rate in the province of Quebec," concluded D. A. MacDonald, delivering the address in connection with the Montreal Debating Club's fourth annual public speaking contest for which he won the Milton Hersey gold medal. "A woman in this province, he declared, had no power over her own property or her children; an dcould not even have a surgical operation on her own body without her husband's consent.

Kidneys Bothered Her for Many Years

Ontario Lady Always Finds Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. Rice Always Has a Word of Praise For Dodd's

Chatsworth, Ont., April 25 — (Special)—"I am thirty-eight years old and have been a user of Dodd's Kidney Pills for many years," writes Mrs. Geo. Rice, a resident of this place. "As a girl I seemed to have a weak back and my kidneys were in poor shape, as mother used to give me Dodd's Kidney Pills and I always felt better. Ever since that time, whenever I feel a tired feeling across the back, I take Dodd's Kidney Pills and the ache disappears. I now have four children and do all my own work. I always keep a box on hand."

The best evidence of the merit of Dodd's Kidney Pills is the fact that all users are so enthusiastic about them. Both men and women in all walks of life have found great benefit from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. You too can wisely follow their advice and keep a box on hand at all times, in case of

OBSERVANCE OF GOOD FRIDAY IS THEME OF TALK

Fred Elgie Addresses Meeting of Stirling Y. P. S.

Stirling, April 25—The regular meeting of St. Paul's Young People's Society was held in the church parlors on Monday evening at eight o'clock. The President, Mr. Harry Hulin conducted the devotional exercises which consisted of a song service and the Scripture lesson being read responsively. Mrs. Wescott gave the secretary's report. The remainder of the programme was under the direction of the President who called on Miss Grace Wigle who gave a splendid reading, entitled "Great Easter Morn." Mr. Fred Elgie gave a fine talk on the subject of Easter. He first discussed in detail the full meaning of Easter, and thoughtfully explained what took place in the life of Jesus from the time of crucifixion to the resurrection. The speaker brought forth in his talk the fact that the United Church of Canada through its governing board, considered the advisability of holding a church service on Good Friday of each year. A vote was taken, which left the matter in the hands of the local board, at the same time enabling the board to act in accordance with the prevailing conditions of the various communities. It was a very interesting topic and decidedly educational, especially for the younger folk of the congregation who should become better acquainted with modern church law.

The President, Mr. Harry Hulin gave a flee talk on the meaning of Hallelujah, a word that is used a great deal in the Scriptures as well as in sacred music, but with which the average person does not any too familiar. Mrs. Vera Wescott put on an interesting contest, and the color contest showed a good attendance. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mr. Nelson Dellve in the hour of his father who passed away on Monday, April 22nd. in his 82nd. year at his home in Queensboro. The deceased, John Dellve was a brother of Mr. Herb Dellve of Stirling.

Glen Ross Hockey Club Held Successful Dance

On Monday evening April 22nd. a large number of dancers lovers attended a splendid dance sponsored by the Centre League hockey champions. The public have not yet forgotten the excellent performance of this team throughout the hockey season and turned out strong in support of their last enterprise of the year. The same supporters also cheered them to victory, attended the dance which was put on in an effort to meet their financial obligations, and once again they scored a win, for the proceeds exceeded their objective. Dancing began at nine o'clock to the fine music supplied by Charlie Allen and his orchestra. A delightful lunch was served by the club members at midnight, who made a fine appearance in their new bright red and white hockey sweaters.

Visitors were present from Bellville, Trenton, Frankford, and all other teams in the league were well represented.

Fire Damages Home of Conley Ackers

On Thursday at midnight, fire of an undetermined source did considerable damage to the home of Conley Ackers. Mr. Ackers who lives alone in the house was away at the time of the fire. A passerby however, saw the flames burst-ing through the roof and turned in the alarm. The local firemen were on hand in record time and succeeded in getting the fire under control before serious consequence to any of the surrounding buildings. A great deal of damage was reported in the interior. Mr. Ackers was not prepared to estimate the loss which was partly covered by insurance.

Sefton Dislocated Wrist

Mrs. Nelson Dellve suffered a dislocation of the right wrist on Monday. Not realizing that the injury was in any way serious, Mrs. Dellve failed to seek medical advice until Tuesday morning when the swelling and pain alarmed her. Upon examination Dr. Morley found the trouble and placed the wrist in a splint.

Injuries Are at Work

Mr. Ernie Dainard suffered an injury to his left while at work on the new bridge on the Frankford road. What was at first considered a twist proved to be a serious strain to the left fore arm. The attending physician has set the arm in the proper position and Mr. Dainard will be unable to carry for some time.

Many friends and relatives gathered to pay final respects at the funeral of the late Mrs. Hanna McLaw, beloved wife of Andrew McGee, who passed away at her home on Wednesday, April 16th. The funeral took place at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Friday, April 19th. The service was conducted by Rev. J. A. Kolfend. Left to mourn her passing are the husband Mr. Andrew McGee, two daughters, Mrs. Louis Rogers, Rawdon, and Mrs. Chalfield, Campbellford, four sons, Messrs. Percy and Garfield, Buffalo, N.Y., Frank of Rawdon, and Clarence at home. Three brothers and one sister—John McLaw of Stirling, Thomas and Charlie of Hamilton, and Mrs. T. J. Wrennick of Stratford.

The many friends who gathered at the church, and the many floral tributes were a testimony to the esteem in which the deceased was held. Among those who sent floral tributes were: Pillow from the husband and family, and other flowers from Mr. and Mrs. T. J. McGee, Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Wrennick, Stratford; Mr. and Mrs. John McCaw, Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. H. Walker, Montreal; Mr. Archie B. and T. J. McGee, Stirling; Miss Ida Sherman, Buffalo, N.Y.; Canadian National, and C.P.R.A.S. railroad employees, Buffalo, N.Y.; St. Andrew's Church Women's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid, Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Cranston, Stirling; L.O.L. No. 655; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rogers; Mrs. Robert Rogers and Mrs. Arthur Gordanier, Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hagerman; Miss Edna Sherman, Stirling, and Mrs. C. Sherman, Bulfalo, N.Y.

The pall bearers were the four sons: Percy, Frank, Garfield, and Clarence, and two son-in-law, Messrs. Rogers and Charles Chalfield. Interment was made in Stirling cemetery.

Special Easter Service

A very impressive Easter service was conducted by St. Paul's United Church on Sunday morning when the congregation was privileged to hear as special speaker, Dr. Charles Endicott, D.D. A special anthem was given by the choir during the service, "Christ is Risen," by Maunder. Miss Betty Conley offered as a solo "Oh, Boyne Heath, Mr. J. Palmer and Ralph Richardson.

Choosing as his text—"And He Appeared Unto Them in Another Form," Dr. Endicott delivered a very interesting sermon, bringing forth in a pronounced fashion that Christ appears to each individual in a form that suits his need. He appeared to Mary as the gardner, and later as a spirit to the disciples on the Sea of Galilee. "We may not be led to Christ by a different means," stated Dr. Endicott. "The wise men of the East were led to His side by a star, and the shepherds heard music, but all were led to Christ. Every individual must serve through his own need. We may think as we will whether or not Christ has appeared unto us. It may have been in a crowded auditorium or in the quiet of our own study but unless we are watchful and seek Jesus, He may not appear unto us. Loud shouting and a radical moral change in our lives are not always evidence that Christ has appeared unto us."

The closing to the Doctor told of an interesting experience of a Vancouver minister who was the means of redeeming an ex-convict. The convict, while serving his time, learned to be a tailor, and the minister, in to help him, gave him an order for a suit of clothes on the day of his release. The contact created through this transaction was the means of bringing him to Christ. The ex-convict is now a prosperous business man in the city of Vancouver.

The entire service was one of great inspiration and in true keeping with the Easter thought.

Mr. Tom McGrath has purchased the farm formerly occupied by the late John Osborne just west of the village. Mrs. Osborne will take up residence in the west half of Mrs. G. W. Hockey's house on Church Street. The farm will be operated by Mr. McGrath's son Frank, who will take possession within the next week or ten days.

Mr. Garfield McGee returned to Buffalo on Tuesday, after attending the funeral of his mother, the late Mrs. Andrew McGee.

740,000 OF IDLE GET HALF CROWN EXTRA AT JUBILEE

London, April 24 (AP)—Between the national and local authorities and voluntary organizations plans have been prepared to make rare the unemployed individual who will not forget to remember May 6—Accession Day.

Some 740,000 receivers of unemployment assistance relief will draw an extra half crown (normally 26 cents) on that day.

Blind people in need will also draw an extra two shillings. The poor in hospitals will be given special fare with tobacco and cigarettes added for men.

The King has given his consent to a project for a series of free theatre performances for the poor.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why external remedies as applied to sore and painful piles are only for relief? Why they do not reach to true circulatory cause?

Why Piles may "come back" even after a first removal by cutting?

Do you know the cause of Piles in internal?

That there is congestion of blood in the lower intestines, which flabby, the parts lifeless?

Do you know that there is a harmless internal remedy for itching, bleeding or protruding piles discovered by Dr. Leonhardt called HEM-ROID and sold with your money back if not entirely satisfied with the help one bottle gives?

HEM-ROID relieves piles by relieving congested circulation and helps to heal and restore the sore surfaces.

HEM-ROID is so successful in even the most severe cases that Mr. J. S. McKown and other good druggists offer every sufferer a test at a bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets today—from them at his discretion if not completely satisfied with results—your money back.

From Calcutta to London

By the India and Eastern Service.

The following article, which deals with the journey from Calcutta to Croydon by the services of Imperial Airways, appeared recently in the Place Review, to which acknowledgment is made.

Departure From Calcutta.

21 February, 1935.—This is our first flight, and we have been wondering for weeks whether we shall manage to get up at the unearthly hours scheduled for the start from the various resting places on our route. Here, at the Great Eastern Hotel, Calcutta, we are to leave at 4 a.m. for the services at Dum-Dum. The first time-table says we leave the aerodrome at 5.30, but last night we had a warning to be ready at 5 a.m., in order to avoid the mist which thickens towards dawn.

The alarm clock, the bearer and the hotel staff are all ready to wake us at 3.15 a.m., but actually we are ready dressed by that time! After a brief meal in our room we take our seats in the taxi and start for Dum-Dum. Calcutta looks strangely unreal and in the quietness of this early hour, and her empty streets soon give place to dark misty lanes, in which the huge eyes of bullocks shining in the glare of our headlights give us barely sufficient warning of the approach of their carts, with tremendously long bamboos projecting fore and aft. We narrowly avoid getting ditched at one of the curves, and find the turning off the main road into the aerodrome, with some difficulty, but arrive in good time to be weighed in. We are allowed 221 lb. of luggage each, including our own personal weight.

Three other passengers who have come from Singapore soon arrive, and we go across from the hangar to inspect the four-engined monoplane that is to take us across India. From outside the Arethusa looks surprisingly flimsy, but this feeling vanishes when one is in the cabin, which is rather after the fashion of a comfortable restaurant car, with nine cane-backed chairs, adjustable to various angles.

One of our new passengers has not been staying at the Great Eastern, and has not received the notice to be ready at 3.15 a.m., and we leave to the official time, 5.30. He arrives nonchalantly at 5.29, or pretty near it. Even then we do not start, a lorry with bright searchlights moves slowly out into the mist, and we hear it circling the aerodrome. Someone says a cow is reported to have got into the landing ground. Perhaps for our flight will be even briefer than we expected! However, the lorry returns, the engines crackle and roar, we taxi bumpily for a long distance to our starting point, swing round, open full out, and in a few seconds are above the mist, shooting along as comfortably as in a motor boat on a quiet lake. There is no feeling of side-slipping, no great noise; we speak without actually raising our voices.

The lights are switched out and the other four passengers settle down to finish off their sleep, but we watch the first greyness of dawn whitening behind us. Calcutta is blotted out in a dark cloud.

"Cloud Icebergs".

Day overtakes us rapidly; we seem to be flying over an ocean, with cloud icebergs floating in the pale blue mist. After half an hour the clouds become curdled, with thin cracks between, through which we see fragments of the pulled pattern of the fields below. This for the first time gives us a sensation of height, or rather of depth below us, as though below the surface of the seas on which our barque is floating we could see the ocean floor three hundred fathoms down.

By 6.30 a.m. we are moving smoothly over villages of miniature houses, variegated fields and woods, with intensely green patches of cultivation here and there, and a river meandering along our route. Footpaths and roads seem marked out with little gravity. Wispy streamers of gold float rapidly from the thin line of railway cuts across the landscape with a ridiculously tiny engine just beneath us.

Towards 7 a.m. the first small hills begin to appear out of the alluvial plain, lines of Dolerite dykes and rare isolated hillocks, but now heavy white clouds reappear, and we climb higher to get over them. Hidden below them lie the Raniganj and Jharia coalfields, of which we catch only an occasional glimpse of a mine, a club-house or a group of quarters through rare gaps in the white floor of our isolated world.

By the time the clouds are dispersed we are near Hazaribagh. Coffee is served as we are covering the rather monotonous north perth of Birgula, Korea and Rewa States. At 8.30 we are approaching the steep eastern scarp edge of the Rewah plateau, with cement and lime works dusting the plain at the hillside. The plateau is rather like a small edition of the South African Karroo, its horizontal beds being cut into by deep and steep-sided valleys.

We pass Mirzapur with the widening Ganges on our north. We meet a French plane on its way to Calcutta. Ah! Here's the Allahabad flying ground. It's flying at us! We're 'ish—we're landed! You expected a bump? So did we, but we are pleasantly disappointed. Still now we are on the ground and taxiing across the rough field, it is as bumpy as though we were motoring on a very bad road. We dismount exactly at 12 a.m. and move across to the cool, clean little resthouse for breakfast. The Dutch plane arrives shortly after us, and the Arethusa makes way for it at the refueling stand.

By 10.45 we are up again, following the Ganges westwards. The hills are larger than in Bengal, and no longer brown and bare, but green in places. We sleep most of the way to Cawnpore, where we look out on the long buildings, of which, here over, we see nothing. The places that stand out from the air are the Railway Station and Loon. sheds and woollen mills. We only touch for about ten minutes here; then away for Delhi. The houses here have well-built courtyards, and irrigation canals cut across the plain, with feeder channels running out from them.

New Delhi From the Air.

New Delhi shows up well from the air, and the main buildings are easily distinguished. We come down for lunch at the aerodrome, leaving again at 2.50 p.m. On our left the Kutab Minar raises a monitory finger, and below us ruined tombs seem to be as numerous as the villages.

Most of our flying during the day has been about 3,000 feet up, but we now rise to 6,500, where it is a good deal cooler. The last hundred miles into Jodhpur look very desolate. Every field has one or more enclosures of raised earth, about 40 to 60 feet in diameter, possibly cattle enclosures. There are also many hollowed gashes cut into the earth, up which we can see some slow movement taking place—apparently some form of well.

At 5.50 p.m. we drop down into Jodhpur. The town is large and closely built: the old citadel palace of the Maharajah dominates it, perched up on a high rock like a fort. A new palace is nearly completed, looking like a large modern hotel. About 400 yards from the aerodrome the Maharaja has built a truly palatial State Hotel. The walls are of red sandstone; the architecture satisfying. We are conducted to a large room with dressing and bathrooms adjoining. The carpets and curtains are of beautiful design and taste; the furniture modern and made of fine woods. We sit on the balcony and sip our tea, watching occasional camel riders swing by silently in the gathering dusk. We could not ask for more comfort at the end of our first day's flight.

22 February, 1935—We rise at 3.30 and take final, but brief, look, and drive down to the aerodrome at 4.30. The Captain tells us he is taking on a little extra petrol and will not start until 5, so we return to the hotel for half-an-hour's rest and sip another cup of tea. Dawn is later by the clock here than in Bengal, and when we are at last seated in the plane, and turn off the lights, it is still quite dark. We rise quietly over Jodhpur with its electric lights sparkling like two handfuls of scattered jewels. Casseopeia peeps under the wing of our plane, and the morning star, shining most brilliantly behind us, is reflected in the metal of our window frames. Only at very rare intervals we see a solitary light below us, marking a village. Generally we might as well be flying over the sea, so void is the desert. Frequent sparks from the exhaust of the engines streak over the wings. No one can say either that the route for one presumes it is all right.

At 6.30 the sky pales, and gradually one can make out long lines of structure below us in long series—and the desert is transformed. Big rectangular fields, vivid green with crops, extend to the horizon, and prosperous little towns are splashed on the map, mainly mud, the desert again from Hyderabad to Karachi.

Arrival at Karachi.

Coming down on to the aerodrome at Karachi we see the mooring mast built for the R.101, and the tremendous hangar, but on landing we have little time for sight-seeing. Breakfast is served in the resthouse close at hand, after which we say "good-bye" to the Arethusa and climb up to the Horsa, four-engined like the Arethusa, but a biplane, with an engine to each wing. She has twice as much accommodation as the Arethusa.

From Calcutta to London

thuse, but is rather slower.

We take on one new passenger at Karachi, climb slowly up over the town, and bump over the hot land towards the sea. Over the sea it is much more steady. We pass over fishing boats and can see their nets spreading out under the water; and look! when we pass over low clouds the sun makes a complete circular rainbow around the shadow of our plane on the cloud surface.

Soon we pass out of sight of land, but later the high coast of Baluchistan swings south towards us, with white and pale-grey cliffs almost horizontally bedded, their tops flat and even for long distances. By noon we are near enough to see how barren it is; the sea itself is more attractive. We see a few sharks and scores of their near relatives, the Rays, floating near the surface.

Gwadar, in Baluchistan, where we stop at 1 p.m. for petrol, after putting back the clock 1½ hours, looks most desolate; three small buildings and a landing ground! But as there is a wireless operator in the neighborhood we presume there is a village not too far away. The petrol is brought here by sea, and fierce-looking Baluchis work the hand-pumps to fill our tanks. On the shore near Gwadar is a mud volcano—an indication of oil. Later on, possibly, the engines will be refuelled from Gwadar's own local supplies of petrol.

The engines seem reluctant to start after this halt, but we get away at 1.30, following the coastline westwards, standing a little way out to sea. They moving specks on the shore develop into camel and donkey riders. For miles along this coast the beds are soft, barely consolidated sands or silts, with a few harder beds that look like limestone. One of these beds, about 200 feet above sea-level, has protected the softer beds below it, and forms a plateau extending for many miles. Wherever it has been cut through the softer rocks below have rapidly weathered down to a level only a few feet above the sea, leaving here and there isolated towers and table-topped hillocks where the hard cap remains. The weathering of these alternating beds in an arid climate gives rise to vertical walls, deeply scored. A few minor hard beds stand out like mouldings, forming a natural "Cathedral rock" near Gwadar.

Lunch While In Flight.

When we are up again we take lunch in the plane. The arrangement is very similar to that of a railway dining car, and the meal is excellent. Up to 4.30 p.m. we continue to pass the same horizontally bedded, vertical-walled cliffs with outstanding needles and towers, all capped with the same hard bed. On the south side only the waters of the Gulf of Oman are visible.

Far down below us a tremendous flock of white birds moves slowly in formation above the sea, near the desolate Persian coast. Following their leader's signal they all change direction and each point in the pattern is motley, white and scarlet. By Jove, flamingos!

And now the coast is curving out towards Jask point, and the town of Jask, with its serodrome, at which the Dutch planes call, on the barren sandy plain east of the town, brings us all to peer out of the windows on the northern side of our machine. What we have seen of Persia this afternoon is not appetising. It cannot, of course, be representative; it is certainly desolate and forbidding.

The steward brings tea as we are crossing the Gulf of Oman, and as we drink there rises ahead of us a mountainous peninsula to be crossed, with the sun just about to sink beyond it. We have been travelling most of the day at about 1,200 feet, but now we climb to over 2,000. We should have been at Shargah long before this, but for a strong head wind that has delayed us. The aspect presented by the Peninsula of Oman to the east is strong featured, highly dissected and mountainous. On the west side there is a sandy belt that gives facilities for landing. It is dark before we reach the landing ground at Shargah, and flares and floodlight illumine the ground. As we come to land we see our starter plane at rest near the resthouse.

It is our first landing in the dark, and we wonder if we shall be bumped. Not in the least; we land as smoothly as in the daytime.

The Landing Ground at Shargah.

The Shargah landing ground is enclosed by barbed-wire entanglements—two lines of them—and the resthouse, also within the enclosure, proves to be a concrete fort, with flat-roofed quarters surrounding a central courtyard, and ramparts round the roof. At the corners rise square towers, with loopholes and openings below that look as though designed for pouring boiling oil or molten lead, but are perhaps only for use in case some enemy should get too near in to be covered from the loopholes above. One would like to believe they are for lead or oil, though. We walk round the ramparts and see a dark-robed Arab sentry just below us. It must be tempting to him to have a pop at those heads above the ramparts. We go down to the courtyard, which is closed at night by huge steel doors. I walk through these to get a book I left in the plane; there is a click of a rifle as I leave the fort; a guard of five men in black robes is on duty at the gate. I do not know which is the more disturbing, the unknown danger from which they are guarding us, or the scallywags themselves with their flexible fingers caressing their rifles reflectively.

Back in the lounge we find the passengers from the Karachi-bound plane, and over our cocktails muse on the fact that tomorrow night we shall be two thousand miles apart. The lounge, the bedrooms and other conveniences in the fort are clean and comfortable and well arranged. The fort is not, of course, a second Jodhpur State Hotel, but in such an out-of-the-way place it is amazingly good, and the dinner, whose materials are presumably brought from Karachi or Baghdad, is first class.

Each evening one receives a printed form giving information as to the arrangements for the night, rate of currency exchange, hour of call, and meals for the following day. We find we are to be called at 5 tomorrow, and the lounge opens very early in the evening.

And now, at the end of our second day's flight, let us review some of the doubts and warnings that were put to us before we started. We were told that we should be badly shaken and that the plane would rock worse than a boat. Well, when we fly in the dark or in the early morning, or when we are, say, 2,000 feet above the hill crests, we move as smoothly as in a motor boat on a pond. There is the same kind of rapid vibration that one gets in a closed car, and the noise is of the same kind, but rather louder. Some people are disturbed by this kind of buzzing, but most are not. One can converse more easily than in a train; it is not necessary to shout.

When there is a strong head wind at high levels the pilot may fly low to avoid it, and during the heat of the day this means bumpy flying—as unpleasant as being in a boat that is pitching badly. No one may be sick, just as one may be sea-sick; it is much the same sensation, and one can hide one's diminished head in the lavatory in the centre of the plane until it is over. Barley sugar is a useful sedative.

Some people cannot stand the sight of the horizon rising and falling at sea; they refuse to look out of the plane at the time of landing, and they will then scarcely feel anything unusual. I found it quite easy to kneel at the window taking movies and photographs, whilst the drunken earth was playing the most absurd acrobatic pranks as we landed.

We had no bumps whatever at the moment of landing, but taxi-ing across the rough landing grounds to the standstill is like coming down a very rough road. That cannot be helped.

Friday, 22 February, 1935. — 5.30 a.m. There is a faint glow of dawn in the east as we walk over to the plane and take our seats. The morning air is cold and fresh; the fine silty sand of the landing ground pleasant to walk on. At 5.40 the engines start and we taxi to position. Punctually at 5.45 we rise into the air. In the increasing light of the dawn the coastline draws away from us, marked by a few lights from fishing villages at rare intervals. On the dark sea below us the triangular sails of a couple of fishing boats are faintly luminous. We settle down for our customary seats to finish our sleep, whilst the plane steadily forges on up the Persian Gulf, over bilowy patches of low-lying early-morning cloud, below which the dark sea is visible, but less dark than when the clouds are absent. During most of this four hours of flying we are out of sight of land, and when we reach land again it is plain sandy waste, with a small wretched hut or two and occasional camels. Here and there are tiny oases here and there.

Th Persian Gulf.

Bahrein is a fairly large town with walled compounds and flat-roofed dwellings, but the serodrome some distance away is again a flat sandy waste, with a small wretched shelter to keep out the stinging and biting sand. Here we are set upon by pearl vendors. The pearls are not particularly good, but are interesting as souvenirs.

One of the local Arabs, with a gold-braided white cloak and the characteristic headdress, joins us as a passenger. We continue on our way at 10.50 over a shallow sea whose floor is generally visible, and only a few hundred yards off the coast of Arabia.

To avoid the strong head wind we climb up to 7,500 and find it markedly cold. The sea below us shines with mottled purple and green, but the white-crested waves are now scarcely distinguishable. We close most of the ventilators in the cabin wall.

We reach Koweit late—about 2 p.m.—and drop our Arab passenger. He is met by a group of local notables and taken off in a fine-looking car to the town, which is surrounded by a wall with towers at intervals. The towers have loop holes for rifles, but the whole structure is only of mud. A string of camels, roped nose to tail, files slowly into the gate of the town, and an Arab in flowing robes cycles over the sand up to the plane. Petrol, offer lintres and carpets for sale, but find business rather dull.

We reach Basra rather late for lunch and move across to the restrhouse in half a gale of wind and biting. Our notions of the heat of Basra receive a jolt. The restrhouse is clean and comfortable, the food good, and in spite of a slight attack of air sickness (Growth to Basra has been a rather bumpy journey) we make a good meal. Next weather reports are coming through from Baghdad—a heavy wind and a thunderstorm, with poor visibility. The commander decides to wait for better reports, which do not materialize. We may wait until nightfall and then flinish our journey in daylight. By nightfall however we get a gale and the sandstorm is on us. We light a fire in the lounge and sit around it in comfortable club chairs, have dinner, are warned to be ready to start at 4 to-morrow, and retire early.

The aerodrome at Basra is 15 miles from the town and the road is always bad and sometimes impassable. Supplies are not easy to get, and in spite of these circumstances we are made very comfortable. The servants are 'Iraquis; they are prompt and eager to help. They stay up all night, and in the morning as the weather conditions are still unfavorable, told they wake us at 8.15 with a good cup of tea and a breakfast of fruit, trash tea (we hot water, hustle us over our packing and have us all ready before the plane fire at 9.30.

Saturday, 24 February, 1935.

There is a 6.30 breakfast-hour (we get up and the sand cloud is still fairly persistent. Not until 7.45 does it slacken. We start our seats at 8.45 and rise just before 7. The pilot had hoped to get as far as Baghdad at 8 and leave at 9, which is the scheduled time for starting from Baghdad.

We are warned that we might blinch very high and that it will be freezingly cold. Rugs are issued and we prepare for a really chilly journey.

Somewhere east of us is a billious-looking globe that calls itself the sun, but we scarcely believe it. The ground is barely visible even at 500 feet up, but by 7.30, with the Shatt-al-Arab meandering in acres of shallow channels through its sandy wastes below us, we break out into the sunshine.

On the sandy patches standing up out of the river tripoded fields and date palms show at intervals, but often only wide stretches of shallow water with numerous clumps of brown reeds or glasses are to be seen.

The sand clouds are with us again and we bump a fair amount. One wonders if the flocks of birds flying below us feel similar bumps in their flight.

Most of the Shatt-el-Arab is obviously not navigable, but we pass over one broad sail with three straight sides, artifically kept open for boats. Villages are dotted on the houses bulk on banks just above the water; they look as though they are floating. Then mile and miles of brown reeds again.

We slide into the sandstorm; nothing is visible but grayish yellow fog. The taste and smell of the fine dust permeate the cabin. We climb higher and get out of the fog, but not into the sunshine. For the whole of the way to Baghdad this pale yellow mist continues and we can find nothing better to do than to sleep.

As we draw towards Baghdad, fortunately it thins a little, and we can see the ground and make out fields three o'clock by the local time, after a hasty lunch. Rushah has a fortified resthouse and a guard, on very similar lines to that of Shargah.

From Rutbah onwards we see following well-marked car tracks and we are also on the route of the pipe line just being constructed to pump oil to the port of Haifa. The sky is clear; the desert, as far as the eye can reach, a level or undulating plain of sand. We pass several Bedawi encampments, the black tents throwing long shadows from the westering sun. At intervals along the pipe line we pass pumping stations with oil tanks, and huts or tents. Tiny washing drives seem to be busy over their infinitely small affairs on the line.

4.30 p.m.—We have just left the sandy desert and crossed over on to the lava desert, black and burnt-looking, with patches of sand filling up its shallow hollows. From the plane the only difference is one of color. On foot one would no doubt find it boundery and rough. Near the border are large herds of camels. At 5.30 the lava desert gives way to the fields and villages of Palestine. The railway running south from Amman crosses our track,—the railway that is reputed so persistently haunted and whose bridges he blow up during his amazing campaign. And now our plateau breaks down by precipitous and rugged valleys to the Dead Sea, over the northern end of which we fly. The Jordan winds its tortuous way to its junction with the Dead Sea, where salt enclosures are being evaporated.

On our right is Jericho, with the road to Jerusalem following the valley westward. One could imagine there are plenty of easy lurking places for thieves upon it.

Jericho itself is a small clump of houses with many outlying farms. Jerusalem comes into view, while it is still light enough to see the colors of its roofs and make out its main buildings, and dusk enough for its lights to be lit,—one of the prettiest sights in the whole of our journey. We speculate as to which is the Wailing Wall. Our headlights wriggle up the main streets, and the steep grey hills to the east form a pleasant setting on this hour.

Bethlehem is unlit, but is quite distinct a short distance away on our left. After passing Bethlehem, with Hebron merely a light in the distance, darkness closes down us.

At 6.30 we are over the flares of Sarafand landing ground at Gaza and make a perfect landing. The buildings here are wooden huts of the old service pattern, with a tent, warmed by an oil stove, to serve as the dining-room. After a good dinner we are in our seats again by 7.45 and soon rise for the last lap to Cairo in the dark.

Over the Suez Canal.

The Suez Canal is well worth watching from the deck of a steamer passing along it at night. But from the air, with four steamers visible at once, picking out the Canal with their search-lights, it is thrilling. Ismailia makes a brave show, too, with its lit square, patterned Creek outlined in lamps, but Cairo—Cairo is marvellous! The lights of the city spread out in radiating stars and scattered clumps like a tangled tray full of lustrous jewels. Floodlights emphasize the main streets, and as we pass over we can see buses and cars be followed. The Air Port of Heliopolis swings towards us, bright with flares and floodlight. We are down, and have our luggage examined, whilst we drink a cup of tea with Commander Spafford, who has brought us from Karachi. Here we say good-bye to him, for he piles only between Cairo and Karachi at fortnightly intervals.

A big motorbus takes us and our luggage to Shepheards', where comfort awaits us. We reach our rooms at about 9.30 p.m. Our hot cupboards ready with the information that we shall be called at 5 a.m. to-morrow.

Leaving Egypt.

25 February, 1935.—The claim of imperial airways that even tips are included in their fare is, on the whole, surprisingly true. No one turns up to tip us as we step at any of the calls. We leave Shepheards' in our motorbus at 5 a.m. for a cup of delicious rolls and coffee. Cairo is just waking up and a party of late revellers drops in at Shepheards' for a last one before going home. They look as if we give their love to England as we leave for the river Air Port of Gezira. We have a motor boat take us out to the flying boat on the Nile River.

We taxi steadily up the river. I want to take photographs, but the sun is behind us, and from the floats spray the window and then the higher spray on the engine cowling. We slow down, having reached our starting position. Half-a-dozen Arab boatmen, their characteristic tall triangular sails, slide by us. We pick up speed. The sun is just rising over citadel and mosque, and Cairo's eastern cliff-wall of limestone is black against the sky. We are up, and Cairo is a map below us.

Yes, we all turn in one direction. There they are; the three Pyramids with one side a pinky yellow in the dawn and the other visible side black in shadow. The desert has a pink haze over it. The clear-cut line between the desert and the green that we had noted on a previous visit from the Pyramids themselves, is much more clearly marked from the air. The sand dunes stretch away to the horizon, whilst we follow the winding river along its course through vivid green and brown cultivation to the sea, and Alexandria. One or two small quarries are visible, where rock above ground through the sand near the border of the cultivated patch, with ribbons of tramline to feed them. A railway track shows up as a straight line across the sand, and away in the distance, approaching a little oasis station, is the white smoke of a slowly moving train. Purple shadows of clouds mottle the desert, whitening in the growing brightness of the day. A string of camels files by; we should not see them but for their long shadows. On our right the rich fields of the Delta spread wider and wider. On our left the desert prevails. We travel more smoothly than if we were in a train. A thoughtful steward comes with warm rugs, for it is quite cold in Cairo and more so in the air.

There are magazines provided in the cabin, but we are still too thrilled to read. Over the sea perhaps, but not here, where we can trace the broad streaks of a caravan route across the sands, and follow the course of an irrigation canal with its feeder lines, turning the desert to an emerald carpet with a scattered handful of dice for a village.

We are 5,000 feet up; a long black shadow trails over the sands, thrown by a bank of cloud; and cloud and shadow alike are below us. It seems incredibly soon when we glide down again, swallowing and yawning and blowing noses to cure the unpleasant buzzing and deafness that otherwise accompany the descent. Below us is the sea port and the air port of Alexandria, a little over one hour from Cairo.

Across the Mediterranean.

Alexandria.—We wait half an hour at Alexandria in a small wooden resthouse, where good tea and biscuits are provided for us. What strikes one about taking off in a flying boat is the tremendously long taxi before starting. It takes a much longer run before rising than does a land plane.

We are up again at 8.50, and soon

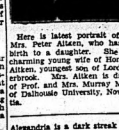
STORK CALLS



Here is latest portrait of Hon. Mrs. Peter Aitken, who has given birth to a daughter. She is the charming young wife of Hon. Peter Aitken, youngest son of Lord Beaverbrook.

Mrs. Aitken is daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Murray Macneill of Dalhousie University, Nova Scotia.

Alexandria is a dark streak beyond the sun's brilliant reflection on the water below us.

We changed on to a new flying boat at Alexandria, but retained the same attentive steward, who now brings us little sealed packets of cotton wool for our ears. The Sylvania flies at about 2,500 feet for most of this trip.

For over three hours we have seen earth but the sea and a few rare boats. About 12 noon we approach Crete, in whose harbour of Mirabella we are to alight for half an hour. The hill coast is marked with patches of snow, and on its precipitous slopes terrace cultivation is visible. We fly straight over the narrow island and bump a good deal in the process.

Mirabella provides a very pleasant interlude. We land on a harbour some distance from the little village clinging between the steeply towering hill and the sea, and a motor boat carries us from the flying boat to a small yacht at anchor. Half an hour for a smoke and a cup of coffee and then back again. Once more the wave from our start rises high and higher, blotting out all our view until we begin to rise. In a very few minutes the white-crested hills are fading away behind us, and lunch is served on the plane.

Lunch! It is gargantuan and excellent in quality. Hot soup, prawn mayonnaise, chicken and salad, chocolate ripe cake, cheese and a basket of fruit. Few of us last through it and most of us are considerably when we reach Athens. We pass a lot of the isles of Greece, notably Melos (Milo), but all we ask is to be left alone, and not to be bent.

Athens is in sight at about four, with all of us alert to see the Acropolis and other landmarks from the air. Alighting in a flying boat is smoother than on land—if one comes down in an enclosed harbour—as a flying boat rises on the water—has a little swell on settling may be rather bumpy, like running on a bad road.

It is Race Day in Athens, and the coupe is near the Air Port. It is Easter Sunday, and all Athens is out for the Sunday afternoon parade. We hire a taxi and go up to the Acropolis, but this is a record of an air journey, and the sightseeing on the ground is left to many guide book. One must mention the marvellous air of Athens, however, and

Territorial Change

Big Bolivia and little Paraguay likely to reverse position in size, with Paraguay extending its territorial recapture of long disputed Chaco region to conquest of Beni and Santa Cruz departments of Bolivia. Territory of President Jose Luis Tejada Sorzano (TOP), Rodman Landaeta, would shrink and that of Dr. Eusebio Ayala (BELOW), Paraguayan president, expand.

With the Tigris as a landmark, we drop down to the aerodrome at Baghdad at 10.45, and walk over to the Resthouse. It is cold, and fires are lit for us in the dining-room and sitting-room, whilst we have breakfast. It is a scratch meal; our feet slowly thaw out by the fire, and we all agree that the flight from Basra has been most uncomfortable.

We sit waiting for the start until 12.35, and then rise into a sunshine still much tempered by dust, and continue on our bumpy way. I have been looking forward to a night in Baghdad as one of the chief features of the trip, and I have seen of it is the dusty plain and the dust-covered roofs of the buildings around the aerodrome.

At Bahrein we bought pearls, as Baghdad would have bought gloves if I could.

The Arabian Desert.

And here at last is the Arabian desert, Doughty, Gertrude Bell, Lawrence and the later fraternity of desert enthusiasts grow into vivid mental pictures that are close enough to reality so far as landscape features are concerned, but one was not prepared for this intense heat.

We reach Rutbah at 3.15 by our morning time, but as we are travelling westward we have gained something, and it is really about an hour earlier, so we are up again at about then fly over a longish expanse of sea, with the Albanian hills to the north, shining with snow. In spite of their beauty we sleep, to wake early as we come down in the harbour at Brindisi. It is a choppy sea, but we make a gentle landing, and here we bid farewell to the Syrianus. Brindisi is cold and dull. We hunch and get into the train for Milan, passing by miles and miles of alternating lines of olive and almond trees, the latter in bloom. After tea and dinner on the train, we sleep well in our wagon-lit compartments, arriving at Milan at 8.30 a.m. This train section is slow and unavoidable at present.

Tuesday, 27 February, 1935.—We do not leave Milan until 5 p.m., so we have time for sight-seeing, of which we make good use. The Italian lakes glide by our train in the dark; but the rising full moon lights up snow-covered hills for us as we approach the Simplon tunnel, and Lake Geneva and Lausanne are silver wraiths in the night.

Paris to London.

28 February, 1935.—Paris gives us a cold welcome at 4.30 a.m. with a bleary sky, and a taxi strike on. However, our subdone conveys us well enough to a good breakfast at the Ambassadors Hotel, and afterwards to the aerodrome at Le Bourget, where we find a fog that limits vision to about 800 feet and where we are an hour late in starting, as we do have to wait until three other machines have come down before we are allowed to rise. On this last lap the flight is steady enough: there is no wind or we should not have this for. The ground is only visible in rare patches from our height of 1,600 feet and these fleeting glimpses show that the ploughed lands are snow-covered, but the green fields are free. The Horsiing keeps level above the bank of clouds at 1,500 to 1,600 feet. The plane is warmed with hot air,—almost too warm. The cloud thickens and thins out capriciously, and we see occasional roads, farmhouses and small villages. We are still over France and there are no hedges around the fields. The cloud gains strength and we see a smiling well-filled countryside free of snow.

And now we come over the sea, and it is again too rough to make out anything except the water just below us. It becomes dark and darker; while lines white by the windows. God, it's snowing! One can barely see the ends of our wings. The pilot must have satisfying news from the other end to carry on through this so calmly. Ah! it is finished, but only to be replaced by fog again, which thins as we approach the English coast, so that we see the crowded shipping on this side of the Channel.

At last! A strip of sand, and then the green fields of Kent, with substantial farms, and neat-houses, winding streams and smooth roads, woods and hedges, desponds and hayshocks. How well watered, how thoroughly well supplied with roads this country is, one had not realised until one had it in sight and below one.

Agitated white hens run about below, disturbed by our engines. We pass Rochester with its name marked boldly on the landing ground. What a strange sight it is to look straight down into a tall chimney stack from above!

Croydon approaches; spins and turns about us; we are rushing along the landing field and are astonished to see hares and pheasants scurrying away from our path . . .

The journey is over.

Two - Twelve - Ten Puts Gems in Barley's Crown

BY R. LESLIE ENGLISH

In Canadian Homes (Ltd. "Oval")

Fitting it is that Donald Scott, whose name is linked with the Land o' Cakes and Burns, should win success with a grain which the author of "Scots who has" lauded above all others, in the following lines:

"Let husky wheat the haughs adorn,
And oats eat up their awvy horn,
But simmer shines, and winter's morn,
Perfume the kail,
Gie me, my lads, John Barleycorn,
Thrice king o' grain."

"Loose me on thee" means of course, "you for mine!" That's what Burns thought of barley, and what doubtless it was making barley that he meant. But it is just as certain that the poet never got a sample of barley that approached in quality the kind which Donald Scott grows. It would have inspired him to still nobler verse in its praise.

If barley is the king of grain, Donald Scott is the undisputed King of Barley, having been acclaimed and crowned victor three years in succession, with "Royal" honours, and winning each time $500 and a gold medal.

Under the caption, "Scott Again Wins Malting Barley Prize," the following appeared in the report of the Farmer's Advocate of December 6th: "D. L. Scott, City View, Ontario, again won the malting barley prize at the Royal Winter Fair against 120 competitors in this most attractive class. The brewing industry of Ontario and Quebec offered a gold medal and $500 in cash as a first prize, and a total purse of $1,100."

When, in 1932, Scott first won the barley prize, there were some who attributed his success to good luck. When he repeated the triumph in 1933, they were prepared to admit that it might be due to good management. When, in November, 1934, the "Royal" stage was set for the third annual contest, crowds watched the judges commence the arduous task of placing the entries in order of merit. Soon a buzz went up: "Donald Scott wins again!" It took the judges days to place all the entries, but not long to discover that Donald Scott's was in a class by itself. What a man!

Just to show that he feared no competition, Scott packed his bag of barley and crossed the border to invade the "Internationals" in Chicago, and spread his conquests further. He swept the boards and gained the crown as Barley King of the North American Continents. Incidentally, he had in his kit a bag of oats with which he won third prize.

"Governor-General Models D. L. Scott" is the heading of a front page news item in a recent issue of the Ottawa Journal, which says, in part: "The Governor-General today received D. L. Scott, of City View, winner of the first prize for six-rowed barley at the International Grain and Hay Show, Chicago. His Excellency congratulated Mr. Scott on his success . . . He has been a consistent winner of the grand championship for six-rowed barley at the Royal Winter Fair, in Toronto."

It is appropriate that the stage of the malting barley competition should be adjacent to the "Aisle of Royal Champions," the concession of the C-I-L Fertilizer Division at the Royal Winter Fair, for Donald Scott attributes his success, in no small measure, to the use of C-I-L 2-12-10 fertilizer which he applies consistently at the rate of about 250 lbs. per acre when preparing his malting barley.

While it may be the lot of few to achieve success so spectacular as Donald Scott's, a reward awaits the grain grower who follows his example. The lure of buried treasure is fascinating, and none need follow distant trails to find it. You may discover it not far from your doorstep. In my youth I read a rhyme which recorded how "A farmer once, about to die, called on his children to come nigh. 'I leave,' he said 'a small estate but means enough to make it great; for in a field of mine it contains, if you to search will take the pains.' He died; his sons dug all the ground, but there no hidden treasure found." I cannot recall the rest of the rhyme; but the sequel was that, as a result of the thorough digging of the ground, bumper crops were produced, and the sons perceived the moral of the old man's tale. By proper cultivation and fertilizing, the farmer of today may recover buried treasure from his fields.

HUSBAND OBJECTS TO HOMELY SOCKS

London.—Some wives seem to regard the police court as a kind of stage on which to express the drama lacking in their own drab lives, the News Chronicle says.

Gladys summoned her husband for persistent cruelty. She has a habit, it appeared, of bringing him to court on this charge. He has been employed for two years. Of the $4.20 he draws weekly he gives Gladys $1.56. She earns $5.52 as a cleaner. There are no children.

She described, with gusto, how he "flew into an awful rage" and kept her out, all because he objected to hand-knitted socks. "A man on the dole is lucky to have any socks at all," said Gladys. "He's not very encouraging to keep reminding him he's on the dole," suggested the magistrate.

FASCIST KNIVES ATTEND CONFERENCE

Their honor guard, with knives upraised in the fighting Fascist salute, welcomes Premier Flandin (RIGHT) and Foreign Minister Laval of France to Stresa for the three-power conference between Italy, France and England, on the question of German rearmament. After the setting of May 20th as the date for a conference between these three powers and Germany, the rebuke asked of the League of Nations for Germany, so angered that country, that it threatens never again to join the league or to participate in the new parley. BENITO MUSSOLINI is seen chatting with British Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald.

SEES ADVANTAGE IN DUAL TONGUE

South African Minister Defends Use of Afrikaans

Cape Town.—The history and defence of Afrikaans (language of the Dutch in Africa) in the address of Hon. J. H. Hofmeyer, South African cabinet minister, "will quite probably stand in years to come as the classic oration on equal language rights—the charter of the foundations of our nation," says an editorial in the Cape Times.

Declaring his belief that Afrikaans as a language should survive, the minister of the interior, public health and education, the Cape Times says, spoke with tact and sense of proportion when he addressed the Imperial Press Conference on the question.

"The delegates, after he had finished, certainly understood a great deal about our dual language system, which, Mr. Hofmeyer spoke to them, many of them admitted theoretically, was of money," the Cape Times continues.

Mr. Hofmeyer, who is a graduate of Oxford, told the Press Conference Afrikaans should survive because of its power of development, racy expressiveness and young, fresh, ringing literature. He believed its disappearance would leave the South African nation much poorer culturally. Those now fully bilingual and who talked either English or Afrikaans with equal facility had a range and depth in self expression which the bilingual man or woman lacked.

Answering the question why many South African English-speaking people had never thought of Afrikaans as an addition to their power of self-expression, the Cape Times says: "It is mainly because Afrikaans became the banner of a political faith and gathered around it the hottest of political conflicts . . . Even today, the Press Conference delegates should understand, those who accept to the full of their ability—not merely with a grim acceptance—Afrikaans as the equal of English in our country, are detested by a few of their English-speaking fellow citizens for being faithless to the old, traditional English belief in our country that English would be spoken; Afrikaans, which if given enough rope, would in the end hang itself as a language. This enmity survives only among a very small minority now."

WOMEN JUST THE SAME

Apparently someone in Montreal has a firm belief in the right of women to vote. Among proposed additions to the voters' list of Makinsonve were found 31 names of women with the Christian names slightly altered to indicate they were men. The names were Yvonne, Irene, Germaine, Lucienne or Florence and were submitted for addition as Yvon, Irenee, Germain, Lucien or Floriand. All 31 were rejected.

KING TO MEET CITIZENS

In connection with the King's Silver Jubilee the King and Queen will attend a representative civic reception at County Hall the evening of May 31.

Why Lipstick is Used

As a beauty aid

When the blood is rich and red
It is shown by color in the cheeks and lips.
Such color tells of health and vitality and youth.
To be beautiful and charming and attractive
Women must display good health.
And the elasticity and vivacity which goes with it.
Pale lips tell of weak blood and anaemia
And so lipstick is used to restore
At least the appearance of health and youth.
How infinitely better it is to have real health,
The result of rich blood flowing through the body.
For health after all is the real basis
Of charm and attractiveness.
Dr. Chase's Nerve Food actually creates rich blood.
It supplies to nature the priceless ingredients
From which new nerve force and vitality are formed.
It gives you the pep and energy
Which is essential to the enjoyment of life.
Health and beauty and happiness
Result from the use of this great blood and nerve restorative.

Trout Bred for Fishing Benefit by Salt Water Bath

Biologist at Seigniory Club, Quebec Tells of Experiences

Seigniory Club, P. Q.—Like any conscientious golfer, young trout bred for fishing will benefit from the occasional salt water bath if they are ill, says Leo Jorgensen, the biologist in charge of the Seigniory Club Fish Hatchery, who is in the midst of the Seigneurie's fifth season of breeding and stocking brook and rainbow trout. Salt is good treatment for mild cases of fungous diseases on fry, and a weak mixture of copper sulphate for those of bacterial origin.

Before a fish is stocked in local waters for the benefit of visiting sportsmen they do not run as many risks as they would under natural conditions, but in the very pools of the hatchery they are sometimes troubled by a certain collection of poachers. Young robins have been brought by their mothers to feed off the young fish, kingfishers make a point of perching on nearby trees, and, in addition, owls, hawks, minks, otter, water snakes and snapping turtles all pay a little illicit fishing if they are not watched.

The fish that readily lend themselves to artificial breeding are trout and members of the salmon family, writes Larry Jorgensen in "The Seigneur", magazine of the Seigniory Club. Since the first attempt to breed trout on this continent in 1853, the work has developed enormously and is today conducted on a large scale by the Dominion Government as well as by the individual provinces.

Raising and planting fish and transferring them into the various waters of the Seigniory Club property is an interesting business itself and their caretaker has become so attached to them that he hates to see them caught, even by fly fishermen using barbless hooks.

Young trout are hatched from eggs laid during the autumn. One trout may lay as many as a thousand eggs, but a considerably smaller number is usual. Eggs vary greatly in size, but are ordinarily about one sixth of an inch in diameter and usually four hundred or five hundred and fifty eggs of good quality will make up one fluid ounce.

When the fish are ready to spawn, they are caught and the eggs from the female gently squeezed into a shallow vessel. When a suitable quantity of eggs has been collected, the process is repeated with the male fish, after which eggs and milt are stirred together very carefully, and in this way the eggs are fertilized. The eggs collected are placed in wire trays which rest on troughs through which a steady stream of water is running.

Not all water is suitable for a hatchery. The water must be perfectly pure and free from pollution and remain at a comparatively low temperature, at no time rising much above 56 degrees throughout the year, as trout will not live for any length of time in water warmer than this. Depending on its temperature during the winter, the eggs will hatch some time between January and April.

When small trout hatch out, they carry the whole yolk of the egg attached to the underside of the body, getting all their nourishment from it during the first few weeks of their life. It is after the yolk is all absorbed that they have to be fed.

Many different types of food are used, but pure beef liver mixed with powdered butternut has so far given the best results at The Seigniory Club Hatchery. The liver is ground up finely and fed to the fish from five to six times a day with the aid of a very fine screen. Another food for young trout is dried salmon eggs which will hasten growth and help give the fish their natural colors.

Naturally, hatchery trout are of a pale silvery color and their meat is generally pure white and not pink as is found in wild fish. It all depends on their food, and if the hatchery fish were fed the same food as the trout eat in their wild state, the same color and flavor would result.

During the time the eggs are hatching and the fry are absorbing the yolk sack, the most trouble is experienced. They are very delicate and will die at the least opportunity. But when they reach a size of from one and a half to two inches, they are over the worst stage, and require less attention.

The main thing in all hatchery work is cleanliness. As the fish are crowded together, in very confined quarters, any bacterial disease that appears is liable to spread rapidly with terrific speed and cause a lot of damage, even as far as killing the entire stock of fish.

By the end of the summer an ordinary speckled trout as grown in a hatchery pond will be between two and a half and three inches long. A few fish will start spawning when they are two years old, but the majority only spawn after three years. Trout younger than this produce small and poor eggs, and the fry resulting from them are, as a rule, weak, and in many cases deformed. The growth of a special trout under natural conditions that is in a lake or stream, is dependent partly on the amount of available food. Trout will grow better on one kind of food than on another. Fresh water shrimps are usually considered one of the finest foods that trout exist and where they are found in a lake, the trout nearly always grow to very large sizes.

The finest trout waters in Canada, and possibly in the whole world, are at the Nipigon River in Ontario. The world's record speckled trout was caught some years ago, and weighed fourteen and a half pounds. To catch trout seven and eight pounds in this river is not unusual.

The strange trout as found in the lakes of Quebec and Eastern Ontario will usually not weigh more than two pounds, and three and four pound trout must be considered very good fish indeed.

The matter of fast and large growth in a trout is also, to a great extent, dependent on the strain from which the fish was developed. There has been much work done on selective breeding of trout, and some very good results have been obtained. The Seigniory Club hatchery now carries a strain of trout that has been produced during the last twenty-five years by selecting only the largest, fastest growing fish as well as fish producing the greatest amount of eggs. The result is that, today, the hatchery has two-year-old fish as large as three-year-old fish would be originating from wild stock. That is, fish which were caught in the lakes and streams immediately before spawning time. At present, experiments are made to produce a strain of fish that will be resistant to the most common and dangerous trout diseases.

Until a few years ago, all weight was put on the hatchery work, and little attention was paid to the future fate of the fish. As long as the fish came into their new home safely, everybody was satisfied. The result was many unsuccessful stocking programs, and a great waste of money and time. Before planting any fish in a lake, it is necessary to have a good knowledge of the lake's conditions, both as regards its population of other fish as well as the amount of available food. It has been a common belief that a good trout lake could be fished as much as desired. Where this practice has been carried out, the result in almost every case has been that the lake has been fished out. The population of trout in a lake may quite easily be compared to a sum of money invested. One can get a certain yield per year. But, if more than the annual interest is taken out, it only means that some of the original capital is used as well, and if not replaced in some way or other, one will end up by getting nothing at all.

Very little is known in this country about the amount of fish which a given body of water will produce per year over a long span of time; but if comparisons are made with known lakes, both in Scotland and Norway, it is more than likely that the annual yield of most Canadian lakes will be somewhere around five to six pounds of fish per year per acre of water surface.

HOW JUSTICE IS ADMINISTERED IN KENTUCKY

Here is how justice is administered in the state of Kentucky, U.S.A. General scene shows all in readiness for hanging of William De Boe, 23 and white, who had been convicted of criminally assaulting Mrs. Marjorie Johnson during a robbery. Before the hanging, witnessed by a huge crowd, De Boe was permitted to give a speech. It took him 45 minutes to plead his innocence and direct accusation at Mrs. Johnson calling her "a cold-blooded murderess". Mrs. Johnson is shown LEFT looking unmoved by the scene. De Boe is shown at RIGHT during his speech from the gallows. Hanging took place on Good Friday.

FIND MULE HENS IMPROVE LAYING

Government Experts Trying Out thing like a mule hen will produce as Central Experimental Farm here by crossing two widely known breeds to produce meat and eggs but not to rebreed.

Poultry experts at the experimental farm, working on the principle that crossing two pure breeds "gives offspring that are superior to either parent breeds in vigor and economy of growth," produced a White Leghorn-Plymouth Rock giving a better performance in the pullet year than either of its parents.

They found that by using a Leghorn male on Rock female they could evolve a bird giving 10 pet cent greater egg production during the pullet year than either parent breed. The reverse cross did not work so well.

During the first eight weeks of their life the crossbreds were fed on the Rocks but ahead of the Leghorns until they reached 16 weeks when they dropped behind the Rocks.

The Leghorn and the crossbreds offered some advantage in egg and meat production until they weighed about four pounds. They cautioned only pure-stock parents should be used in the crossing.

DESCRIBE RESEARCH FOR MEDICAL GROUP

Philadelphia. — Recent developments in physiology and biochemistry will be described by Canadian scientists at the annual clinical sessions of the American College of Physicians here from April 29 to May 3. The sessions will be presided over by a Canadian physician, Dr. Donald C. Meakins, Montreal, who will deliver the annual presidential address at the college.

Canadian doctors to read technical papers include Dr. Hector Montpetit, of Montreal, who will speak on experimental effects of antitoxin and antitoxin mixtures on cranial growth. Other Montreal doctors and their subjects are: Dr. J. R. Collip, recent work on anti-hormones; Dr. D. L. Thomson, correlations of the endocrine system; Dr. J. M. Lindsay, Von Gierke's glycogen; Dr. J. M. Robinson, diabetes, and Dr. Edward H. Mason, treatment of gangrene.

Dr. Dudley Irwin, Toronto, will speak on pathological aspects of silicosis.

ZEALAND AN EDEN OF FLORAL SHEEN

Story of Decorations Indicate Wide Range of Beauty

Camperdown, New Zealand. — When a ball takes place in this country there is ample scope and will for floral decoration.

At the Royal Camperdown Hospital ball held in the Theatre Royal, huge archways were arranged over each of the four doorways, and made a brilliant splash of color, composed of greenery, delphiniums, hollyhocks, roses, bougainvillea, and Romney poppies. The whole front of the stage was converted into a herbaceous border, with a miniature lawn in front, and a wide band of masses of flowers, stocks, hydrangea, phlox, everlastings, asters and gladioli.

Making a background for this picture were miniature orange trees and holly trees growing in tubs. Huge mixed bowls of hydrangeas, agapanthus, tiger lilies, and Romney poppies were placed high up on the walls on the ledges on each side of the stage. The vice-regal dais has a background of bowls of the same flowers.

In the supper room all the pillars were festooned with greenery, and garlands of ivy and laurel were strung between them. The windowsills were banked with gladioli, zinnias and African marigolds.

SEAL OF COLONY IS STILL IN U.S.

Slab Tells of American Privateers Who Pillaged Charlottetown

By RALPH MORTON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Charlottetown, P.E.I. — A small white stone about two feet high, overgrown by weeds and unnoticed by citizens passing by the ancient Kirn street burial grounds in Charlottetown tells a story of privateering days difficult to equal.

The inscription, now obliterated by time, once read: "P. C. 1790". To the historian those scratches speak volumes. They tell of a brave little band of pioneers who reared Charlottetown, who established law courts and a parliament, conducted business, won freedom, and lived enjoying British traditions — until the coming of American privateers.

"P. C." stands for Phillips Callbeck, administrator of the Isle of St. John at the time Charlottetown was plundered. Just after machinery of government was set in motion and the Supreme Court established, a century before Confederation, two large New England schooners lowered anchor in Hillsborough Bay. Their crews laid waste the town, pillaged homes, destroyed valuable documents, stole the great seal of the colony and took away two prominent men, including the administrator, back to New England as prisoners.

It was one of the few deeds for which the American government ever apologized in those days of plenty and sniping marine engagements. No less a person than President Geroge Washington himself rebuked the officers and crews of the two schooners on their return to New England. But until this day, the Great Seal of the colony has never been returned. Where it is nobody seems to know.

"Perhaps in some American museum or in the hands of a wealthy collector," mused R. Ronald Stewart, deputy provincial secretary-treasurer and archivist. "I wish we could discover it and bring it back. It would be an occasion for international rejoicing."

The following correspondence between Phillips Callbeck, administrator, and Lord Dartmouth tells vividly the incidents of the outrages:

"On the 11th of November last, two Privateer schooners belonging to Beverly in New England, one of them armed with six six-pounders and the other with four six-pounders and each with a number of swivels and seventy-five men, arrived in Charlottetown, the capital of His Majesty's Island of St. John, where I reside. They immediately made preparations to fire on the town at the same time their Commander with armed parties landed.

"... In order to preserve the town from being burned I determined to face them sicgly. Upon the landing they made me prisoner and immediately conveyed me on board one of the Privateers, after which they proceeded to commit the most inhuman and flagrant outrages on Governor Patterson's and my house. I may say that they possessed themselves of the whole of my property to the extent of two thousand pounds sterling, and then they sailed with me and Mrs. Wright, one of the Council and Surveyor-General whom they also made prisoners.

"Not satisfied with their depredations on the white persons belonging to the property they sought Mrs. Callbeck for the purpose, to use their own words, of cutting her throat, because she was a daughter of a Mr. Coffin at Boston who is remarkable for his attachment to government. Fortunately she was at my farm four miles distant else it is likely her resentment would have been equal to the savage declaration. In fine she escaped, but those brutal violators of domestic felicity left her without a candle to burn, a single glass of wine or a sufficiency of provisions of the bread kind, most of the furniture o her house taken away, and the what I know of her wearing clothes. They certainly have taken away all her best things together with her rings, bracelets, etc., none of which have been returned."

After a passage of fourteen days, the two prisoners arrived at Cambridge, Mass., and were taken before President Washington, who after hearing the story, gave them their freedom with a blank form of what their captors had done "the things they ought not to have done and left undone the things they ought to have done".

But the road back from New England, unprovided as they were with food, money or proper clothing, was friendless in a foreign country was a long, difficult one, fraught with hardships.

The House of Assembly granted a large sum of money to build a monument to the brave Callbeck. Messrs. Cambridge and Bonnell, two members of the legislature, were instructed to have it specially executed in London. It was to have this inscription:

"Sacred to the memory of Phillips Callbeck, Esquire, His Majesty's Attorney General, Lieut. Colonel of Militia, and late Speaker of the Honourable House of Assembly of this Province, by whose order this Monument is erected as a testimony of their esteem, and a grateful tribute to a General Benefactor of this Island, who departed this life, the twenty-eighth day of February, One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety, Aged 46 years."

But for some unknown reason, the elaborate memorial was never erected. Only the little white slab, disintegrated by the ravages of rain and snow, remains to speak of the past, yet it speaks in a ringing voice of the hardships and privations of British pioneers in North America.

DECLARES NEW AGE FOR MOTHER EARTH

Science Under Stated it Billion Years or So

New York—While the revolution was in progress in Austria Edith Kroupa, a research chemist at the University of Vienna, sat calmly in her laboratory making a trying micro-chemical analysis of a tiny rock sample sent from near Winnipeg to determine the age of the earth. Miss Kroupa found the earth to be at least 1,726,000,000 years old, says Scientific American.

What the feminine scientist did in the 1,200 hours in which she participated was to employ special methods of making what chemists call a micro-analysis. These are newer, more refined methods than some others. The sample she analyzed microchemically weighed only 1-100th of an ounce, but such a sample is enough for this work.

The radio activity method of determining the earth's age has supplanted earlier methods such as determining the ratio of salt in the ocean to that in the land rocks. This method is given to geologists as sufficient length to satisfy their needs when previously asserted that 100,000,000 years or so was not enough to allow for the slow evolution of life on earth. Science now gives the earth an age of at least 2,000,000,000 years.

This is one way the radioactivity method is used. In ancient rocks, and younger rocks as well, geologists long ago found tiny haloes, visible only under strong microscopes because they were so small, which seemed to puzzle them. Later it was found that these haloes were merely the exposed cross-sections of spheres, each sphere surrounding a minute particle of a radioactive element, thorium or uranium.

These spheres represent the product of the slow breakdown of the radioactive particle into lead, and the ratio of the radioactive element to the lead present gives a measure of the age of the rock in which the spheres or haloes occur. Rocks broken by other forms of evidence to be younger there is found to be correspondingly less lead. This method has become standard in ascertaining the age of the earth.

Only by a most delicate micro-analysis can the uranium-lead ratio be determined accurately, and that sort of analysis is what Fraulein Kroupa has become expert in making. It is work that requires painstaking care and a fortuitous light. Offield said that when Davies put his arm around his wife and kissed her, the car swerved five feet to the offside. Davies denied this and said the kiss took only a second.

A solicitor said that Davies had been in France for some time when his wife had met him at Victoria. Her failing to obey traffic signals Davies was fined $15.00. The summons for driving without proper control was dismissed.

MAN TAKES PRIZE FOR BEST KITCHEN

Architect's Model Given First Place Among 28,000 Entries.

London.—A man won the national $5,000 competition organized by the British Commercial Gas Association against 20,000 women. The competition was the planning of a modern labor-saving kitchen, and the winner, Anthony Trew, a retired architect of Poole, is 75 years of age. The second prize, $1,000, was divided between Miss Elliot Douglas of Kelso, Roxburgshire, and Mrs. N. Collins of Stoke-on-Trent.

Mr. Trew explained he made cardboard scale models of the ground plan of the kitchen and cut out cards to represent the space for the various fittings. From several plans he selected one using "running con-

KISS FOR WIFE COSTS HIM $15

Took Only a Second, Says Motorist, But Guilty Just the Same.

London—Because he kissed his wife while driving a car, David Morgan Davies, of Pearce Avenue, was convicted at Hendon for driving in such a manner as not to have proper control over the car.

A police patrol who was following Davies' car on a brightly lighted street said that when Davies put his arm around his wife and kissed her, the car swerved five feet to the offside. Davies denied this and said the kiss took only a second.

A solicitor said that Davies had been in France for some time when his wife had met him at Victoria. Her failing to obey traffic signals Davies was fined $15.00. The summons for driving without proper control was dismissed.

PICTURES STYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

Changing Fashions in 21 Years Mark Variety of Tastes

Christchurch, N.Z.—The Sun, in its twenty-first anniversary issue, ran a page illustrating varied fashions worn by women during that period.

In the face of the future, in games and sport of all kinds which has so developed in the past years as to have fostered an entirely new line of fashion, it is amusing to read back in 1918, the assertion of an authoritative writer that "what people played in good style in his day was contrary to the ideals of feminine beauty."

Another item said: "Her hat was of deep blue with cerise velvet streamers and flora garnitures, finished with a looped back. The narrow brim was turned up at one side and faced with ivory crepe de chine veiled in two thicknesses of pale pink tulle." Believe it or not this hat was in 1914. Only twenty-21 years ago everyone wore plumes.

"There is a word or so also about those old fashion notes. Where are all those gallant ravagoons now? It is only a matter of about twenty years, but life is such a little thing, and the race so quickly run. Here it is: 'So the women had sent all their black velvet, their Persian toilets and their plumes. They kept them up.

"The Daily Warden hat, with its flower of Dickens, its ribbons and its quaint posy beneath the brim, was a thing of the past. Flatter coiffures were about 1835. Checkmate again to the preacher, who declared that hard times beget hard headgear."

There were changing however. Already the slip of the trousers could be heard in the distance. In 1918 pages and hat covers began to rise. Hairdressers, in their sanctums, devised new styles and hinted at the forthcoming "bester".

QUEEN GETS PRAM FOR BUSY MOTHER

London.—For many years Queen Mary has been interested in the work of the Crossway Central Mission, and she always reads the magazine published in connection with the mission.

In a recent number there appeared an appeal on behalf of a woman living with her two children in an upstairs flat. Her landlady would not allow her to leave a perambulator in the house, and the harassed mother badly needed a folding perambulator which she could carry up to her flat.

The mission has received a message from Buckingham Palace that the Queen has seen the appeal and has sent it from Sandringham to an official at the palace with a direction that a double-folding type of pram which she had sent at the British Industries Fair should be sent to the woman.

Can Beavers Climb Trees?

The woes of the telegraph linemen are never over. Something is happening all the time. The latest cause for wire trouble has been announced from a point on the Canadian National Railways right of way about twenty miles north of Washago, on the main trans-continental line of the National System. The report received by the dispatcher of the Canadian National Telegraphs was a short-one. It read: "Two juvenile lumbermen chased a beaver, on the C.N.R. right of way about twenty miles north of Washago, which climbed a tree. The only way to get the beaver was to cut the tree down. The lads did so. It fell across the wires and crossed them until lineman reached the spot to effect a clearance." It was a short notice of trouble, but it started a big argument. Naturalist claimed that a beaver is incapable of climbing a tree, unless the tree is on a decided slant, or has plenty of low limbs up which it could scramble. In any event, if the beaver could get up the tree, an agile boy, or man, could also do so without trouble. Therefore why bother to cut down the tree? But the lineman who were on the spot claim that they investigated the report and found it correct. The claim in question is, "Are beavers in Northern Ontario developing kangaroo habits?"

Daily Short Story

"No Romance"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Some people are always stumbling upon, and even, poetry. The writer is one. Everywhere he goes he discovers a budding poet with large bundles of frayed manuscripts that must be read and " tell me what you think of them."

Which explains the fact that the other day when en route to a rather home-y evening with friends, I picked up a paper upon which was written sopomn not far from their house. I read it and wondered. There was a certain lilt to it, and an under-current of tragedy. Alongside of some poetry I have read, it was almost passable—I said almost.

When I got to the place I was going, I smoothed out the paper and read the poem aloud, a tactical blunder. But because I did and the plot—if any— of this story hinges on that reading, you'll have to—if you want the story— read it so. Here goes:

"Down the trail through the night to the morn,
I can see shining stars high above
As they nod to me there all forlorn,
While I sing, mournfully of my love.

"Butterflies, floating by, wave to me,
And they weep in their grief as I go—
For the song that I sing endlessly
Has been brought by the thought of my woe.

"Birds in trees chirpingly, add their prayer
To the voice of the night and the dawn,
But I sob as I sing in despair—
For the one that I love who is gone.

"When the night covers me and I stand
On the hill 'neath the stars and the sky,
I will sing as we sang hand in hand—
Heart of mine, when you died so did I."

I looked over the small group of people there. Mrs. Jones and her husband, her maiden sister Eva, her daughter, Jane, and Jane's boy friend, Milt.

"Yes, Sicily."

Mr. Jones, somewhat stolid even for a bonfrom, was grunted.

"A feller could write down a pretty sensible order on the paper used for that," he said.

Mrs. Jones studied her husband. "You never did have any sentiment," she said. "Why I can see how my boy, rising for his exercises, going off alone in the woods—"

Eva nodded heavily. Although her heart was ringie, nevertheless in it beat the glory of ever budding romance. Frequently had she told Eva that Milt came to see her.

"Ah yes, the sweetness and innocence of young love." Eva said, wiping the corner of one eye with a wisp of a lacey handkerchief. "Ah I can see them, he a jolly troubadour, singing songs to the one he loved the best of all. Let me read—" She took the paper. "She'll sing as we sang hand in hand,' he remembers those nights under the stars and the sky, when they together, went out in their own world, and love is such a beautiful thing, I wonder who she was, and who he is. I could be "me to such a youth as that—tall, strong, virile and yet with a poet's heart."

At this point, Milt sneezed heavily.

"I'll bet the poor thing caught a cold," he said. "That night air isn't anything to laugh at. Why me and Jane were walking along Riverside Drive the other night, and I got a stuffed nose and sore throat that made my sweet nothings sound like an inebriated crow with mal de mer."

Mr. Jones put his c.r here.

"What you two go traipsing along Riverside Drive for?" he wanted to know. He looked heavily out from underneath his bushy eyebrows, and I was afraid our poetic discussion would come to an end without getting anywhere, if getting anywhere was at all possible.

However, Milt had an answer. He blushed. He stammered. He made gargling noises. He seemed suddenly to have come face to face with a firing squad, and felt that he might just as well get it over with.

MIH Explains

We're going to get married," he said.

Papa Jones was a little slow on the uptake. "We," who do you mean 'We' he asked.

"Why, ah er, ah, shem,Jane and me," Milt replied.

Papa Jones ounted.

"She's not out of school yet," he said. "You can't—

"No, no, no, no!" Milt assured him. "Not in July, or late in June. When she's graduated. Then—

Mama Jones put in her oar.

"Looks like Jane isn't going to grradiate," she said. "Jane's English teacher thinks she's a moron."

Jane giggled at that.

"Not any more, Mama," she said. "I got around her."

Mutual gaze looked into mutual gaze. I found myself looking into Eva's eyes, but quickly turned away. Jane went on:

"You see, that teacher's just like Anna full of mushy sentiment all the time. And always hinting about a long lost love affair, which just have looked at her face and curdled. Anyway, she's bugs for love, and when she asked her class to write a poem about the ephemeral quality, of something like that, of love, I wrote the thing you were all talking about. When she read it, teacher said I was her prize pupil and so I pass and graduate and marry Milt, huh?"

Miss Eva frowned and looked over at me.

"Isn't that just like the Jones family," she said. Never no romance."

"Well," I said thoughtfully. "Yes and no."

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis and Harvey was around for supper, and after supper ma said, let's just sit around and have an old fashion tawk instead of playing bridge this evening.

That's the sweetest music I've heard since I had a statement from my bank proving I was 23 dollers richer than I thawt, pop said, and Harvey said, Don't tell me I can stretch my legs and smoke and settle the world's affairs for a whole evening without having a single card staring me insolently in the face, this is my ideer of peace on earth.

And he started to tawk to pop about different subjecks such as the different value of money and whether it would be better to have too much silver than not enough gold and ma started to tawk to Gladdis, saying, I've been wondering about the furniture in this room, Gladdis, and it seems to me the effect is too scattered, don't you think I'm rite?

I've always told you that, Gladdis said. Now if the divan was pushed over near teh fireplace it would sort of hold everything together, especially if the bookcase was moved to some less conspicuous spot. We can try it in two or three places till it just clicks. It's nice Harvey and Dad happen to be here just when we have the ideer, she said, and pop said, Speaking of furniture, Harvey, and I think the layout of this room is one hundred per cent perfect just as it stands. I mean from the point of view of general effect and composition and all that sort of thing.

I was just thinking- that very thing, Harvey said. It all seems to kind of stick together like a grab big bevtiful mucilage avvertizement, he said, and ma said, O, what's the use, let's play a little bridge after all.

With they started to do, pop and Harvey looking as if they felt half lucky.

TARZAN OF THE APES—

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

When the soldier who had brought Pat from the palace almost to the airplane field, fell victim of a sniper's bullet, her first impulse was to stay and aid him. But the bullet had done its work and with a last smile at Pat, his brave eyes were soon closed in death.

Somehow she made her way through the turmoil to the field. A single crimson airplane swooped low. Pat waved her red shawl furiously, but it seemed as if the aviator's attention would never be attracted. Suddenly the plane circled closer.

As Pat gazed upward, the plane's motor suddenly became silent; the craft dropped lower, touched the ground, came to rest.

Slowly it taxied toward her.

Hardly believing it possible, she heard the well-loved voice of Roger Cecil.

A moment later she was in his strong arms. "Thank God I had the luck to find you!" he whispered tenely. And Pat wept happily as they clambered into his plane. Surely now her troubles were over. Instead, disaster was even to follow her into the air.

CONFIRMATION OF KINSHIP LACKING

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dionne May Be First Cousins to Dionnes

New York, April 25—(CP)— A couple more Dionnes entered the world simultaneously yesterday as twins and today there was some Norway evidence to the effect they were kin to Canada's famous quintuplets.

Confirmation of the kinship was lacking, but the corner groser—near the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dionne—was authority for the report that Frank and Olive Dionne, mother of the quintuplets, were first cousins.

"He told me his father and the father of the father of the quintuplets were brothers," the grocer said.

The twins were a lusty boy and a girl—8 2-3 and seven pound, respectively—and they have a sister and three brothers.

BROWN HELD IN U.S. DENIES TESTIMONY

Morin's Evidence at Murder Hearing is Branded

St. Albans, Vt., April 25—(CP)—Kenneth Brown, 30, wanted in connection with the slaying of an aged Canadian storekeeper branded as false testimony given yesterday at a coroner's inquest at Coaticook, Que., by Lucien G. Morin, 26, of Barnston, Que.

The principal witness at the inquest into Willis K. Baldwin's death, Morin testified he and Brown had planned to Rob Baldwin but that the actual robbery was to be performed by Brown alone, and the spoils divided between the two. He is held in $5,000 here on an automobile charge.

URGES TIGHTENING SALE OF DRUGS

Hon. Dr. Faulkner Will Press For Action at Health Parley

Toronto, April 25—(CP)—Three subjects will feature Ontario's contribution to the agenda for the conference of Provincial Ministers of Health in Ottawa today when the Province will be represented by Hon. Dr. Faulkner, Minister of Health, and Dr. B. T. McGhie, Director of Hospitals.

Most important of Ontario's recommendations will be that the Dominion government to prohibit sale of certain drugs blamed for presence of addict users of them in mental hospitals, said Dr. Faulkner, who declined to specify what drugs he had in mind.

"We are going to try to get the Dominion to increase the prohibited list for there are several drugs that we know are the cause of some of our people being put into mental hospitals", Dr. Faulkner said.

The Ontario representatives will urge consideration for returned soldiers who have become mental cases without receiving any pension, and will press for a common basis for hospital accounting throughout the Dominion.

40 TO 60 CENTS CUT PER QUART UPON LIQUORS

Toronto, April 25—(CP)—Reduced liquor prices in Ontario following a drop from $4 to $4 a gallon in the provincial excise tax, will go into effect the first part of May, Liquor Commissioner F. C. Odette announced Wednesday.

Reductions will range from 40 to 60 cents a regulated quart on British and Canadian liquors, Mr. Odette said, and there will be a reduction on Australian brandy. No reduction will be made on foreign brandies.

L. B. Cordeau, chairman of the Quebec Liquor Control Commission, said Quebec prices would not be reduced until reduction was effected in Ontario. Mr. Cordeau expected the lower prices would come into effect in about 10 days.

LOST HIS LIFE TRYING TO SAVE

London.—Known in his neighborhood as "the children's friend," William Henry Smith, 59, lived up to his name till death.

Never happier than when romping with children, Smith, shoemender, left his shop and went to Regent's Park to work, rather than disturb sleeping babies. He saw a small boy fall into the Grand Junction Canal. Throwing off his coat as he ran, he plunged into the water in an effort to save the lad. But he was an indifferent swimmer and sank.

Both bodies were recovered after dragging operations.

MT. PLEASANT W.M.S.

The ladies of Mt. Pleasant held their April meeting at the home of Mrs. Robert Elliott. The meeting was opened with hymn 352, followed by prayer by Mrs. Frank Treverton. Scripture lesson was read by Ida Gibson, Luke 23. Eleven members answered the roll call and 2 visitors. A reading by Mrs. H. Spencer "Christ Above the Church" piano solo by Mrs. Charlie Treverton, "Farewell Walter", a reading by Mrs. Clarence Goodman and also Mrs. Roy Baldrick. The business was then taken up. Mrs. J. Baldrick was elected for Peace Secretary. Miss Ida Gibson and Mrs. Helen Baldrick was appointed to look after the programme for the next meeting. Mrs. Elliott read a few chapters out of the taken up $1.10. Closing hymn 227, prayer by Mrs. Smith, hymn 227 followed by prayer, after which all enjoyed a nice lunch served by the hostess.

History is Called Apologetic Vehicle

Toronto, April 24 (CP)— Every age has a tendency to exaggerate the importance of its own activities and for various reasons, conscious efforts are sometimes made to obscure historical facts, Dr. Floyd S. Mahe, associate professor of history at the University of Western Ontario, said in an address on what is behind history to the urban teachers' section of the Ontario Education Association.

"History has been, and still is, an apologetic vehicle for propagands," he said, "and so texts quite acceptable to one national, racial or denominational group, will be distasteful to another."

TRAFFIC ACT HAS BEEN AMENDED

C. R. Cooper, local examiner of operator and chauffeur licenses, received the following memorandum in relationship juvenile drivers today from the Ontario Motor Vehicle Branch of the Ontario Government: "Heretofore, persons between the ages of sixteen and 18 years were required, pursuant to section 43 of the Highway Traffic Act, to secure chauffeurs' licenses. By the terms of the Act was amended at the recent session of the Legislature, however, so that now any person over sixteen years of age may secure an operator's or limited chauffeur's license, but does not, of course, prevent a person of 18 years or over, from securing a chauffeur's license if he desires to do so". The above amendment immediately goes into force, which allows local examiners to issue individual operators' licenses to drivers over 16 years of age in the future. Every person operating a motor car must have an operator's license, chauffeur's license or beginner's license before taking charge of any motor vehicle.

MOOSE OFFICERS AT TRENTON INSTALLED

Members of Moose Lodge No. 1094 visited Trenton Lodge No. 1182 on Thursday evening for the purpose of installing their officers which was conducted by Dr. Reed, Regina, secretary of Belleville Lodge, assisted by Dr. Dutton, acting sergeant-at-arms. After the installation, speeches were made by the officers and also Dictator Frank Kelleher of Belleville. R efreshments were served.

SOAKING RAIN IS BADLY NEEDED

A drenching downfall of rain, which will give the district a good soaking is badly needed, according to statements of leading agriculturists. Meadows and pastures at the present time have become dry and brown during the past few days of warm weather and dry winds, and the plowed ground worked last week has become so arid that miniature sand storms are noted. Over the most part Red Clover is inches out of the ground and fall wheat shoots are all advanced but are reported to have become sun-scorched owing to the lack of moisture.

CONSERVATIVES TO MEET IN MARMORA

At a meeting of the executive of the Hastings-Peterboro Conservative Association held at Marmora last week under the presidency of John A. Sexsmith, K.C.-M.P., to arrange for the convention to select a suitable candidate for the coming Federal election, it was decided to hold the convention at Marmora on Wednesday, May 29, next. The Hon. Robert Weir, Federal Minister of Agriculture, and the federal organizer for Ontario, Denton Massey, are expected to address the delegates.

APPEAL IS MADE FOR CAST-OFF TOYS

Christmas may be eight months away, but firemen of the local department are living up to their usual motto of "Be Prepared". Now that housewives of the city are in the throes of spring cleaning a plea is being made by Fire Chief Lynch for old or cast off toys found in the attic or rubbish boxes. The toys will be repaired and repainted by members of the department during the summer months and will be distributed to needy children of the city next Christmas. Several donations have already been received and upon receipt of a telephone call at either station further donations will be collected.

CHIMNEY FIRE IS CAUSE OF RUN

A chimney fire in a residence at 20 Harriett Street, yesterday afternoon gave firemen of the local department a run to that address. The blaze was extinguished without damage.

Free Seed Supply Not Yet Authorized

Although registrations for a free supply are still being made at the local Central Relief Office by needy applicants, as far no decision regarding free seed for unemployed of the city is known. It is stated that summer gardens has yet been made by city council, it was reported today.

SUCKERS OBSERVED IN MOIRA RIVER

Hundreds of suckers, apparently moving upstream in a solid body overnight were observed in the low waters of the Moira River this morning under both bridges. Scores of townsmen paused in their walk across the bridge to gaze at the shifting schools of fish feeding in the water. Handpicked by low waters, Assistant Fisheries report exceptional catches of the fish.

DIRECTORS ELECTED CHEESE COMPANY

At a meeting of members of the Prince Edward County Cheese Co-operative Limited Association provisional directors of the Association were appointed as permanent directors and were named as follows— Wm. Bedell; O. W. Hicks; Wm. Walmsley; Roy Simpson and C. W. Fralleigh. Mr. Bedell was elected president and C. W. Fralleigh, Bloomfield, as secretary. Further action awaits word from the Dominion Government, which has promised a grant, which will enable the Co-operative to carry on for the present. Mr. John Weese, M.P., has promised to give the matter of the grant his personal attention, it was reported.

20 PRISONERS AT COUNTY JAIL

At the present time a total of 20 prisoners are incarcerated in the Hastings County Jail. One female prisoner is confined in this number. The jail registration at the present time has created slightly below summer average.

TOURIST CAMP TO OPEN MAY 1

Belleville's tourist camp on east Dundas Street will open officially on May 1st, for the season of 1935, with caretaker C. Connell in charge. The new caretaker, appointed under a recommendation of the camp committee meeting of city council last night, has been engaged for the season at a salary of $15 per week. Similarly, Secretary-Treasurer, J. R. Coutts; Sergeant-at-Arms, W. Mitchell; Inner Guard, J. E. Kennedy; Outer Guard, J. Richmond; Trustees, J. Allison, C. Hamilton, G. Wood.

FIRST STRAW HAT OF SEASON SEEN

The first summer chapeau of the season, a floppy-brimmed straw hat, appearing for all the world like a relic resurrected from the hidden recesses of some attic, bobbed along on Front Street late this morning on the head of a bearded wearer, and finally disappeared around Bleecker's Meat Market in the direction of the Post Office. The wearer, oblivious of the stares of pedestrians, plodded quietly along head down in the crowd, unconcerned over the fact that he had thus gained the honors for the first straw hat wearer of the season.

Volunteer Workers Move Club House

A battery of men commenced the moving of the Belleville A.C. club rooms from its present site on South Front Street to a new location from this site on the harbour this morning. Under the direction of President Maurice Callaghan, 20 workers raised the club house last night and it was placed on beams. Today with the assistance of a derrick, they intend to attempt the job of moving the building on rollers, a distance of fully 300 feet commenced. As soon as the picture has been moved to its position on Front Street, the derrick will be moved to the volunteer workers seemed desirous of placing the building on its new site before sundown. A large new cement foundation awaits the S.E.A.C. club rooms upon the arrival of the building at its new water-front position. The new site is on the harbour, directly across from the southern point of Victoria Park, giving the club rooms a fine view of the bay. The present building is to be extended 25 feet with an addition upon its arrival at its new destination.

Obituary

GEORGE J. SHERRY, K.C.

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., April 26 —George J. Sherry, K.C., who was recently retired after twenty-five years' service as local registrar of the Supreme Court of Ontario; clerk of the County Court; and registrar of the Surrogate Court passed away late Wednesday night, following a brief illness.

A venerable and dignified figure Mr. Sherry was in a comparatively good state of health as recently as last Saturday evening when he suffered a heart attack, from which it is stated, he failed to rally. Later on Saturday he was out and about as was his usual custom.

Over eighty years of age, the late Mr. Sherry received his appointments as registrar on October 26, 1908 shortly after the late Judge C. D. Hughes was elevated to the bench of Peterborough County.

Graduating from Osgoode Hall in 1882 he was called to the Bar in the same year and practised law in Belleville and Norwood before succeeding to his late appointment formerly held by the late John Maloney.

The late Mr. Sherry was appointed Police Counsel on June 3, 1921.

As President of Peterborough Law Association, Wilfred P. Hughes stated, that he much regretted the death of Mr. Sherry. "I would like to state that during the term of his office he proved to be a able and efficient officer. He had the deepest respect and esteem of the legal fraternity and was widely regarded as one of the most able officials in the province."

From his personal contacts with Mr. Sherry over a period of years Mr. Hughes added: "I can speak in the highest terms of the value of the assistance I received from him during the time it was my pleasure to have his acquaintance."

Predeceased by his wife, Mr. Sherry is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Percy Reid, Peterborough, (where the death of Mr. Sherry occurred), and Mrs. Mary Dowler Ling, Saskatoon; a son, George E. T. Sherry, Saskatoon; also a brother, Mr. R. M. Sherry, San Diego, California; and a sister, Mrs. Babcock, Watertown, New York.

Mr. Sherry practised law in this city being connected with the firm of Flint and Sherry.

LATE DR. KENNETH E. MILLAN M.C.

The funeral took place yesterday in Toronto of Dr. Kenneth E. Millan, M.C., who died at Long Island, N.Y., on Easter Sunday. Dr. Millan was a native of Belleville and the only son of Mrs. C. J. Millan, Lowther Avenue, Toronto, and a cousin of Mrs. J. A. MacDonald and Miss Gladys MacDonald of this city.

LATE MRS. ELIZABETH (Lena) WALKER

Thursday morning the funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth (Lena) Walker took place from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. T. W. O'Hara, 215 Coleman Street, to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, V.G.

The floral tributes were beautiful and many in number and the spiritual offerings were numerous.

Interment was made in St. James cemetery, the committal service being conducted by Rev. Father Collins.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred Fairman, Edward Lally, Lea Morrison, Wm. Davidson, John Penny and Harry Cleary.

LATE MRS. RACHEL CONNERS

The funeral of Mrs. Rachel Conners, widow of Thomas Conners took place Thursday afternoon from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. A. H. Sexsmith, 74 South George St., many friends were present at the service which was conducted in the home by the Rev. R. Partenheimer, who concluded also the service at the graveside in Belleville cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. George Conners, Ale Conners, William Conners, John Conners, Archie Sexsmith and Fred Sexsmith.

HISTORY AND GEOGRAPHY MAY BE COMBINED

Toronto, April 26—History and geography as a combined subject, and the deferment of the study of difficult arithmetic problems to higher grades of school, were suggested by Duncan McArthur, Deputy Minister of Education, yesterday at the public school section of the Ont. Educational Association.

"The mind of the young and immature child has been obliged to absorb some things which it was not capable of digesting, with the result that later on it has been found that its knowledge of arithmetic was not solidly laid," he said. "This applies particularly to arithmetic."

RE-INFORCED RING IS BEING ERECTED

Kiwanis Club Wrestling Show Will Be a Thriller

A steel-cabled re-inforced ring was erected at the Belleville Arena today to assure sufficient support to accommodate the wrestlers to appear in the Kiwanis Club's all-star wrestling card at the local Arena tonight. Three bouts in all have been arranged with some outstanding contestants coming to town.

The main bout of the evening sees Johnnie Gentry, Hungary, 209 meet Bunny Dunlop of Toronto 211 in a one hour limit main bout, Jack Dallas and Johnnie Herman, two new-comers to Belleville wrestling circles, clash in a 45-minute semi-final affair preceded by Bulldog Findlay and Joe McDougall, the latter weighing 228 pounds and coming to Belleville highly heralded as a thrill provider.

The proceeds of the bout will be devoted to the charity activities of the Kiwanis Club, while sport fans will be afforded three outstanding wrestling bouts to usher in the spring sport season at the Arena to-night.

TRUSTEES OPPOSE REQUEST FOR TAX

"What We Want is National System", Says W. J. Miller

Toronto, April 26 (CP)—A resolution expressing disapproval of the Separate Schools' request for corporation taxes was unanimously passed by the trustees and ratepayers' section of the Ontario Education Association. The section also asked profits from war munitions be prohibited.

W. J. Miller, Grey County, contended Separate Schools were "forced" on Ontario by Quebec under the Act of 1867.

"What we want," he said, "is a National system. The Quebec system in regard to corporation taxes is not applicable here."

He quoted figures in an effort to show Public School grants had declined whereas those given to Separate Schools had increased.

The section urged the Separate School's resolution without further discussion and it will be sent to the provincial committee.

Delegates also went on record as in favor of compulsory teachign of music and singing.

BOY SCOUT TROOP PRESENTS PROGRAM

Bawdon—On Thursday evening, April 18th, a May Concert assembled at Wellman's Orange Hall and enjoyed an interesting programme given by the Boy Scouts from Stirling, under the leadership of Mr. Tom Ward. The affair was sponsored by the local Women's Institute and the proceeds were in aid of the cemetery fund.

The chairman of the W. I. Mrs. Fred Thain, opened with the Maple Leaf Forever, and a few remarks on welcome. She then handed the meeting over to Mr. Tom Ward who introduced each member of the troop and gave a splendid explanation of each of the "Origin and Work of the Boy Scout Movement", instituted by Baden-Powell.

During the evening the scout orchestra rendered some fine musical selections.

Mr. Douglas Richardson gave a demonstration in knot tying and Mr. James Ward explained the different knots.

Mr. Fred Rullh was heard in an interesting address based on the scout motto, "Be Prepared and Do a Good Turn Daily," and Scoutmaster Arthur Gould, George Duffin and James Ward demonstrated first aid work, bandaging etc.

A musical duet, violin and piano, was contributed by Messrs. Reg. Matheson and Gerald Sprentnall.

Mr. Arthur Gould addressed the audience on the "Ten Rules for Boy Scouts are Prepared" and "Follow" and this was a revelation to many in the audience.

A demonstration of artificial respiration performed in a supposedly drowning man was given by Messrs. Gould and Ward and was very instructive.

Mr. Gerald Sprentnall was heard in a piano solo.

Messrs. John Munroe, Lloyd Rowland, Ward and Gould gave an exhibition of tumbling and jumping and showed great skill in performing their exercises.

Gold Bar Valued at $100-000 Cleverly Taken From Airport

London, April 26 (CP Cable)—The trial of three men alleged to have stolen gold bullion worth $100,000 from the Croydon airport in March opened in the Croydon quarter sessions and before the first day was over the jury had found John O'Brien, 74, not guilty. He was discharged.

The other accused are Cecil Swanland, 47, an artist, and Silvio Mamarde, aged 30, commission agent.

O'Brien described himself as a "dealer."

Graham Brooks, the prosecutor described the crime as very clever and cleverly carried out. A taxi-driver in North London had been round to his garage and had picked up four men at King's Cross station at 4 a.m. He drove them to a spot near the airport.

Later a small dilapidated car drove up and the men transferred three boxes from it to the taxicab which drove them to a house in North London, where Swanland had room. The gold had been taken almost recklessly from a guarded strongroom.

Can You Wear To-day's Dresses?

Here Is a Proved Way of Keeping a Fashionable Figure

"Dresses, this year," says the fashion expert from Paris, "will be specially designed to accentuate the waist."

What does this mean to you? If you are one of those unlucky women who have "let their figures go," it means that the new flattering styles are not for you. It means being content with out-of-date dresses—unless you decide to do something to restore the figure of your girlhood days.

There is a thing to do—and it does not include a "starvation" diet. Just take faithfully every morning a half-teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a tumbler of hot water. You will soon find that you have gained in energy and vitality—your skin will become clearer, eyes grow brighter—and at the same time you will be achieving that much-desired youthful, slender figure.

One lady (Mrs. D. S.) writes:—"Only a few months ago I could not get a nice dress to fit, now I can wear a size 30. Many thanks to Kruschen. I've recommended it to all my friends."

Kruschen Salts is obtainable of all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. a bottle.

THE ONLY CAR UNDER $3500 WITH A V-8 TYPE ENGINE and the most economical FORD car ever built

FOUR YEARS AGO the V-type engine was priced out of reach of most drivers. It was then Ford engineers decided that the V-8 was the best automobile motor that could be made. We drew on our wide experience and huge resources to perfect and produce it at a price accessible to all.

There are 1,500,000 Ford V-8's in active, satisfying service today. Each year has seen a sharp increase. And the Ford V-8 for 1935 is excelling all previous sales records. The enormous power, flashing pick-up and positive economy of this brilliantly performing engine are reasons for this.

With the introduction of the longest, widest, roomiest Ford car ever built comes a host of comfort and convenience features to match V-8 performance. You would expect them only in a very high-priced car. They make it a perfectly balanced car. There is Centre-Poise riding—achieved by a fundamental change in car design—with new, correct weight distribution, new seat position, and springing. A front-seat ride for back-seat passengers.

Distinctive, modern lines. Wider, roomier all-steel bodies. Safety Glass throughout in de luxe closed types at no extra cost. New quick-stopping brakes. Pillowed seats with softer springs; new interior finish, upholstery and appointments; easier steering; new easy-pressure clutch. Too many, really, to list here. We and your Ford dealer suggest you make an early opportunity to see and drive the finest Ford car ever made.

MORE WANTS THE CURE

When man wants more, recovery will come. This explanation of the imperative need of the present time was brought to the attention of the American Chemical Society on Wednesday by President Lammot du Pont of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., the largest chemical concern in the United States.

This creation of more wants will create more jobs. To bring them means to apply our energy, ingenuity and skill to the promotion of national recovery.... Emphatically it does not mean the destruction of wealth, arbitrary control of prices, class subsidies and other measures contrary to principles established after generations of slow experience," he remarked.

TESTS FOR LEGISLATORS

An intelligence test to determine the fitness of legislators is proposed by the Zion's Herald, the oldest Methodist Weekly in the United States. Compulsion to pass a stiff examination calculated to reveal fitness before being seated is advocated. Here the examination subjects as proposed:

Correct manners, English composition, history of the world, history of the United States, constitutional law, international law, history of philosophy, history of morals, modern psychology, social ethics, the industrial revolution, economic theories, scientific research and social progress and fundamental business principles.

Special honors would be awarded by the Herald for those who having passed the above subjects could best answer seven questions.—

"What is the difference between a politician and a statesman?

"Are a legislator's duties fulfilled when he simply represents his constituency?

"What does it mean to take leadership?'.

"Why is it better to think with the mind rather than with the heart?

"Why does the 'practical man' when judged by his ultimate achievements, so frequently prove to have been altogether impractical?

"Why should organized 'blocs' be resisted?

"What is 'love of country' and how may it most fittingly be expressed?"

No one doubts that some legislators do not well fill their offices. Do many think that such tests would be a help, however?

Would there be any advantage in a brain test for voters? And if so, what would be the subjects on which the voters should be examined?

HOW LONG WILL YOU LIVE?

An "hour-glass" of life which tells how fast a man is aging and how many years he has ahead of him before accident or bacterial interference has been invented at Goettingen, Germany, at Columbia University, New York, and at the laboratory at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island.

The life speedometer measures the physiological ageing processes of the human body, which no doctor has yet been for him to discover a man's physiological age as compared with his chronological age. He finds the key in the human eye, therein lies the riddle's answer to every man and woman past middle afe, "How long am I going to live?"

The elasticity in the eye corresponds, he finds, to the elasticity in the entire arterial system. He has worked out a standard for the normal amount of this hardening for every age period so that by determining the amount of hardening of the eye lens in an individual the amount of hardening of the arteries can be determined and the life span predicted.

Five thousand cases were originally studied in Germany. The finding of course relates only to brain or heart stroke for cancer seems to show only a slight correlation and infectious diseases show no sign of correlation. As a result of the studies it is believed that the discovery in one hundred per cent true. At present fifty per cent. of the deaths of persons in Germany over 50 years of age are due to arterio-sclerosis, resulting in death from heart or brain strokes.

Dr. Felix Bernstein, formerly of Goettingen and now a visiting professor at Columbia University, who described the find to the National Academy of Sciences at Washington, on Tuesday sees a hope for prolongation of life beyond the natural span allotted by heredity. His hypothesis is that age is due to a slow filling up in the course of time of the pores in the mono-molecular layer in the surface of the living cells, this filling up preventing the cells from properly eliminating their waste product and when too much waste product have accumulated life in the cells can no longer be maintained, he believes.

Dr. Bernstein hopes means for artificially aiding the tired cells to keep their pores clean, may be developed. This he says, is only a hope.

When he has collected three times the present data on his life span, he expects prediction of life to be made within the accuracy of one year or more for each particular class. "The physiological ageing measured by the change of the lens accommodation, is strictly hereditary" is the dictum of Dr. Bernstein.

He is at present developing apparatus for the use of the medical profession generally, his aims being to have it used for the purpose of determining arterial condition, but not for the purpose of telling patients how much longer they will live.

The span of life will be measured much more by the forces of inheritance than by conditions which lie in the environment, Dr. Bernstein declares. "Longevity is determined in the egg. You can change it by foolishness, rather than by wisdom."

Such a discovery as that of Dr. Bernstein seems natural in the light of the amazing advance of science in the past few years. Science is advancing man's knowledge deeply into the once-hidden facts of life. This knowledge has so far extended the life span only bringing about better individual and social conditions. How much more will it lengthen the life span?

THE CHIEF SCOUT'S PLEA

All Canadians who are interested in the youth of the country will find food for thought in the St. George's Day message issued at Calgary by Lord-Powell, the Chief Scout, in which he made a special appeal on behalf of the youth of the land, many of whom face poverty and no prospect of securing employment at the present time.

Lord Baden-Powell sees a risk of race deterioration and political disturbances in the future as an outcome of the depression and he seeks to guard against these evils by applying remedies now. He emphasizes in this connection the necessity for more leadership in the field of activities covered by the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, and the development of a spirit of fortitude, which he believes can be achieved through the medium of those joint organizations.

Everybody will agree with Lord Baden-Powell that the time to impress the minds of future citizens of Canada with a full sense of their responsibility and of the tasks they will have to fulfil is today, when their minds are malleable and their characters are being formed. Of the immense importance of the Boy Scout movement in this work there is, fortunately, conclusive proof the wide world over. With a membership of two and a half millions, established in forty-six countries all over the globe, the Scouts go their way, doing their good deeds, training themselves for the future, laying the foundations of endurance, toleration, good fellowship, self-reliance, and loyalty.

These are the qualities the Canadians of tomorrow will find stand them in the best stead when their turn comes to pick up the torch from those who are leading today. To the man who founded the movement and whose tremendous enthusiasm and untiring labors have made possible its worldwide development are due more than thanks. Generations to come will live to praise his name and memory.—Montreal Star.

BRITISH EMPLOYMENT

The Ministry of Labor estimate of the number of insured workers aged 16 to 64 in employment in Great Britain on February 25 showed an increase to 10,061,000, compared with 10,053,000 on January 28. This expansion, which is a seasonal movement, was considerably less marked than a year ago. The total in work on February 19, 1934, was only 9,945,000. The number of registered unemployed on February 25 declined to 2,285,463, against 2,327,787 on January 28, 1935, and 2,317,909 on February 19, 1934.

To enable the unemployment figures to be viewed in their true perspective it is important to consider the duration of the periods of idleness suffered by individuals. It is frequently overlooked that there is not an unchanging body of over 2,000,000 persons who are constantly out of work; in fact, in the majority of cases the period of unemployment is comparatively short. According to the latest Ministry of Labor returns the number of persons on the register who were applying for benefit or unemployment allowances totalled 1,933,623, and of this figure about 56 per cent. had been out of work for less than three months, 69 per cent. for less than six months, and 20 per cent. for twelve months or more.—Industrial Britain.

WORLD'S MARKET

London is the centre of the world for wool and for finance. That does not seem to be understood. It is the centre not only for British purchases, but for the whole of the continental and American transactions financed in London. The bulk of the Australian wool, although it may be sold in Australia, goes to the London wool sales. The world's buyers are there with unlimited resources.—Port of London Monthly.

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder, and that craves wary walking.—Shakespeare.

KIN TO THE WINDS

A man for many years may live
In prison walls pent up,
And yet remember fugitive,
Tossed clouds on heaven's blue cup.

In dismal dungeon he may dwell
Through changeless days on day,
Still visioning the green sea's swell,
The arc of wind-flung spray.

These sights are graven on his heart,
Etched there by beauty's steel,
And from his dreams will not depart
While he can think and feel.

And music lingers in his ears
Within his silent cell;
Dim fragments blown along the years,
Sweet songs he yet loves well.

For something in his soul is kin
To all things that are free,
The winds that wander out and in,
The unconquerable sea.

—Aline Michaelis.

A letter from His Grace Archbishop Lewis was read on Sunday last in most of the Anglican churches in the newly formed diocese of Ottawa. The letter urged the churches in the diocese to pay as quickly as possible the accounts subscribed by them to the Ottawa Episcopal Endowment Fund. He added that as soon as the money is all in he will call a meeting of the clergy and laity of the diocese for the purpose of electing the new Bishop of Ottawa.

The examinations for admission to high school will be held here on July 2nd and 3rd.

A very interesting specimen of "hardtack" came through the mail this morning from Lieut. Halliwell, now with the forces in the Northwest, to a friend in town. It was suspended to a piece of card board by a string drilled through the biscuit. It looked as if it could be used in building a house.

Invitations have been issued by the G.T.R. Locomotive Engineers and Firemen of Belleville to an assembly to be held in the Odd-Fellows' Hall on the evening of April 28th. The boys are always made a success of their entertainments and are ambitious to have this event excel all previous efforts. All who attend may expect to have a good time.

SLIGHT SHORTAGE OF GOOD HOUSES

Heavy Demand For Apartments as Moving Day Comes

(By The Canadian Press)

With the approach of May Day—"Moving Day" to many Ontarians—a province-wide survey by the Canada Year Book reveals a slight shortage of better-class houses and a demand for apartments. Rentals generally for six-room houses and five-room apartments are lower than in 1929 but in a few cases are more.

Building plans are much the same as last year, but there are signs of improvement in some areas. Construction is far under that of 1929 and value of buildings is lower.

Peculiar variation from the general situation was seen in North Bay where rentals are also lower compared with 1929 but apartment rentals are higher, as many cities and towns "doubled up" during the depression, an acute housing shortage is looked for as conditions return to normal.

In Toronto, where rentals vary greatly according to location, Realtors estimated present rents as much as 5 per cent lower than in 1929. Some shortage of better-class houses was seen and there is a steady demand for apartments. The building outlook is brighter, with more houses under construction now than at this time last year, but there is scarcely any comparison with the extensive construction six years ago.

HEALTH PROBE IS ADVOCATED

Hon. Dr. Sutherland Favors Royal Commission, He Tells Farley

Ottawa, April 25.—(CP)—A Royal Commission to study health conditions throughout Canada with the object of devising ways for bringing the advantages of medicine to all persons was proposed by Minister of Health D. M. Sutherland to a conference of Provincial Health Ministers here today. The Commission would start investigations next fall and would include representatives of the Canadian Medical Association and the Faculties of Medicine of the Universities.

Those in attendance were Dr. F. R. Davis, Nova Scotia, Premier J. P. McMillan, Prince Edward Island, Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario; Hon. R. A. Hoey, Manitoba; Hon. George Hoadley, Alberta; Hon. J. M. Uhrich, Saskatchewan and Hon. G. W. Weir, British Columbia.

Labor, Insurance Companies, "Finance Companies would all be represented and the body would be headed by a jurist under the minister's proposals.

Schemes Planned

Several provinces were contemplating extensive schemes, a circumstance which dictated the necessity of such a comprehensive study as he suggested.

Warm commendation of Col. Sutherland for having assembled the conference was voiced by Dr. J. J. Corner, Minister of Public Health for Ontario. He agreed with the Dominion Minister the vital problem of health was bearing heavily on people generally. Dr. Faulkner suggested establishment of a commission to confer at some future date and formulate a policy acceptable to the country as a whole.

Dr. Davis said Nova Scotia was anxious to co-operate with the Dominion in every way relative to public health.

Premier McMillan agreed with Dr. Faulkner, saying a public health policy should be accepted irrespective of politics. Like Nova Scotia, P.E.I., was an agricultural province, probably no easy task of establishing all the needs would be a Royal Commission, said Premier McMillan.

Canadians are More Serious Minded Than Americans, Thinks Norman Thomas

Sir Stafford Cripps

By JIM F. C. WRIGHT
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

Toronto, April 25.—Canada had a better chance of changing over from capitalism to Socialism in an orderly and democratic manner than any other country in the world, Sir Stafford Cripps, K. C., M. P., British Labor leader, said Norman Thomas, twice candidate for U. S. presidency, and now on the national executive of the Socialist Party of America, declared to Central Press Canadian here while attending the Ontario C.C.F. convention.

"Events in Canada take their economics with more steady and serious thought than the people in the U.S. remarked the deep-voiced, rangy, white-haired son of Ohio, Norman Thomas in a fine tenor and one-quarter inches tall, without his hat.

"Yet, in Canada, people move more quickly than in England" returned Sir Stafford, his reserved brown eyes looking across the table into the long-gesturing eyes of Thomas. Sir Stafford Cripps stands an even six feet; and minus the white wig of court, his hair is black and wiry.

War in Europe seemed inevitable the time element was uncertain and nothing was to be gained by becoming alarmed about it. Canada need not be involved. It was a question for the Canadian cabinet to decide, Revolution in Canada was unlikely, but not impossible. So thought the Socialist leaders.

On Major Douglas' social credit scheme, Sir Stafford pointed out it would still leave capitalist financiers in control of money and credit. Therefore, he saw in it no basic improvement for the people.

Norman Thomas hadn't met William Aberhart, Alberta's terrored of monetary reform.

"Father" Coughlin came down to the States from Canada, and I understand that William Aberhart went to Canada from the States," he said. "Huey Long seems to be the only one of the three who stays put, and even he isn't satisfied to confine his operations to Louisiana." Coughlin and Long were

Norman Thomas

"demagogues and forerunners of Fascism." There was some hope for Socialism in the States. There was not hope for Communism. Roosevelt's popularity was declining and the country was moving toward Fascism, the American Socialist leader said.

Fresh from conversations with President Roosevelt, Sir Stafford was not optimistic, the American Socialist leader said.

The C.C.F. had gained solidarity since the British Labor leader was here a year ago. Both felt that differences between "materialists" and "Christian Socialists" were being hammered out.

for Heavy Traffic

Concrete paving provides a rugged, yet smooth and comfortable driving surface, that carries the heaviest loads with speed and safety. It minimizes upkeep, allowing the succeeding year's road budget to be devoted to new mileage. With concrete, there is far less wear and tear on tires, reduced vehicle depreciation and a marked economy in fuel consumption. As taxpayer or motorist you serve both yourself and your community by advocating concrete for highways, streets, yards, lanes and all traffic-carrying surfaces.

Sympathy for Children Expressed By Premier of Ontario

Toronto, April 25—(CP)—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn said today that the Ontario Government would be sympathetic towards the children Crowfoot relief strikers were sending to Queen's Park "but we will certainly not reveal what action the government proposes to take with regard to the parents or how the children would be treated.

"We are very sympathetic to the children and we will show them every kindness but we have only own opinion of the parents who would do such a thing," the Premier said.

SILVER BUYING ORDERS APLENTY

Deluge of Orders Pours Into Toronto Stock Exchange

Toronto, April 25 (CP)—Buying orders for the silver stocks poured into the mining section of Toronto Exchange today in a flood that raised the trading total to 700,000 shares for the first hour, exceeding the average ever recorded for a whole day. Prices for shares advanced sharply, stimulated by the jump of the world price for metal to the highest level since 1924 and by the domestic price to better than 77 cents.

On the industrial section the main action was in the metals. Consolidated Smelters, shooting ahead 8 1-2 points to 158 on fast trading and Nickel to 27 for a substantial gain, Falconbridge went neglected.

Trade was slim in the gold stocks with prices steady and in the Base Metals Mining Corporation, Noranda, and Base Metals Corporation being the high lights, showing gains up to 15 cents each. Eldorado led the silver group rising 17 cents to 1.27 followed by Castle at 22 cents to 1.23 and Nipissing up 10 to 2.85. Bear gained 3 cents.

Exception Taken To Statements By Cheesemen

According to the Wednesday, April 24th issue of The Napanee Beaver, some cheese factory owners and makers in the county of Lennox and Addington have taken exception to some statements made in an article in a previous issue of that paper, headed: "Cheese Patrons Will Present Plans to the Marketing Board", an article had been sent in by S. L. Joss, secretary-treasurer of the Ontario cheese farmers' association of this city. The Beaver prints the following remarks:

In an interview with cheesemen on Saturday of last week, the statement was made that the scheme advanced by the Association is not being accepted by 100 per cent of the factories in this district. On the contrary, it has been rejected so far, by a large number of the factors in the county.

Mr. Jerry Wringe of Marysville, recently wrote the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa, Hon. Robert Weir, asking for information concerning the department's intention. We publish Mr. Wringe's letter to the minister and also the reply received from Mr. Weir:

Mr. Wringe's letter to the Minister:

Dear Sir:

The statement has been made by a representative to the Ontario Cheese Factory Associaton, that if the majority of factories in Ontario approved of paying 5c per lb. of cheese, that you would put the cheese industry under the Dominion Marketing Act and it would be made compulsory for all, regardless of the patrons' decisions in their own respective factories. Is this statement correct?

Hon Robert Weir's reply:

Ottawa, Ontario,
April 3rd, 1935.

Jerry Wringe, Esq.,
Marysville, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Wringe:

I wish to acknowledge receive of ring to the proposed Ontario your letter of March 30th, refer- Cheese Patrons' Marketing Scheme. I would advise you that while the scheme has been given some consideration by the Dominion Marketing Board, there is no question of any approval as yet and certainly no promise has been made with respect to any of the clauses contained in the scheme.

Yours very truly,
R. WEIR.

Silver at $1.29 - Is Aim of U.S.

Washington, April 25 (CP) — Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau said today the United States would continue to buy silver until it reached $1.29 an ounce, or until treasury stocks equalled one-third of the total gold.

The Treasury head said last night's action in boosting the Federal price for domestic mined metal to 77.57 cents an ounce, as well as previous actions in elevating the price, was simply carrying out a mandate of Congress.

Unless total stocks reach the stipulated point first, price boosts are slated to continue until the world price reaches $1.29.

Morgenthau was referring to the Silver Purchase Act passed last summer, which required the Dollion Base would be in the proportions of 75 per cent gold and 25 per cent silver.

He pointed out that there was no time limit set for building up the stocks to the required levels.

MISS E. DAVIDSON HONORED BY HER MANY FRIENDS

Address is Read and Presentation Made on Departure

Picton, April 26—The special Easter service conducted by Rev. W. Rowland on Sunday evening was one of unusual interest. Choosing as his text—"Weeping may endure for a night but joy cometh in the morning," Mr. Rowland divided his sermon into three topics, speaking first on "The Despair of Sunday Night." He pictured the followers of Christ sorrowfully preparing the grave cloth and spices for the Christ whom they had believed to be ruler of all men, with the sorrow there must have also been a slight trace of doubt among the followers of Christ as they watched Him endure much pain. Surely He was dead and gone from their midst forever.

Mr. Rowland then dealt under the direction of Mr. G. L. Clute sang in a fine manner, "Cross of Sorrow," by Stainer.

In the second portion of his discourse Mr. Rowland spoke of the "Joy of the Morning." When Christ's followers appeared at the tomb to find the stone rolled away and the seal broken, they had come prepared for the worst and received the best. Even today, we who always dwell on the many things in the world do well to wait and make sure our misery is justified. The joy of the Christian is that they discovered the empty tomb would be only understood, had they not followed Him faithfully to the cross; and here, after all that was the victory they prayed for.

The choir sang "For God So Loved the World" by Stainer. Mr. Rowland concluded his sermon with a short talk on the "Declaration 10 Years After" Around the cross, the crucifixion, and the resurrection, the whole message of Christianity is centred, the salvation of the world, for Christ said: "All power is given unto you. Go ye therefore into all the world and preach the gospel." The choir offered as the closing anthem, Hallelujah, Now Christ Hath Risen."

On Friday evening, April 19th, the members of St. Paul's United church orchestra were entertained at the home of the leader, Mr. Clarence Bell. The evening was musical and consisted of piano, banjo, violin and trumpet numbers. Many impromptu numbers called were well responded to. The guest of honor on this occasion was Miss Evelyn Davidson, who is leaving shortly to take a position in connection with all departments of church work here. The following address was read by Miss Mary Hulin.

Dear Evelyn:—

We were very sorry to learn of your going away. You presence in the orchestra, as well as at the Sunday School and Young People's Society has been one of help and inspiration. In the orchestra in particular, we feel we are losing a very important member because of your dependability. We would like very much in a humble way to show you our appreciation by presenting this small token. Hoping that you will not forget the very pleasant times we all have had together.

Signed on behalf of the orchestra of St. Paul's United Church—Maurice Bell, Mrs. W. Rowland and Mary Hulin.

A hand painted china cocoa set was presented by Maurice Bell. At the conclusion of the address, Miss Davidson, in a few well chosen words spoke of the pleasure it had given her to belong to the orchestra, and thanked them for the gift which she would always treasure.

After refreshments were served and enjoyed by all, a circle was formed and standing hand in hand the company sang "Auld Lang Syne." "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow," "Meet be the Ties That Binds," "Good Night Ladies," and closed Auf Wiedersehen.

A vote of thanks moved by Reginald Mathison and seconded by Mr. Rowland was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Bell for their hospitality. The meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary concluded a very happy evening.

River Valley Study Group

The April meeting of the River Valley Mission Study Group was held in the auditorium on Monday evening the 22nd. inst. and took the form of an Easter service. An attractive arrangement of spring flowers made this number very effective. Mrs. Rowland gave a brief address defily linking Easter with our Lord's command to "Go into all the world and preach the gospel."

Easter recitations were given by Eleanor Ann Bird, Glenn Bush and a pantomime, "The Old Rugged Cross" by Keible, Marjorie and Eleanore Bush. A solo entitled "It is Easter," by Fanny Cannings, a reading, "Passion Week," by Mrs. Ro: Bush. A Pageant, "The Unshadowed Cross."

The platform was fittingly arranged in the auditorium, the back ground being white and mauve, while a large silver cross occupied the centre. Characters: Doubt, Fear, Pride, Sorrow, Unbelief, Indifference, and death in costumes of black, placed dark draperies over the cross, illustrating how these attitudes of life obscure the cross of Christ from the Christian. Then in contrast white and pastel shades came Faith, Humility, Hope, Joy, Love, Truth and Life, bidding the shadows depart and changing the entire picture from gloom to gladness. Each brought an offering of flowers to place at the foot of the cross which now shone again in its silvery brightness.

A delightful solo by Miss Mae Currie, "I Know that my Redeemer Liveth," was a fitting climax to this fine program. Much credit is due to the committee in charge as the numbers were well chosen and showed careful training throughout.

Mrs. Ross of Foxboro, and Mr. and Mrs. Murney Wilson and children of Latta were holiday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lansing.

Mrs. Bert Hammond who is well known here as a lover of flowers and interest in flowers and plant life has in her possession a very unusual and rare plant. It bears the scientific name of Aloyia. The plant is four years old and this year it has grown to a height measuring eight inches in diameter.—Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 311

Holds Meeting

The regular meeting of the Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 311 was held in their lodge rooms on Tuesday evening last 23rd. Great interest was taken in the fine report given by Mrs. Sinclair on the activities at the district meeting which convened in Belleville. Mrs. Snowden also gave the Scribe's report on that meeting. At the Tuesday night meeting Edna Effa Bailey was elected District Deputy President of District No. 39. Sister Florence Haynes was appointed representative to the Rebekah assembly to be held in Toronto in June

SIR A. GOODERHAM DIES SUDDENLY

Philanthropist, Financier Knighted By King at New Year's

TORONTO, April 26.—Sir Albert Edward Gooderham, K.C.M.G., LL.D., noted philanthropist, soldier and financier, who was knighted during the King's 1935 New Year's honors list, died last night at his residence, just before midnight. He was in his seventy-fifth year.

Played Golf Saturday

Sir Albert had played eighteen holes of golf Saturday last, and complained of illness on Sunday. Most of his family were at his bedside last night as he passed away.

He was created Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George for his philanthropic work, and the Kings recognition named him as one of the outstanding citizens of Canada.

Sir Albert's death was pronounced due to streptococcus poisoning, Dr. C. Jeanneret, Dr. Donald MacGillivrary, his attending physicians, were present last night, together with Dr. William Goldie, who was called in as a consultant.

He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. E. C. Burson, Mrs. E. S. Cressy and Mrs. P. Miller Wilkes, all of Toronto; and by two sons, Colonel A. E. Gooderham and Major M. S. Gooderham of Toronto; four grandchildren also survive him.

Born in Toronto

Sir Albert was born in Toronto on June 2, 1861, the son of the late George Gooderham and Emma Jane Goederham. He received his education at the Model School and in 1879 entered his father's office as a junior.

In 1892 when the present company of which he became Vice-President, was formed he was made a director. Upon the death of his father in 1906 he became President, and during 1912 he became Vice-President of the distilling corporation, which position he held until the time of his death.

On Oct. 25, 1888, Sir Albert married Mary Redford Duncanson, the daughter of Andrew Duncanson of Amherstburg, Ont.

Returning to his home, Dereroft, Rosedale , on Saturday evening following his game of golf, Sir Albert was stricken with a septic sore throat, which developed into streptococcus. His physicians were immediately called in, but despite all the resources of medical science his condition became worse, lapsing into consciousness.

Linked With Grenadiers

The name of Sir Albert will always be closely linked with the name and traditions of the 10th Royal Grenadiers.

He joined the regiment as a Second Lieutenant in 1883, at the age of 22. It was at the time when the Grenadiers were in their final skirmish with rebel Riel at Batche. The services of the young officer were not required at the time and he did not see action.

He was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant in 1887 and to the rank of Captain in 1896. As Lieutenant-Colonel of the regiment, he was in command at the Quebec Tercentenary celebration in 1908.

In 1912 one of the largest military dinners of the pre-war years marked the occasion when the officers of the regiment presented him with a sterling silver punch bowl upon the twenty-fifth anniversary of his wedding. Colonel Gooderham was host on the fiftieth anniversary of the regiment and altogether 1,178 silver and officers sat down to dinner in the Armouries.

Sir Albert loved and fostered the regiment, which had become so closely linked with himself and his family during the passing of the years.

The jar of putting an injured person through the narrow door of a cabin plane is eliminated by the new type of ambulance plane introduced at Le Bourget airfield near Paris. The fuselage is closed. Only one stretcher may be carried as a time and in this manner,

Mr. MacDiarmid Writes - - -

"Out here in California much interest was taken in the trial of Harold W. Vermilyea. The town of Ontario is one of the prettiest spots in California and reminds one of Belleville. Especially its tree-covered streets, its pretty homes and flower gardens. Your cars would look out of place through it on the way to and from old Mr. Bailey. Having lived in the United States a number of years the writer has not lost his respect and admiration for Canadian law and order. In fact the disregard for it here only makes the British law more respected and American newspapers often refer to the difference in administration of American and Canadian courts. There are too many cop holes for the American criminal. Convictions are few and far between. Ten years is the limit for an American criminal who is sentenced for life in any American prison.

The result of the Vermilyea trial was a surprise in California. It was thought the jury would bring in a verdict of guilty while insane. We still think so. The man was mentally sick when he committed the crime.

In this crazy world it should not be hard to prove anyone is insane. The trouble is to get them properly declared insane.

Despite all this the United States government has built the Boulder Dam in the world at Boulder Canyon to dam the Colorado River. Over it will make a lake of 115 miles long and the water is to be used by the cities of the southern part of California. We are going to make a Boulder Dam and good roads out of food that cannot be eaten. It is said that the Colorado river carries more silt than any river in the world. Engineers say in a couple of years the water will be running over the top of the Boulder Dam. In answer to this the engineers have formed a company at the lake to take care of the silt. Sounds sort of crazy-like.

Canadians are prone to the United States they cannot escape the American insane. They have no Boulder Dam, but they have two transcontinental railroads, where one would do. If the Canadians had not been crazy they would have built the farmers' road from Grand Trunk and had one fine paying railroad.

The Canadian Northern should never have been built. Its finest section has far ahead for this crazy writer to estimate. In these days of high speed motor cars many of the obiete in a hundred years, so there is time to spare.

Looking backward there was a scandal about the C.P.R. Sir John Macdonald with the name and "Get clean". The Tories built it. Thousands of miles and many millions. Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Grits built the Canadian National but the Grits were Tories that they could build a railroad too. Both parties were crazy. Politics since some years ago in Hastings County were crazier than they are today. There were people Tories then. In the East Hastings riding between Madoc and Tullytown was a candidate for the Ontario Legislature the writer was very controversial and he was in the school house and the town halls in the riding and heard speeches. There were large crowds at all meetings and each candidate was given a fair hearing. They listened carefully to all reasons why they should vote for him. Then they went and all voted They. Mr. Vermilyea had the same privilege that the Tories were spending too much money. The Senate, he told them, was a fifth wheel to the government's wagon and if he was elected he was going to abolish the Senate and save them a lot of money. They thought he was a crazy and voted for a man from Deseronto. To make matters worse when Sir Wilfrid Laurier came in power he wanted to be a Senator and the Manitoba Boyril dug up all his speeches about abolishing the Senate and printed them in The Intelligencer under the heading of "Another Grit Lie Nailed". Those Tories certainly did not contribute much to the peace of mind.

Harold Vermilyea should end his days in an asylum. It is to be hoped that the Minister of Justice may see fit to change the sentence. The writer has followed the case carefully. He read the address of the Crown, Judge and defense.

"Merciful yours,
W. S. MacDiarmid.
"Los Angeles."

NAME DIRECTORS AT MEETING

Mr. W. Bedell Chosen President of P. E. Co. Association

Picton—Prince Edward County Cheese Co-Operative Ltd., having received their charter, held a general meeting in Shire Hall, Picton, on Saturday afternoon, April 20th. The members of the provisional board were appointed a permanent Board of Directors as follows:

President—Will Bedell, Hillier.

Sec. Treas.—Chas. W. Todd, Bloomfield.

Members of Board—W. O. Hicks, Wellington; Roy Simpson, Mt. Airy post; Wm. Walmsley, Royal St.

Mr. Bill McLean and Mrs. F. S. Wright motored to Stirling on Tuesday to be present at the interment of Captain Carnahan. A delegation of United Empire Loyalists from Toronto, were present, and took part in the impressive ceremony.

Mr. Stuart Chaplin of Belleville, spent part of Easter Week with his cousin, Lowell Bonter.

On Tuesday afternoon the eleven months' old baby son of Mr. and Mrs. Griffin, Ontario Street, was laid to rest in Glenwood Cemetery after a service at the home. The parents have the sympathy of many friends in their bereavement.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles McWilliams of Newburgh, N.Y., are guests at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Hugh McWilliams. They were called to Picton owing to the very serious illness of his aunt, Mrs. Jno. Mosier.

On Wednesday afternoon, April 24th, the Ladies' Guild of St. Mary Magdalene's Church held their annual Sunshine Tea in the Parish House. As usual a large number of ladies enjoyed the very pleasant affair. The tea table presided over by Mrs. Ida Bird was centred with a silver basket of rose and white snapdragon and tulips and ferns surrounded by pink, yellow and green tapers in silver candle sticks. Pouring tea were Mrs. Thos. Shaw and Miss V. McLean. Among those in charge of tables were, Mrs. Saunders, Mrs. Jno. Maher, Mrs. Todd, Mrs. Jno. Bird, Mrs. Geo. Jones, Mrs. Teasel, Mrs Wm. Tait, Mrs. W. Thompson.

The fancy work table had a lovely display of lunch sets, pillow cases, aprons, etc., and was in charge of Mrs. Webster and Mrs. Winter. Mrs. Bert Tulley received the fee and the president, Mrs. G. Haddon, welcomed the guests. A lovely tea table in front of the Guild was on display and to be sold.

Mr. and Mrs. Tulley spent the Easter week-end with friends at Creasey.

WHICH WILL YOU BE?

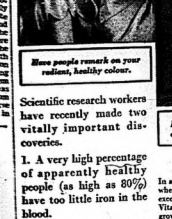
Colourful, Radiant, Energetic.



'SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH TELLS YOU HOW

(NOTE—All statements in this advertisement regarding the power of iron, the deficiency and the place of iron in the diet are taken from Independent, authoritative sources, and are not claims of the advertiser).

Have people remark on your radiant, healthy colour.

Scientific research workers have recently made two vitally important discoveries.

1. A very high percentage of apparently healthy people (as high as 80%) have too little iron in the blood.

2. From 25% to 90% of the iron we get in our foods is not assimilated.

Think What These Two Vital Facts Mean

Fact 1 means that probably you, your family, your friends—would all have more pep, more energy, more resistance to disease if you got more iron every day.

Fact 2 means that an additional source of assimilable iron is essential to supply this need.

Be ready for a romp with the children when you get home.

VIP Does More Than Supply Iron

In addition to iron, VIP contains 27% wheat germ, one of the only two known excellent sources of Vitamin B1, the Vitamin that arouses appetite and growth, prevents nervous troubles and combats constipation. VIP also adds a liberal supply of Vitamins A, B2 and E, all necessary for good health. Ask your doctor about VIP.

Money-Back Guarantee

Get VIP today. Mrs. Alex. Hewitt, Toronto, says, "I have regained my normal weight and my blood is in splendid condition—all due to VIP." You try VIP, and if you feel that it does not do as much for you as it did for Mrs. Hewitt, return the unused portion of the tin and your money will be cheerfully refunded. ## Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Thursday's Children"

Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell Return With More Laughs Than In "Kansas City Princess"

"Travelling Saleslady", the current feature attraction at the Capitol Theatre, brings back those two gimme girls of the screen, Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell in a romantic comedy which will keep you in gales of laughter from start to finish.

The story concerns Rufus K. Twitchell's daughter wants to good toothpaste, which doesn't sell, however, because the old man refuses to recognize the value of advertising. To make matters worse his star salesman threatens to quit and go over to the company's chief rival.

Twitchwell's daughter wants to enter the business, but thinks that a woman knows nothing of trade and her place is in the home. An inebriated inventor tries to sell the manufacturers a formula of different cocktail flavors, but he will not listen to him. The daughter, however, sees the possibilities of the new idea and sells it to her father's rival under a year's contract, she to go out on the road and sell it.

She steals her father's customers from his star salesman in a series of the most uproarious escapades imaginable, the while making love to the man after sight o'clock in thy evening, when they call all business conferences. Events in their world of business and romance move swiftly to a surprising climax.

William Gargan has the role of Miss Blondell's rival salesman who hates her for getting the best of him and yet can't help loving her.

Glenda Farrell has the role of a drug store proprietress in love with Gargan. Hugh Herbert is the inebriated inventor. Grant Mitchell plays the part of the conservative manufacturer and his rival's role is played by Al Shean, of the once famous team of Gallagher and Shean.

Others in the large and talented cast include, Ruth Donnelly, Johnny Arthur, Bert Roach, Joseph Crehan, Mary Treen, James Donlan and Gordon Elliott.

"The Mystery of Edwin Drood"

John Jasper, psalm-singing highly respected choir leader of the village of Cloisterham, in "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," is discovered to be a helpless victim of the opium habit. Edwin, his nephew has progressed very far. While under the deadly influence of the drug, he has some weird experiences which have a direct bearing on the mysterious disappearance of young Edwin Drood, played by David Manners.

Claude Rains, who first gained film fame by his "Invisible Man" role of John Jasper and is supported by a brilliant cast of noted players. Among them are Douglas Montgomery, Valerie Hobson, Francis L. Sullivan, Valerie Hobson, Forrester Harvey, Walter Kingsford, Ethel Griffies and E. E. Clive.

The story is laid in an English village in the period of 1864. The leader of the choir, John Jasper, played by Rains, is a despicable scoundrel although he is known in the village of Cloisterham as a charming and devout churchman. He is a victim of the opium smoking habit and ofttimes spends his mornings in an opium den in London, to return and lead his choir in the cathedral the same evening.

This two-faced man falls in love with the fiance of his nephew and is torn between his devotion to his nephew and his love for the girl. Another admirer of the young lady appears in the person of Neville Landless, who hot-headedly attacks the choir leader's nephew with a butcher knife.

And then the village is startled by the sudden and amazing disappearance of the young man. Circumstantial evidence points the finger of guilt at young Landless and the citizens of the town search some of the youth's belongings are fished out of the river. The latter investigation is led by the choir master who unearths more and more evidence pointing to the guilt of young Landless. But no body can be found and the authorities refuse to act without the evidence that the youth has been slain.

To reveal what actually happens would be to spoil much of the thrill of seeing this picture which is packed with tense, human drama and situations that cause gasps of the spine.

Capitol News Reel is also shown at each performance.

AT THE BELLE

Is Story of Canada in the World War, Government Sponsors Film

"LEST WE FORGET" coming to the Belle tomorrow (Saturday) and Monday, matinee daily, is a stirring feature-length motion picture story of Canada and Canadians in the Great World War. Compiled by the Canadian Government from actual scenes taken by cameramen during the War, it tells its own story and leaves its own message in a manner unrivalled in the history of our country.

While not for a moment forgetting that the hundreds of thousands of feet of war-film taken in France represent in the appropriate government office, Canadian soldiers had reached the point where they completely despaired of ever seeing it again. Thus, when news despatches around Christmas time definitely announced that, under the direction of an inter-department committee, the famous films would be shown in Canada, interest was keen.

The story commences before

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

NEW YORK, April 26.—(AP)—The stock market continued to operate on the Silver Standard today as world prices for the white metal spelled its levels not reached in the past fifteen years.

Shares of Silver King were an especially strong spot with a gain of 3 points. Eastman Kodak was up as much. Others, fractionally to a point or more ahead, included U.S. Smelting, Howe Sound, American Smelting, Part Utah, Anaconda, Kennecott, Telephone and General Electric.

Canadian Canadian shares, small price changes appeared in Dome, Canadian Pacific and International Nickel. On the plus side, Hiram Walker yielded more than a point, Dominion Government 4s were slightly lower, Canadian Funds eased 3-16 of a cent at 99 2-1-4 cents.

Coca-Cola lost four points, U.S. Steel, Gen. Chrysler, General Motors, American Can, Consolidated Gas, Penn. Consolidated Gas, National Distillers and Standard Brands were easier. The Rails slipped a share in either direction.

In New York imported Bar Silver for commercial use was boosted 4 cents an ounce to 45 cents.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 26 (CP)—Anticipating another advance in the U.S. domestic price for silver, speculative interest under buying orders in the mining market this morning for the white metal favorites, Hiram Walker, Castle, Noranda and Nipissing shot up to new highs for the movement.

Eldorado touched 2.94 and was holding around 2.86 this afternoon for a net gain of 28 cents. Premier advanced 36 cents to 2.05 Nipissing 12 to 3.05, Castle 4 to 1.34, Bear 4.to.56 and Peterson-Cobalt 2.1-2 to 9. These prices were about at the top of profit-taking. While Eagle was active but unchanged.

In the Base Metal group Noranda was up 50 cents, Sherritt Gordon, 4 cents, Hud Bay, 10, Mining Corporation, and Sudbury Basin 7.

Gen. Electric was up 5 cents, Steel gained 2 cents, God's Lake was off 4 cents, Hollinger and Macassa were weak, the former dropping about 10 cents.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 26 (CP).—Strong leadership from the metal issues, Nickel and Smelters served up the rest of the industrial board of the Toronto stock today and gains outnumbered losses at the noon hour.

Selling up to 104, Consolidated Smelting had a gain of 3 per, while Nickel chalked up a gain of 1-2 at 37 3-8. Ford weakened 1-2, Brewis 1-4, Dom. Bank 1-2, Hud Bay and Walkerville were down fractionally and Bell Telephone advanced 1-4.

In the trade higher prices prevailed for Canadian Canners, Loblaw B, Canada Ackers and Western Canada Flour Pfd., the latter advancing 7 points.

Certificates, the weakened nearly two points, Bell Telephone 1-2 and the power stocks, Montreal Power and Beauharnois, fractional. Canada Cement stocks, Dominion Tar, Pure Steel and United Steel ceased down small fractions each.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, April 26—(AP)—While some of the trading factors were disappointing today when the treasury failed to meet another advance in world silver prices and withheld the best group in the stock market. Elsewhere there were a number of declines on profit-taking.

Silver rose held a gain of more than 2 points, and American Smelting, Cerro de Pasco Alaska Juneau, McIntyre Porcupine and Wm. Utah, although pairing early advances, showed declines to a point Fractional American Telephone was an isolated firm spot, along with Amerada Gulf, Radiola, Radiola Pfd., 5 points and United States Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Chesapeake American Can and Celanese were moderately lower.

The late tone was irregular. Trades approximated 1,300,000 shares.

Buttermakers' Club Meets in Monthly Session at Napanee

Local Club May Be Divided in Two Divisions

Bay of Quinte Buttermakers Club held their April meeting in the Dept. of Agriculture Board room, Napanee, on the 23rd inst. at 2.30 p.m. One of the best meetings held in some time, about twenty-five members being present.

J. J. Pinnegan of Perth Creamery and President of the Rideau-Lawrence Buttermakers Club, and Mr. P. J. Bogaerts, creamery instructor for the Cataraqui district, were present and invited the members of the local club to a supper meeting to be held in Smiths Falls early in May.

The local club discussed the possibilities of dividing themselves into two sections with headquarters in Kingston and Belleville. The distance many members have to travel to attend meetings makes it rather difficult to operate efficiently. Wilfred Guernsy of Kingston Creameries, was appointed to arrange a meeting to be held at Eastern Dairy School about May 9 for the purpose of organizing a bunch club to affiliate with the B. of Q. club.

C. W. Buchanan, B. S. A., Agri. Rep. at Napanee, spoke briefly on cow testing work and urged all present to assist in every way possible in organizing cow testing among their patrons.

Professor A. L. Hagman, Supt. of the Eastern Dairy School, was the guest speaker, being introduced by J. L. Baker and Mr. J. C. Wallace manager of Tamworth Creamery, moved a vote of thanks to Prof. Hagman at the close of his address, both being former students of Prof. Gibson when he was Professor of Dairy Chemistry at O.A.C. He took for his address "Buttermaking from a Chemist's Viewpoint," and brought out many points of interest and value to those present. His address was very much appreciated by all.

The first cream and butter grading competition of the season was held with the following results:

| | Better | 100 |
|---|---|---|
| 1. T. V. Mallette, Swift Canadian, | 99.00 | points. |
| 2. Arthur Cordell, Trenton Dairy, | 98.50 | points. |
| 3. Les Thompson, Swift Canadian | 97.50 | points. |

Cream, total 198

1. Ralph Anderson, Bell. Creameries, 94.78 points.
2. Harry Hagan, Napanee Creameries, 90.41 points.
3. J. J. Pinnegan, Land o' Lakes Creameries, Perth, 86.39 points.

All cream and butter put up for competition were very difficult to grade and competition was very keen.

The next meeting will be held at Trenton Dairy on May 16.

IMPERIALS HONOR ZEEBRUGGE DAY

Open House Held at Armouries and Evening Enjoyed

Zeebrugge Day, a red letter day in the annals of the Royal British Navy, and Anzac Day, which marked the 20th anniversary of the landing of the British troops on the shores of Gallipoli, were joinly celebrated in this city last evening by members of the Belleville Imperial Club and their wives, who held open house in the Armouries. Present as guests were six ex-service women, who had varying records of service overseas with the Imperial and Canadian army corps.

Opening the evening of commemoration, Rev. Beauchamp Payne, Chaplain, in a brief address welcomed the forty or more present, paying tribute in his remarks to the sterling work performed on the various battle fronts by the land, air, 4th Navy and Imperial troops. He recalled the Zeebrugge battle in which the Royal Navy had distinguished itself in its battle with the German navy.

During the earlier part of the evening many games of euchre were played by those present with the winners being announced as follows: ladies, Mrs. Chas. Fells and Mrs. H. Taylor. Gentlemen, Wm. Hamilton and David Bradford.

Following the cards refreshments were served by the ladies in attendance, after which dancing to the music supplied by Bert Dolder and his orchestra and a late hour. Assisting Mr. Dolder on the piano, were Mrs. Edwards and Thos. Pritchard, members of the club supplied impromptu entertainment.

PORT HOPE AGENT IS COMPOSER OF SONG

Likely To Be Used During Celebration of Jubilee

According to the current issue of the Canadian National Railways Magazine, C. V. Worthington, Canadian National agent at Port Hope has composed the words and musical setting for a new national song, which promises to become popular throughout the Dominion. The poem for which the musical setting has been written is "Our Heritage". It won the Daily Mail, Hamilton, England, Empire Day prize in 1934, and was given high praise in the Daily Mail and by other critics. It is particularly adapted for use in programs in connection with the celebration of the coming Jubilee of His Majesty, King George, and having been set to music by a publication in London in its musical section, it is expected to have a large circulation throughout the British Empire, the periodical points out.

LIBERATE PARASITES IN NIAGARA DISTRICT

Used to Combat Peach Moth Prevalent in Orchards

Busy during the past winter on the careful culture of their fruit charges, that have been received by the million, fruit growers abroad throughout Central Europe, entomologists at the local Dominion Entomological Laboratory, St. Catharines Street, expect to commence the liberation of parasites in this area and the Niagara district next week. Increased, of the tiny parasites, which will be used to combat and control the destructive peach moth, will be shipped from this city to the Niagara district, where they will be liberated in the fruit orchards. In Hastings and adjoining counties other thousands of the parasites used for the control of the corn borer will be liberated in the fields, where the borer has made such inroads during the past few years. During the past year or so, however, the use of the parasites in their war against the corn borer has resulted in a most appreciable reduction in numbers of the latter.

Mrs. Flossie Smith as the Worthy High Priestess was presented with the ritualistic rites of her office and received by the installing officer and Worthy Matron Cluff, with love and all the sacred implications of the order.

As the duly installed presiding officer, Mrs. Smith thanked the members for the installation and has been conferred upon her and most graciously accepted the honor. She also thanked the Installing Board and congratulated them upon the beautiful manner in which they had performed their duties and presented Mrs. Cluff with a gift as a token of love and esteem and to serve as a memento of the occasion. Mrs. Cluff in turn graciously presented the retiring Worthy High Priestess, Mrs. Ethel Tarrah, with her badge of honor, paying tribute to the fortitude and splendid courage she displayed during her carrying on so successfully in the office of Worthy Priestess. Mrs. Frances Cox, whose untimely death has cast a shadow over her year and in whose memory the lodge has sustained an irreparable loss.

Mrs. Coral Adams, Worthy Matron of Shepherds, presented Mr. George Adams with a Past Worthy Patron badge and spoke feelingly of the untiring efforts of the Past Watchman of Shepherds Mr. Adams has filled the responsible office of the badges thanked the members most graciously for their gift.

At the close of the evening delicious refreshments were served and a delightful dance program enjoyed.

POLICE COURT

No session of local police courts was held in the police court rooms today, His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., being absent from the city and in Toronto on business. Chief Constable Fred Ponsford and Sergt. Ellis were escorted to the office of Mr. P. S. Deacon, local Justice of the Peace, where they were sworn in as constables until Monday next.

Early Monday morning, resulting in fender damage only, occurred on Bridge Street, early last evening, when an automobile driven by Mrs. Gertrude Little, Sidney, backed out from the curbing on the north side and struck another automobile being driven by Mrs. Ethel Fox, Bridge Street, Belleville. Neither vehicle was proceeding at a very fast rate of speed when the accident took place and the damage was settled amicably upon the arrival of P. C. Thompson.

Only 16 transients put in an appearance at the police station last night, according to the night's lodging record. They were instructed to 'move along' upon being released today.

Hamilton, Ont., April 25 (CP)—A lesson in early spring blew into police court here when the court attendants shifted one of the names: "Obadiah Morningjazzy." Mr. Morningjazzy, who gave his residence as in Toronto, was charged with drunkenness and the breaking of spring was given as the reason when he was fined $10 and costs of $3.50.

On Tuesday, April 23rd, at 10 a.m., "B" batteries used on this very economical set will reach a cut-off point of 45 volts. The radio will run 10 hours daily except Sunday and, holidays until this point is reached. Already many entries have been received from radio fans in Belleville and district.

Nova Herculis "Exploding Star," No Longer Seen by Naked Eye, is Fading

Pasadena, Calif.—The "exploding" star, Nova Hercules, which last December flared suddenly to 200,000 times its ordinary brilliance, is no longer visible to the naked eye.

On April 1 it dropped from magnitude 4.5 to 5 which is as dim as can be seen with the eye unaided, since has gone to 7, Professor Alfred Joy, of the Carnegie Institution's Mount Wilson Observatory, said today.

Nova Herculis's flare up was first observed by an amateur astronomer in England Dec. 15. A week later it had become one of the brightest stars in the sky. Then it began to fade although flaring up again occasionally.

"The star threw out a shell of gas which is the appearance of expanding at the explosive rate of 200 miles a second," said Professor Joy. "Now it will continue to grow dim until it reaches its approximate normal magnitude.

"If it behaves as other novae have done, the gas shell will gradually disappear or remain as a thin, bright ring about the star."

Dr. Gustaf Stromberg, another Mount Wilson astronomer, suggested that planets may have been formed by gas thrown off by a nova, "is gradually cooling down into planets and stateliites."

"If this is true," he said, "a nova outburst is a signal that construction work on new abodes for organic life has been started."

"We may conclude that every star may go through a nova stage at least once. If the sun should explode now like a nova, even as a relatively faint one, its apparent brightness would be of little interest to us, since all life on the earth would have perished before the sun reached its maximum heat.

"We have theoretical reasons to believe that as a general rule a star which later becomes a nova will show fairly large fluctuations for several years before the outburst. Hence we have to fear that the sun will explode without warning us years beforehand."

Again if Dr. Stromberg's suggestion that planets may have been formed by gas from an exploding star should prove acceptable, it would mean that already has passed through the nova stage and The Earth, Mars, Venus and other planets and the satellites were created by cooling gas thrown off by it.

THE LOVE FLIGHT

by Jacques Deval

"I'm afraid I am too busy. I must get back to—to—my work." It only Madame's chauffeur would turn up she'd have an excuse to bolt. She had been a fool ever to come near this morning. She'd come to town with one of the worst men she could be be? He's said he would wait.

"Let me drop you where you're going. I want to talk with you, Anne." Insistent. Never. What: is it you want? She did not want Craig Braden to drop her where she was going. She wanted him to get into his best car and drive away, leave her to the working of her own will.

Madame's chauffeur had orders to pick me up," she said. She was not being contrary. Her will was letting her down. Her will was whispering when she wanted it to shout. "He should be here now —I can't think where he's gone."

"I told him I'd look after you." Persuading. Pouring oil. "I hope you didn't mind. Darn it all, Anne, you owe a fellow some sort of explanation after the way you lambasted out of the picture at Bruno's house party."

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Anne stole a glance at Craig Braden. The hardness rising the line of his dark jaw had relaxed, ever so little. He was settling down to a steady pace at seventy-five miles an hour.

"What do you propose to do?" she asked, raising her voice above the hum of the motor, the rush of the wind.

"We're going to Jacksonville," he shot back. "It will be quieter there. We may have to wait—something about registering one's intentions. We can register and come back while the time is up."

"Wish you wouldn't drive so fast," she complained. "It's giving me a frightful headache."

He gave her a surprised look, saw she appeared as calm as she seemed, and dropped his speed to sixty. He had expected a struggle, maybe a physical struggle before he had his way. Cave man stuff. Women liked it, begged for it. Those high-strung fine-fibered women like Anne Austin. Well, he was prepared to give her as much as she compelled him to use. And here was she, sitting doddy beside him, tame as a white rabbit. You never could figure women.

They rode on in silence. The blood sang through his veins. He felt very much the conquering hero, the cave men come home from the wars with his woman. This woman might have put up a bit of a struggle though. Just to keep her part of the game going. Too swift-moving for him to make any sort of victory. He was making an ass of himself but she was worth it. God, she was worth it!

"Head better?" he asked. The silence was beginning to get on his nerves.

"It doesn't matter," she said, and turned away from him.

"I had to do it Anne," he said, dropping to the fifty. I had to bring you to your senses. You were rotten to your life, and mine too. You're no more fit for work than a race horse is fit to pull a plow.

"I like the plow."

"If you must work, you can work for me. I'll pay you well. Got your first week's wages in my pocket now. It's a set of rubies I picked up in Europe. They belonged to a princess of Islam. They'll become delightful than a can and garnet.

"I'm afraid I couldn't possibly take them." She spoke quietly and almost indifferently. As though she were quite used to all the time her mind was darting seeking a chink, a crevice to dart through to safety. Her mind listened. Her whole body listened, strained for a sound. There it was again, no more than a whisper! Coming from behind—a low whisper, the echo of a joke of the season, the joke of the year.

He swerved to the side of the road, slamming on the brakes. The car came to a stop. The car behind shot past, slowed, stopped, then backing until it was alongside.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

"What's the trouble"? Two men were in the front seat—young strong men, Anne noted—and a woman, middle-aged in her dress. Craig bent over, fussing with the gadgets in front of him. He could have articulated had he tried. Probing anger gorged in him. He had been duped, outwitted, cheated. And he had flattered himself on his cleverness. He cursed taking it sitting down. Foot. He might have known. A woman who ran away from her own kind. There were red welts where her claws had torn the flesh of his hand. The little cat!

"Something's gone wrong". Anne's reply was flat, dull. She was filled with joy of the turned tide. It's probably the engine. And we've lost our way."

"Where you heading"? The young man who was not driving held the handle of the door next him. He could be out of the car with a racing spring.

"Palm Beach.' Anne's smile was wan.

"When you're pointed the wrong way. It's back there, the way you came from," indicating the road behind.

"Oh bother! Anne was enjoying her coup. Craig still fussed with the gadgets. She addressed the back of his head at the neck, where it bulged with anger.

"I was sure you were making a mistake, Craig."

"Maybe I can give you a hand, "the young man skirting the other car suggested.

"No!" Craig barked from the side of his mouth. He did not raise his head.

"We think it's all right now," Anne added. "But we're not sure. Would you mind waiting until we have made sure? It's important to us, really be able to make Palm Beach."

"Sure, we'll wait." The young man grinned. He didn't know why except that the girl's smile was contagious. But the fellow with her, he certainly was a rum one. He might say "Thank you."

Anne was thinking: "Am I safe, even now? Ought I to get in with these strangers, quickly? They might be better for me to go on to the next town and leave Mr. Braden to fix the car? The next town. It may be miles away. How will I get back to Bob Joli in time to help Madame? I'm late now—horribly late. I've got to ride quick with Craig."

Will you turn back now?" she said at the red neck. Her voice was steel-edged.

The answer was a purr of the motor. The car moved forward across the road, back around again.

"Wait until we're out of sight," she called to her captor. "You might stop again. Awfully nice of you to see us through—thanks so much."

Her thanks were caught, whirled away by the wind. The engine steer mounted. Faster and yet faster. She didn't mind. "Eat up the miles. Fly to a fork in the road—to where she could take one road, he another. Then she would be safe.

Now he was hating her. Hating her a thousand times more than ever he had desired her. She had beaten him, cheapened him. Left him in open fight. Craig, the Magnificent—with the coolness of a savage. He'd never forgive her. He'd go on hating her, thanking the great god Ioti he'd fished her out in time, gotten rid of her. Oh, he'd find a way to salve his injured vanity. But inside him he'd know he was a stamp. He'd never be quite enough to stamp on any smouldering embers of desire he might have for her—to stamp her out for good.

They were back into the town again slurring corners, back to cross-roads. He'd kill them both with his blind speed—kill himself rather than what he had intended. If it were not for Carl—death might be no bad escape—Anne dead, young and the sun shone and there WAS Carl.

"The corner after the next," she said, loudly, to be heard through the wall of his blind rage.

The brakes ground. The car slid to the curb. He was over the side around the back and standing to hand her out, open the door, open the door. His last ironic gesture. He looked into her eyes—his eyes reddimmed, smoking with hating her.

"Good-bye, Craig," she said. No regret, No recrimination. No anger. Just the steel edge, nicely formal, coldly final.

"I don't wish to hurt your nerves had to say it," he said, and was in the car and off, leaving her standing there, bowing to the road, a small frock in her breast and shoulders where the wheels had flung dust.

It was after on when Anne reached Palm Bob, took off her street clothes with no regret. She did not age she might be doing, hurried into her uniform as soon as the few necessary attentions as she sped to Madame's bouldoir. Was Madame to say? She had gone to luncheon by this time—unless there had been an undoing of delay. Every particular luncheon, too, the most expert smart spot for early society—two or three pseudo titles and a squatting of real Martini pianos being hawsed by their owners for whatever pleasures they could buy.

Anne paused outside the door. What was on the other side? Madame, storming because she was delaying for service she did not pay for? An attended with a cold note of dismissal. "Your services are no longer required."

She would have to go through the door, face whatever was there, quietly.

But all she saw was Bata rifling through clothes in the open closet door off the boudoir.

"I'm horribly late." Anne said glancing about the room, relieved. Madame was not in. One knew at once when Madame was in a room.

"Was she furious"?

"She wasn't here to be furious, lucky for you." Bata nodded a knowing head. "Right after you left some one called and she got dressed and went out. Said she'd not be back before dinner. It's a good thing. Her temper was up again."

"I couldn't have helped it, even if she had been here. Something has happened —I came back as soon as ever I could."

"You look dead beat. I'll bet you've not had a bite since that sliver of bread and cup of tea this morning. I'll ask cook to send you up a plate of sandwiches and a glass of milk. They're cleared off the table by now."

"Oh, Bata," Anne, gratefully. "I am hungry. I'm starved. Just bread and butter, anything will do. Tea."

Bata ordered the sandwiches and milk and went on pottering about the room, "setting things to rights." When the food came, Anne ate greedily. She knew how additional food could gobble glutinous stews out of pans and relish them. Plenty of time to look a lot out of one, even with victory at the end. Milk and bread tasted better than mere substantial.

"A box came from Celeste," Bata said, when Anne had finished and sat back replete. "It's in the gown room."

Anne drained the milk, then went for the box. The evening wraps. She'd forgotten. Madame's complete. Bata reminded her, Madame might have asked about them and feared she had been forgotten. Anne likes the night Berta hid the parcels under the stairs. She snapped the string and pulled away the mauve tissue under the lid. Oh, it was fine. The new chiffonnaire had sent the grey silk wrap after Anne had told Madame distinctly, that Madame would not want it. So she was disappointed—but not for long.

Anne snatched the careful folds of grey silk from the box and flung them across the chair. Another layer of mauve tissue and under it the green wrap with the trails of flowers like autumn leaves and a beauty! Madame would like this one—except that Madame was not going to have a chance to like it. It would never see the box; the grey was being crumpled in on top of it and they'd both be packed before Madame got back. Time could be taken. She would not be bent, nor would Bata silly speech nor caveat away by force nor by fear.

When a messenger, hastily summoned, came, Anne explained to him that he was to take the box and parcels to Miss Celeste and to deliver it in person to the saleswoman called Miss Maxine. No one else and he must get a receipt. She paid for the delivery out of her own purse and added a big tip as large as might be expected. Felt lighter as the messenger, and though he did come out of her bath. She even thought to powder her nose in the mirror when Bata called attention to the fact that Madame had not yet left the house, and had forgotten to take on the powder. Bata had brushed and combed her down well for that. Uniforms at Bob Joli were uniforms and immaculate.

Anne finished what had to do, lingering over the task, spending an unnecessary amount of thought, or effort, into them. To have work to hasten him, changed the whole. It was finished you would be free to go back to Carl to play and to love that was all there was in life. That and——rubies. Oh, she must not think of them, not lose out the others—the work and freedom and the love. You could give up rubies. You could be played, frantically, like an undiscipline child who snatches at the Christmas toys and will not let them go until he had smashed them, one by one.

"If there's nothing more," Anne said, pushing her hair back from her brow, "I think I'll go into the garden." Being indoors today stifled her. "Won't you come too, Bata?"

"Not now. There's some ends to tidy up. You go along, Miss Anne. A four in case Madame comes in and don't forget to fix your cap. It's sure to be after five o'clock before that."

Bata said: "Yes, I'll fix it, right away." She ought to urge Bata to come with her, Bata, who bound Anne's wounds, Bata, who loved Madame's cast. Day after day, round and round with the same person, never complaining, never seeming to be conscious of the passing of the hours. Bata had forgotten how to play, if indeed she had ever known how. Anne felt a thrill of shipping into a lark—just because you had the run of the house of the day was in you or burst. Poor Bata! There was a fine old Gainsborough in her room or stone benches under the oleander.

"Brute!" That was Anne's estimation of Madame. Madame did not feel sorry for Bata to urge Bata to come with her. Bata did feel sorry, but she could not bring herself to say so. "Do come, Bata! The air and sunshine will do you good." She didn't want Bata to come, really, was relieved that Bata refused. There was a chance, just the slenderest possible chance, that Carl would find her in the garden—at the stone bench.

Anne went to her room for the hat and gloves and the parasol—not since it became necessary for her to go out in the sun and parasols were work. She would carry it to the bench under the oleander and fix her cap then.

"Big Four" Staff of Giants Likely to Carry New York Into Title for National

Home Runs Feature Game! With Braves Won By N. Y.

DODGERS WIN

Rookie Hurler Puts One-Hit Game Into Records

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

If New York Giants fail to finish at or near the top of the National League standing—and their adherents stoutly maintain there will be no failure this season — it apparently will be the fault of Bill Terry's pitching "big four."

The quartet already has made a highly promising start even though Fred Fitzsimmons has been benched out twice. Carl Hubbell has rung up two victories on three appearances; Hal Schumacher cut loose with a great three-hit effort Wednesday and yesterday Roy Parmelee, who failed to keep down with the rest last season, came through with a game that almost polished Schumacher's to beat the Braves 2-1.

Parmelee, whose previous appearance was in Sunday's tie game with the Phillies, has limited the Braves to three hits and lost a shutout because of a home run. Wally Berger caught one on the nose in the seventh and rode it out of the park after Mel Ott had produced the two Giant tallies in a similar fashion, clouting his third homer with Manager Terry aboard in the fourth.

Brooklyn Dodgers, however, continued to outshine the Giants in pitching as well as in other departments and retained the league lead on the strength of an outstanding mound performance by 31-year-old Johnny Babich. Johnny hurled the second one-hit game of the National League season against the Phillies to win 6-0. The first was tossed by Cy Blanton of Pittsburgh.

Only One Hit

Only an eight-inning single by Mickey Haslin, substitute third sacker, spoiled a near perfect game for Babich. He didn't give a pass until the ninth and the only runners to reach first before Haslin's hit got there on errors.

Cincinnati's Reds hopped back into third place with a 6-4 victory over the Pirates with Benny Frey hurling a six-hit game. The Cubs continued to pick on the Cardinals Dean and Dean combination, splitting brother Paul for the deciding runs in a 7-5 triumph after having defeated Diz in a similar relief role Wednesday.

The American League clubs went in mostly for heavy hitting although two former college stars, Vernon Wilshere of Indiana and the Athletics and Johnny Broaca of Yale and the Yankees upheld the prestige of the mound department. Wilshere blanked the Senators with two hits as the A's won 10-0 with the aid of an eight-run second inning. Broaca hurled a less spectacular seven-hit game against Boston and the Yanks got on a similar rally, scoring seven times in the fifth to smother the Red Sox 8-3.

Another seven-inning sent the White Sox also to their fourth victory in six clashes with the champion Tigers, 5-3. Schoolboy Rowe was the victim of the uprising in the fourth. The Indians captured the top spot in the circuit lead by virtue of their ninth victory in 12 starts, coming from behind to defeat the Browns with Hal Trosky's circuit wallop in one on in the seventh producing the winning runs.

TORONTO LEAFS BOUNCE BACK TO TOP LOOP RACE

Defeat Baltimore Behind Good Hurling of Hilcher

BEARS SWAMPED

Royals Stage Rally to Defeat Albany By 12 to 6

(By the Associated Press)

One of the things, that make baseball the popular sport it is—the team standing—finds Toronto Leafs at the head of the International League again today.

The Leafs regained the lead after a lapse of 24 hours by taking a 6-4 decision from Baltimore Orioles in an affray amounting to a slugging duel, that bit you. Two days ago the Leafs lost the leadership when they were overwhelmed 13-3 by the Hogs.

Walter Hilcher pitched eight innings for the Leafs and limited the birds to seven hits, one of them Pennsylvania's eighth home run of the young season. Hilcher got sterling support from his teammates in the field and at bat, the Leafs nicking Gumbert for 13 hits.

Newark Bears, yesterday's pacesetters, were swamped by Buffalo Bisons and consequently slipped to second place, a few percentage points above the Orioles. Owen Carroll, a former major league pitcher, turned in a three-hit performance as the Bisons trounced the New York Yankees' farm Club, 16-2. Buffalo picked up 15 runs in the first three innings. Newark used three pitchers, Weiser, Zarocca and White. As the result of their victory the Bisons remained in fourth place.

Montreal's Royals pounded out a 12-6 triumph over Albany Senators in the second game, scored four runs in the first inning and sent Appleton, Montreal starting pitcher, to the showers. Kinsey took up the mound task in the second inning for the Royals and held the Senators to four hits in the remaining eight innings. In addition to that Kinsey collected three hits in five trips to the plate—a triple, double and single.

Rochester registered its second victory in as many days over Syracuse chiefs as John Berly held the Chiefs to six hits in a triumph for his team.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

At last the fans attending the local baseball games are to get a break insofar as actually seeing the faces of the players appearing during home games. It was announced today that steps will be made to move the present players' dug-outs or benches to a position underneath the grandstand. The suggestion was made last night, when the baseball magnis met the Parks Commission and talked the matter over and although nothing definite was arrived at, it is believed that the suggestion will see realization. Just exactly how the dug-outs will be moved was not announced, but doubtlessly the home bench will be sunk underneath the west end of the grandstand while the visitor bench will be situated at the east end of the stand, that is, providing it is possible to excavate to a depth sufficient to sink dug-outs. If this suggestion is carried out the players will have to come in from the diamond directly in front of the grandstand, thereby giving the fans a closer view of the contestants, but still retaining their present playing field.

If certain changes are in the making as at the last park we would suggest that the diamond be moved back toward the grandstand about ten feet, thereby bringing the play closer to the view of the spectators. This would bring the entire playing field would still be left north of the track, thereby assuring the players of a good dirt track, as the catcher would still be over 15 feet from the track and would only be called upon to traverse the same track when in pursuit of foul balls as has always been the case. The paramount feature in moving the diamond south a few feet is to bring the fans in closer proximity with the game. In practically all other parks in the C. O. B. L. the spectators are much closer to the play than in Belleville. So why not give the local fans a break?

One week from tomorrow the C.O.B.L. moguls will be in town to draft their 1935 schedule which will doubtlessly be a quadruple one giving each club 12 home games. The latter number will also be broached, but may find considerable controversy before the day is over. Now that the league has returned to its prowess of the good old days, it's about time that the inadequate system of home umpires be dispensed with. Rather than the routine of business President Swanston and Secretary Neil Thompson will submit their reports in relationship to the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A.

The stage is all set for tonight's Kiltie Club's all-star wrestling bout at the arena. All day attendants at the arena were busy erecting the ring and getting every little detail ready for action. Little more can be added to the past statements regarding the class of the wrestlers to appear in the ring tonight except that each bout is billed as a main affair, no preliminary cards appearing on the entire card. The opening bout between Bulldog Findlay and Jack McGregor is a 30 minute bout, the Dallas-Herman affair 45 minutes, while the main bout will be one hour and sees Johnnie Gyroffy grapple with Danny Dunlop, the man with the rubber stomach.

Apparently the lacrosse moguls out along the shores of the Ontonabee have had their style exposed as the Peterboro sport scribe bewails their fate in the same boys from the Quaker Oats Town will not be able to ring in their proposed all-star team this year. The queer part of his epistle is the fact that he at no time denies the acquisition of the local contingent in relationship to a "packed team" being planned in Peterboro. Just what the whole story is all about we haven't the faintest idea, but apparently there was a "nigger in the fence" some place as the Peles are squawking. Just what long over goodness knows what. At any rate we have been informed that a meeting of interested parties was front various points throughout the Central Ontario area will be called by the O.A.L.A. in the near future when these trivial matters will be thoroughly aired.

Frank Whitehouse, who some years ago started for the Peterboro junior and senior baseball teams, has returned to the Liffiock City and also has procured his reinstatement into the amateur ranks after having played professional baseball some seasons ago. Frankie intends lining up with the Lee-coached aggregation and trying his hand on the come-back trail. Incidentally "Red" Hollingsworth has returned to Peterboro, after a season or so sojourn in Oshawa. The sorrel-topped infielder will doubtlessly give some of Lee's imported pets quite an argument for a berth before the opening of the season.

In full force the local Stewart-Warners were out to practice again last evening. Only a light workout was indulged in with a lengthy batting practice tossed in for good measure. The "Radios" will be out tonight and witness the wrestling bout, but will get down to a real stiff limbering up on Saturday afternoon.

MERCHANTS GIVE SUPPORT TO MEET

Six Local Firms Are Contributing Major Awards

A feature that is helping to make Belleville's first indoor City Swimming Championship Meet a success is the generous attitude shown by six local firms, who are contributing the major awards. Each of the following six firms will donate a bathing suit for 1st prize to go to the winner of one of the six divisions under which the meet is being operated. These firms are Bellhouse Hence, Canadian Department Stores, Quick and Robertsons, McIntosh Bros., Wotten's Limited and the Chas. Symons' Men's Store With the out door swimming season now at hand, a prize of this nature will prove very acceptable to the winner and the swim committee is very much indebted to the above firms for their splendid contribution.

Augmenting the awards by the above mentioned establishments, the local Y.M.C.A. is making some special membership awards to the swimmer who piles up the most points in their group standing. This will be in the nature of an extension in the case of being won by contestants who are already members of the Y.M.C.A.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Hal Trosky, Indians,—Is homer with one on scored runs that beat Browns 7-6.

Benny Frey, Reds—Blanked Pirates with six hits, started two double plays and took part in double steal.

Vernon Wilshere, Athletics—Shut out Senators with two hits, fanning seven.

Chuck Klein, Cubs—Belted homer with two on base against Cardinals.

Roy Parmelee and Mel Ott, Giants —Parmelee limited Braves to three hits, Ott's homer produced 2-1 victory.

Vernon Washington, White Sox—Knocked in three runs against Tigers with two doubles and single.

Johnny Babich, Dodgers—pitched one hit shutout against Phillies and helped win by driving in two runs.

Jesse Hill, Yankees — walloped homer and two singles, batting in four runs, in rout of Red Sox.

YANKEE FIREBALLER

CHARLIE "RED" RUFFING

Except for the southpaw wizard "Lefty" Gomez, Red Ruffing, above, was the best of last year's Yankee pitchers. He probably will be even better this season. Ruffing is a big fellow with a terrific speed-ball, and his won and lost percentage last season showed a mighty creditable performance. The riffi-armed Red thrives on work and should be a big help in the pennant race.

Plenty of Money In Old London Says Promoter

By GAYLE TALBOT

London, April 26—(AP)—There is no good reason to believe that greater interest with a population of more than 9,000,000 is not capable of supporting a championship fight between Max Baer and Max Schmeling in August.

Walter Rothenburg, German promoter, has promised Baer about $100,000 to defend his crown here, and presumably would have to hand Schmeling another $100,000. To say that London doesn't have that kind of money to spend is bye-wash.

If one is to believe his eyes, there is more loose money floating around England than there has been in evidence in any other world capital since the years before 1929.

Rothenburg, in outlining to the Associated Press his plans for the Baer-Schmeling bout, pointed out he would have to sell only 10,000 seats at $40 each to keep himself in the clear on his guarantee. The remainder of Wembley's 90,000 or 90,000 seats he would price moderately, ranging down to $1 for the cheapest seats.

Will London buy $40 chairs in quantity? One can only look at the record: They pay $10 tops to see hockey games the average fan in Canada would not invest 50 cents to see the calibre being far from first class.

Breaks of Game Against Tigers Owner's Opinion

By EARL J. HILLIGAN

Detroit, April 26—(AP)—A slump is just a slump, Frank J. Navin said not too-mournfully today and Manager Mickey Cochrane and his champion Detroit Tigers "will just have to suffer." He laid the current Bengal slump right in the lap of Manager Mickey and his boys, treated rather roughly recently by Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox.

"There's nothing much I can do about it," Navin said. "It's strictly up to Cochrane and his players. Breaks of the game have gone against them, there's no particular department that has to run so long before the team can come out of it. Cochrane and his team will just have to suffer until they do."

The Bengal losing streak, Navin indicated, hasn't caused him to change his opinion his team still is the best in the circuit. He points out Tigers started slowly last year, and didn't get going until about June 1. After that, he said, they got going in a way, that won the championship and he thinks this year may be another slow starter. He recalled that about 1920 his Tigers lost 13 straight games at the start of the season.

WINDSOR ALUMNI EVEN THE SERIES

Defeat Vancouver Cage Squad in Second Game 44-21

Victoria, April 26 (Tcp). — The smiling band of veterans and youngsters, who make up the smart Assumption College basketball quintet from Windsor, Ont., were firm in their belief today that hitherto they would repeat itself in the men's Canadian senior basketball series.

Outplaying Victoria Blue Ribbons, Canadian champions, the Windsor team last night scored a 44-21 victory to even the series at one victory each. Ribbons had won the first game 47-22 and the third in the five-game series will be played Saturday night.

Two years ago Windsor-Walkerville Alumni won the opening game of their title series with Ribbons but lost the series. Ribbons won the first game of the present series, and the Assumptions, College outfit were determined today to repeat their victory of last night and make the first game of the series count for nothing.

Not Unexpected

It was not an unexpected victory for Windsor as far as impartial observers, who saw the first game and 15 Windsor shots tentatively rim the basket, are concerned. It was just that the college lads adapted themselves to a strange floor and slipped into the form that has made them the smartest squad in Eastern Canada.

The Windsor team did just what Ribbons did in the first game — took a small lead through an easy first quarter, then showed their wares in the following frames to pile up a margin never threatened. Brown sparkling shooting in the second and third quarters, the Assumptionites turned to ball handling in the final period, that left Ribbons dazed by its speed and smoothness.

For minutes on end the Victorians chased futilely around the floor as they tried to get possession of the ball, which the Windsor lads snapped back and forth in flood wide passes and backhand flips. In fact so little did Ribbons see of the sphere, that in the last quarter they were able to garner only three points. They fared little better in the previous quarter with four points.

Daily Short Story

The Sandwich Men

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Since the sandwich man found something the $40,000 in bonds he honestly returned them, sandwich men have had more than a little fascination for me. I look at them wherever I run across their beats, and wonder whether this one or that one would be equivalently honest. The answer is sometimes maybe, and occasionally possibly.

Which hasn't much to do with this story, except that it explained why it was that I, leaning against a building for a good hour in mid-town, considered the passing sandwich man.

Or a dozen, two intrigued interest. They passed and repassed, having in essential regular beats to cover. Now, most sandwich men pay little attention to rival advertising promoters. They dog along, seldom looking up the burdens of the world on their shoulders. These two were different.

While most of their trips were made in the habitual manner of sandwich men, they changed when they approached each other. They didn't notice me.

Then, in passing, one burst into a loud laugh, and the other frowned heavily and stuck out his tongue at the laughter. In the hour I waited—she was late again—they repeated the maneuver fully half a dozen times. That, for anyone, is sufficient provocation to call for an answer.

Looking up and down the street for Margie, I watched, in the general direction of the tongue-slider-cutter, I fell in beside him and casually thumbed my thumb in the direction of the laughter.

Just a Humph

"Friend of yours?" I asked.

"Humph," he said.

"It's a nice evening."

"Humph."

"Why did you stick out your tongue at him?"

"Humph."

That interview completed, I retraced my steps. I found the laughter turning around a block away. I fell in step beside him.

"Nice evening," I said.

"One of the best," he replied.

"You seem happy enough."

"Well, can't complain," he answered.

There was some more of this, and then I got down to brass tacks.

"When you laugh at that poor fellow with the beauty shop sign" I wanted to know.

And that question brought forth a gale of laughter. I waited, more or less patiently. He ended the fun in a snort.

"Why don't you ask him?" he asked.

"I did," I answered. A" he'd say was humph."

"Humph! That's a good one," and off he went into the laugh again. I became a little nettled by this, and brought him up suddenly by grabbing his sign. He straightened it, and turned to me, his face bright.

"Would you believe I once was worth half a million, too?" he asked.

"Go on with the story," I demanded.

"Well, I was, and he was," he said. "We're brothers. I'm the black sheep of the family. no-good that's me. And that's what everybody said, and everybody was right about me. But they weren't right about my brother. 'He's gonna get on in the world,' folks said. And they meant it. And was he right! He used to squeeze Lincoln so hard that his pennies would recite the Gettysburg address whenever they were in his hand. Oh, boy!

Million Dollars

"Now, we had an uncle with a million dollars. He was a kinda nice sort of fellow, who plodded along, thinking we were the greatest nephews a man ever had. And when the uncle died, he left his money to us—fifty, fifty.

"Golly, I remember when I got that money. Maybe they're still talking about me along Broadway although I guess not 'cause lots of money-kids have come along since then. Well, I puts the Follies chorus in gladrags, and buys up enough champagne to float the Queen Mary, and before you know it, see I was owing hotel rent. And tossed out in the street, alone broke.

"But that wasn't the way my brother handled his money at all. Everybody knew he'd keep what he had. And he bought stocks and bonds and securities that had nice names on them, and some real estate mortgages and even some real estate. He was sitting on top of the world, and used to give me a lecture with a dollar when I'd go around to see him. I got so that the dollar wasn't enough reward for listening to the lecture, and he did without.

"However, that's not the story.

"You know there's been a depression? Well, my brother knows it too. Everything he had was wiped out, and he's walking along the street with about a hundred thousand dollars worth of debts on his back.

"And what makes me laugh is—" We were passing his beauty shop, and that laugh rang out. I looked up and there was Maggie waiting in the spot I had warned for an hour—and there was fire in her eyes.

"Seems to me," said she when I came dashing over, "you might pay me the compliment of being on time once in a while."

"Yes, Maggie," said I meekly.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating breakfast and ma said to pop, Is there anything special you'd like for supper, Willyum? after pop said, liver and onions. Eating the main thing he thinks of when he thinks of something to eat and ma said. We had it on 2 days ago, and even then it was rite on its own heels from the preceeding time, but what would you suggest having with it?

Stew tomatoes, pop said, and ma said, They mite be nice for a change, what else?

Scallopen potatoes, fried eggplant and creamed lima beans, pop said, and ma said, What kind of salad?

Lettuce, waiter ease and tomato, with rokkford dressing, pop said, and ma said, My, you seem to be having ideers in profusion this morning. Well now I'll get to the point. I was listening to Uncle Louie Lizkin's tawk on dietetics during the Fluffed Outter hour yestiddey, and she layed particular stress on the element of serprize in the selection of a menu. So what could be more of a serprize, than having you name an entire menu, such as you don't have just done, and then having every single item completely different? she said.

Do you meen to say we're not going to have one of the dishes I've mentioned? pop said, and ma said, Where would be the serprize element in that?

O well, the biggest serprize is still to come, pop said, I dont expect to be home for supper this evening. I've got a lot of exter work on hand and I'll work a leyter to stay downtown and eat, he said.

Now Willyum you come rite home for supper, I never heard of such a thing, ma said, and pop said, Well I mite be prevailed on, but my if we have my own particuler menu without the slightest variation. Call me up and let me know and I'll see if I can make a special point and get through, he said.

The reach being ha ha at least liver and onions and stew tomatoes for supper.

West Lake—The special meetings being held at the United Church by Evangelists Harris and Oneal are being well attended.

Miss Kathleen Sanderson, teacher is spending Easter holidays at her home at Northport.

Easter services at both churches here, drew good crowds. Rev. Mr. Mullins of the Church of Christ and Rev. Blanchard, United Church pastor each delivered wonderfully fine sermons. Easter lilies and other potted plants were at tastefully arranged.

Mrs. D. Maitland has been quite ill with the flu but is better. Miss Allison Maitland and friend spent Sunday at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley McConnell and Mrs. Ryan, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Cox, Picton, on Easter Sunday.

Leo McQuaid is spending Easter holidays at his home here.

Evangelists Oneal and Harris are with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brown this week.

The Ladies' Aid meeting was held at the church on Thursday afternoon with a good attendance. A dainty lunch was served after the meeting. At the next meeting the quilt will be drawn for.

The W.M.S. social at the United Church on Wednesday night of last week drew a good crowd. A splendid programme was enjoyed and the refreshments were all that could be disired.

Mr. Lewis McPaul of Allisonville spent Easter Sunday with friends here and attended service.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Bird who have been spending the winter with relatives in Detroit, returned home last week. Mr. and Mrs. Wood are both looking well and had a very enjoyable winter.

TARZAN THE UNTAM...

The native insurrection ended with the victorious entry of the British into the Maharajah's city. The royal courtyard a truce was signed the day when Pat, saying the ruler in self-defense, made her miraculous escape.

As no one had witnessed that; nobody could explain the dagger in the Maharajah's heart. Prince Ahmed, his son, and Roger Cecily friend, now mounted the throne amid three days of magnificent ceremony . . . Pat and Roger were wining homeward.

Pat soon recovered from her recent shocks. The craft had flown several hours when the plane's engine stopped! Before Roger could regain control, the plane dropped several hundred feet. There, Pat, and its unlucky men found themselves gripped in the storm's blinding, roaring, wind-driven fury!

Then they heard a sputtering, grinding sound and the engine stopped! Before Roger could regain control, the plane dropped several hundred feet. There, Pat, and its unlucky men found themselves gripped in the storm's blinding, roaring, wind-driven fury!

GERMANY ORDERS U-BOATS, REPORT IN LONDON

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 27.—(CP)—Bombings and physical conflict are to be expected in mine strikes, but things have come to a pretty pass, says miner Joseph J. Mormon, when it isn't safe to have a mustache.

He complained to the Grand Jury; two rival unionists had sheared off the prized growth which he valued at $200 because of the years spent in cultivating it. Authorities decided to call it assault and battery.

. . . .

Chicago, April 27 (CP)— With the coming of spring, the animals in the Lincoln Park Zoo are suffering from an epidemic of sandsoak ache. Officials blamed too many peanuts begged from visitors. Castor oil is being used for the cure.

. . . .

St. Catharines, Ont., April 27—(CP)—Fruit growers are calling for an open season on phenomenal fish. The birds even never so plentiful, they say, and they fear the game may become so great a nuisance as last year when hungry gulls ate every crop they found to keep them in check.

. . . .

Calgary, April 27 (CP)—William Wiese, who last Sunday took control of a Canadian National Railways' train with a top pistol, today was entrusted to Penoka Mental Hospital authorities. Examination by Dr. E. C. Mason, Charges against Wiese under the Railway Act were dropped.

. . . .

Victoria, April 27 (CP)—Abandoned by his mother on a fox farm at Langford, B.C., a baby fox found a foster mother in a cat with two kittens on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Dack.

. . . .

Montreal, April 27 (CP)—A woman arrested on a charge of shoplifting but the evidence could not be produced in court— because she had given it to the police. The woman is alleged to have stolen a 13 cent wedding ring from a counter. Police were puzzled over what they will do about evidence.

OFFICER CRUSHES WAR PENSIONER AGAINST GRANARY

Drives Car at Man in Face of Loaded Rifle

CONSTABLE KILLED

Pensioner Trying to Prevent Sheriff From Serving Paper

Calgary, April 27.—(CP)—A new chapter was written into the tactical campaign of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police today following the action of Constable R. G. Penn, who, braving the loading rifle, which killed one of his comrades and wounded another, drove his speeding automobile at David Knox, recluse farmer, and crushed him to death behind a granary.

The farmer's victim was Corporal Mitchell Moriarity, felled as he sought to prevent the forcible entry on Knox. The bullet that killed the veteran corporal inflicted a flesh wound on Constable Roy Anderson.

For the famous force, it was the first time since the 1932 pursuit of Albert Johnson, "mad trapper" of Mackenzie River, that they have counted one of their number "killed in action."

Inquests meantime, are pending on the two deaths. Not since the single inquest or separate inquiries will take place has not been determined. Although the shooting took place yesterday on Knox's farm near Drumheller, 75 miles northeast of here, the inquiry is expected to be held here, probably at the beginning of next week.

Opposes Eviction

Knox, 58-year-old recluse, has put part of his left leg in the war, used a rifle to chase a sheriff's bailiff from the farm, when he attempted to serve an eviction warrant. The sheriff-bailiff notified police and Corporal Moriarity, accompanied by Constable Allan, went the farm with the summons charging Knox with unlawful use of firearms.

As he walked up the farm driveway Corporal Moriarity fell mortally wounded. Constable Allen tried to reach the dead officer's body but was driven back by shots from Knox's rifle.

All the glass in the police car was fractured by shots, when Constable Allan got into the old. Police were informed and a posse of constables and farmers located the farmer on a neighboring farm.

He opened fire as police approached. Several shots were exchanged without effect. Seeking to get in close, Constable Penn drove the police car around a straw stack and towards the granary, where Knox was hiding.

As Knox raised his rifle to fire at him, Constable Penn drove the automobile at the man and crushed him to death against the granary.

Although the stadium accommodates 60,000, only about 51,000 were admitted under the Football Association's ticket system. No money is paid at the turnstiles. The receipts it is estimated will amount to approximately $125,000, which is equally divided among the Football Association and the two clubs after deduction of expenses and entertainment tax.

With representatives of the Dominions and the Colonies was Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions and Lord Derby.

SHEFFIELD WINS ENGLISH CUP FROM BROMICH ALBIONS

Third Time in History of Club Sheffield Has Won Trophy

KING NOT PRESENT

Prince of Wales Shakes Hands of Players Before Game

London April 27—(CP Cable) Sheffield Wednesday won the English Soccer Cup for the third time in the history of the club today defeating West Bromwich Albion 4-2 before a crowd of 93,000 at Wembley Stadium.

The Wednesday was a typical cup game through the ability of its forwards to seize opportunities in front of the Albion goal when the run of the play in a great struggle.

Palethorpe scored the winner opening goal a few minutes after the start of the game, but Boyes equalized before the interval. Centre-forward Hooper put the Wednesday ahead again in the second half, but Albion drew level through Sanford.

In the dying stages of the game Rimmer, giving Sheffield outside left clinched the issue meeting in overwhelming style by Dost Weather

The game was fought in cool weather and a strong breeze made things uncomfortable for the spectators, although credit to the direction it did not interfere with the play.

Considerable disappointment was expressed at the inability of the King to attend, his place being taken by the Prince of Wales. Representatives of the Dominions and Colonies were present with Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for Dominions and Lord Derby. The South African eleven, who will shortly open an English tour were also in the stands.

London, April 27—(CP Cable) — The annual invasion of London for the English Cup final began before dawn today as special trains from all parts of the United Kingdom arrived disgorging thousands of fans.

Wembley Stadium, where West Bromwich Albion and Sheffield Wednesday, survivors of the long cup competition, battle for the famous trophy was the destination of the gaily-bedecked and lighthearted crowds.

It was estimated 150 trains bearing about 70,000 visitors steamed into London during the morning but the bulk of the crowd saw the final for "7" Coop". They took advantage of cheap trips provided by the railways to see the capital.

Pigeon fanciers from the north brought birds, which were released with the news as each goal was scored in the great tussle.

The attendance was expected to be more representative of the empire than ever before.

Although the stadium accommodates 60,000, only about 51,000 were admitted under the Football Association's ticket system. No money is paid at the turnstiles. The receipts it is estimated will amount to approximately $125,000, which is equally divided among the Football Association and the two clubs after deduction of expenses and entertainment tax.

God Prosper, Bless and Save Our Precious King

John Masefield, Poet Laureate, Writes Sonnet of Thanksgiving For Royal Jubilee

London, April 27—(AP)—John Masefield, former NNew York saloon porter, and now the Poet Laureate of England, has penned a sonnet, a song of thanksgiving for the King's Silver Jubilee, which appeared in print for the first time today, It follows:

"Scattered beneath the mansions of the sun
In distant continents, in every sea,
The many nations are that make us one
King, law and language, give us unity.
Our many peoples speak together,
And yet, in stormy days we link and stand
In common purpose facing to the weather,
Swayed by one will and guided by one hand,
Being for freedom and for peace, our way
Is worth men's caring, we may still behold
The world's tomorrow spring from our today
With hope more morning brighter than the old;
In hope of such a morrow's dawn we sing
God prosper, bless, and save our precious King."

His verse was put to music by Sir. Walford Davies, Master of the King's Musick, whose office is parallel to that of Masefield in many ways.

"I expect it will be heard in public for the first time in the Jubilee parade on May 6 at Aldershot," said Masefield. "On the same evening I shall recite the words over the wireless from London."

S.A. Band Will Play at Jail For Vermilyea on Birthday

Condemned Man Will See and Hear Musicians

SCENES AT JAIL

Peering through the heavy ironbarred windows of the cell block in the north wing of the county jail on Sunday morning, where he will be temporarily quartered for the occasion, Harold W. Vermilyea will listen to a program of sacred band music being played under his windows in the jail yard below. Sunday Vermilyea reaches the half century mark of his age.

The band concert was arranged especially for Vermilyea by the local Salvation Army Corps band and may be the last one that he will ever hear. Vermilyea is scheduled to die on the morning of May 2, next unless executive clemency is shown.

Superintended by the man who will probably officiate at the execution, if it takes place, work of the construction of the new gallows was proceeding in the exercise yard of the jail this morning. The heavy 8 by 8 and 6 by 6 bucks framing the scaffold have been erected, the top of the heavy timber's

GHOST OF U-BOAT STALKS EUROPE AFTER 16 YEARS

Report Submarines of 250 Tons Being Built By Germany

FRANCE IS ANXIOUS

British Press Attack Reports of German Construction

London, April 27 (CP-Havas) — The British Foreign Office today instructed Ambassador Sir Eric Phipps at Berlin to submit a report of newspaper charges appearing here and in Paris that Germany has begun submarine construction in open violation of the Versailles Treaty.

Reports in the British Government presented immediate increase in its air forces was denied today by the Air Ministry. It was denied also the Air Council had not requisitioned for double the threat to the British Isles constituted by the number of Reich planes.

Germany Stores Oil

It is stated Germany has stored up enough petrol to meet all air requirements for at least a year. Merchants supplying voluntary raw materials have been warned it may be to continue doing business with Germany, they must maintain larger stocks there.

London, April 27 (AP)—The ghost of the German U-boat thought laid by the Treaty of Versailles, slashed in Britain today with widely published reports that work is building forbidden undersea craft.

The reports were published on the basis of "apparently excellent authority" in London.

The fact two leading newspapers representing different political factions carried the information and diplomatic news tended to strengthen the authenticity of the reports.

Announcements in the London Morning Chronicle and The Herald small submarines are being built by Germany came as no tremendous surprise, however.

It was recalled official spokesmen in Berlin recently said Germany must have a small fleet of submarines to defend its Baltic coasts. The Socialist Herald said, however, a second batch of submarines of a larger size for ocean service will be built next.

Twelve submarines of 250 tons are now reported under construction at Kiel, Germany's principal port.

Coming closely upon the recent British pact with Germany permitting her to show Germany's air force is stronger than Britain's the reported submarine plans are expected to provide new material for the arms debates in parliament next Thursday.

Paris, April 27 (CP)—Reports that Germany has secretly decided to build submarines opened up the possibility today of a new naval problem on the part of France, England and Italy.

Germany, subject to limitations of a reconstructed submarine training base at Kiel, seat of her undersea fleet of 24 boats during the Great War, the Echoe De Paris stated today.

German Denial of Orders

Berlin, April 27 (AP)—The German defence ministry admitted today the existence of preliminary plans of Germany's rearmament program, although denying orders had been given for the construction of new U-boats.

The ministry's official spokesman when informed 4 had been reported abroad Germany had placed orders for submarines, said "The whole matter of rearmament is as yet in a state of plans and nothing definite has been done. Naturally, the question submarines plays a role in our considerations for the future."

FURITURE FACTORY BURNED

Kitchener, Ont., April 27 — The plant of the Kitchener Woodworkers' Limited, one of the city's biggest furniture factories, was completely destroyed by fire early today. The origin of the blaze is not known and no estimate of the loss has been made.

It was the second major industrial fire in a month and will throw 150 men out of work. Only recently the plant of the Canada Stair Company was gutted.

Seven Trenton Children Carried Out by Neighbors As Flames Circle Stairs

Blaze in Double House is Discovered Just in Time

FANNED BY WIND

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cook, Parents, Were Attending Dance

Trenton, April 27 (Special) —A near tragedy was averted last night when seven children were carried to safety as fire raged through their dwelling. The fire was noticed by neighbors after it had gained considerable headway. Jack Woods, Harry Cooper, Earl Cruickenshank and Pat Coe succeeded in getting the children to safety just before the stairway was encircled with flames. The children were Lucille age 13, Everett 8, Margaret 7, Howard 6, Robert 3 and George, a year old baby, children of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cook, and Donald Archer, 17, who also resides with the Cook family. The parents were attending a dance, while the children slept.

The house was a large frame double dwelling with Mr. and Mrs. Cook occupying the upper part of the building. They were also at the dance, when the fire broke out. Three little of hose were played on the flames but today the house and its contents are a charred mass. Sparks ignited the roofs of adjoining property as a strong wind fanned the blaze, that the fire department was powerless to combat. Several times the firemen were forced to put out other fires. The cause of the blaze is not known as neither house had a fire burning nor used electricity. Neither family carried insurance.

Canada and U.S. To Celebrate 118 Years Peace

Washington, April 27 (AP)—Amid a world that is rushing its military preparations, a group of men will gather in Ghent on Monday the 118th anniversary of North America's first naval limitation agreement.

The "Rush-Bagot Treaty" which limited the naval strength that Canada and the United States maintained on the Great Lakes, went into effect with an exchange of ratified dated April 28, 1817. It has been in effect ever since.

It is largely due to this pact with the dedication of a memorial tablet.

The agreement resulted from negotiations between Charles Bagot, minister of Great Britain to Washington, and Richard Rush, acting secretary of state, whose cousin Benjamin Rush signed the Declaration of Independence.

Under the naval force to be maintained upon the American lakes by His Majesty and the government of the United States of America shall be confined," the agreement stipulates, "to the following vessels on each side, that is:

"On Lake Ontario, to one vessel not exceeding one hundred tons burden, and armed with one eighteen pound cannon.

"On the upper lakes, to two vessels not exceeding like burden each, and armed with like force:

"On the waters of Lake Champlain, to one vessel not exceeding like burden, and armed with like force.

"All other armed vessels on these lakes shall be forthwith dismantled, and no other vessels shall be there built or armed."

The negotiations were conducted at Washington from the British position which stood at Twenty-fifth and L Streets, northwest.

On that site today stands Columbia Hospital.

There on Monday, Dr. William J. Carrington, ALP., Charlotte City, N.J., president of the Kiwanis International, will present a memorial tablet.

Strange Men's Strange Lives And Unfolded

Hollywood, Calif., April 27.—(AP) —A maze of bizarre circumstances in Hollywood's triple shooting mystery was brushed aside by authorities today as they centred their efforts on an international search for a "tall blond" missing sailor.

The man sought in Southern California and Mexico, is N. C. McSmittt, 21-year- old seaman from the U.S.S. Pennsylvania.

They said they were convinced he could furnish valuable information in connection with the slaying Thursday night of Paul Ivar, young Hollywood Times Pashionist, the purported suicide of William M. Howard, college graduate and insurance salesman, and the fatal, critical wounding of Henry E. Bolte, doctor's brother.

It was in the personal affairs of the young "tall, stiff-styled" nobody who wanted to become somebody", that investigators sought an explanation for the triple shooting.

He was a designer for such movie stars as Jeanette Bennett and with Miss Jean Harlow and also had contracts with Countess Rina de Liguoro, and Mrs. Ray Wolfe of Beverly Hills.

Then William Bright of the Sheriff's office expressed belief a money quarrel precipitated the affray. He summed up the findings with the remark, "Strange men!"

"They were strange men who led strange lives," he said.

BUSINESS BLOCK MAXVILLE BURNS

Damage to Property is Estimated at $70,000

Maxville, Ont., April 27.—(CP)— An entire business block in the town of 900 inhabitants lay in ruins today as property owners counted damage estimated at $70,000 and volunteer fire fighters continued wearily to play streams on hot spots.

Three stores, largest in the town, were totally burned early and two churches were damaged as flames spread from building to building. Fighting handicapped by scanty equipment and shortage of water pressure, the blaze swept from midnight to more than two hours before they had the blaze under control.

Heaviest loss was suffered in destruction of the store of Alex McDougall general store. The owners calculated the loss at $40,000. Flames also destroyed the printing shop of A. W. Fraser, Limited, and the G. H. McGougall's grain and feed storehouse valued at $5,000 and several smaller buildings.

EYE CLINIC IS HELD IN SCHOOLS

Assistance Given By Kinsmen's Club is Mentioned

A thorough check of pupils' eyes in the four public schools of this city in the past few weeks during the annual vision tests held in the schools resulted in 505 children being examined for eye trouble, it was stated in a report of the school nurses presented to the Board of Education. A not of appreciation for the assistance being given in the matter by the local Kinsmens' Club who at present are taking an interest in several pupils with defective vision was contained in the report. During the month of March 23 children received dental treatment in the schools. Office treatments reached a high total of 102 while 223 home visits were made by the nurse. Contagious diseases were reported at one case of scarlet fever and two cases of whooping cough.

Board Discusses New Roof For Collegiate Institute Referred Back to Committee

Repairs Will Be $1,000 and New Roof Will Cost $3,000

LITTLE BUSINESS

Male Teachers May Be Retired at 70 and Women at 65

Whether or not a complete new roof should be put on the local Collegiate and Vocational Institute or extensive repairs be the present order which has become so torn it leaks badly after every rain, is a question that is agitating the minds of members of the Board of Education, and one that has so far held up the Board in its efforts to strike the estimates for the current year.

At an adjourned meeting of members held last evening the question was still an unsolved one, as after a fair considerable debate on the matter, it is admitted, that the expenditure for a new roof, will boost the estimates considerably, and will result in a heavier tax rate. Estimated cost of the new roof was about $3,400.00.

In the presentation of the report of the Sites, Building and Repairs Committee submitted by chairman of the committee, Trustee Hyde, it was shown that no definite steps had been taken to deal with the matter on the matter. "We're still undecided. We don't know whether to put the money in a new roof on the old one do, after we patch it," commented chairman Hyde.

Undecided as to Procedure

"But, it's an imperative question. We've got to do something. The whole thing resolves itself into the question as to whether we are justified in spending $1,000.00 in repairs or in spending a little more and putting a good roof on."

Trustee Hyde produced a number of photographs which showed the top of the school which showed much of the roofing torn and split and apparently ready to blow away in the next high wind.

Trustee Hall left of $1,000 to repair and, guarantee the present roof for any period—say for three years or more, but a new roof will cost us in the neighborhood of $3,4400.00. We would get a 15-year bonded roof for that price, but the committee is undecided as to what to do," said Ald. Geen, chairman of the Board.

How much did the roof cost last year to keep it in repair—I understand it was some hundreds of dollars," questioned Col. W. N. Ponton. "And how long should that roof have lasted, how old is the roof," he asked.

"Seven years old" enlightened Mr. Hyde in reference to the age of the school.

"Well, don't you think, that's too soon for any sort of a roof at all to be in place and expected," explained Col. Ponton.

"I don't believe the roof was laid as it should have been in the first place," countered Mr. Hyde. "I believe it was finished in cold weather and that it wasn't done just right.

The contractor, who put it down is out of business so we have no recourse. That roof should have lasted ten years at least."

Col. Ponton: "And at this critical time, do you feel justified in spending a lot of money to put on a new roof?"

"The roof is all out of level, one corner of it is a foot lower than the other corner. We will have to fix the walls of the roof, and that will cost something, too", maintained Trustee David Harrison. "That roof should never have been put on at all. What's a roof, that will last only ten years—it should be good for sixty or seventy years," he added.

Architect Not Responsible

"Who was the architect?" questioned Trustee H. J. Allin.

"He probably wouldn't be responsible for it," pointed out Trustee Geo. Catrom. "But there was, I believe, at the time the school was built, such an established committee, who were going to show how much they could save by chopping here and changing there and maybe the roof was one of the changes."

"I think the roof has lasted remarkably well, considering the material its made of. It reminds of shingles on a summer cottage put on back shed", claimed Trustee Reg Moncrieff. "And if you don't hurry up and do something about the roof, you're going to have to put in some new ceilings also, with the roof. Every time it rains it runs down inside," he warned.

"We made some mention of it before in the press, but it didn't seem to arouse any enthusiasm either for or against," commented Chairman Chas. Hyde.

Col. W. N. Ponton pointed to the probability of increased city taxes this year. "Don't give the impression a change to say, that we were going to be responsible if there is an increase this year. Don't let them say it was the School Board's fault for increasing taxes."

The matter of the roof was finally left over for the Committee of Sites, Buildings and Repairs to wrestle with futher.

Upon a recommendation of the Playgrounds Committee, Miss Murray Wardner and Miss Jean Geen were appointed by the Board as supervisors of the east Belleville playgrounds, at the rate of $40.00 per month for the months of July and August.

Against Tree Cutting

"It has come to my attention, that a tree or some trees have been cut down in one of these playgrounds. Was any one on the committee ever given any orders to that effect?" questioned Trustee H. Allin, questioning revealed, that one tree that had been cut down was well over three inches thick at the base. A committee composed of Trustee H. D. Allen, Trustee Mitchell and F. M. Bird was appointed to look into the matter of tree chopping.

Members of the Board on the suggestion made by Inspector H. J. Clarke that they could fix their own laws in the matter unanimously passed the recommendation of the School Management Committee, that all male teachers shall only be automatically retired at the age of 70, and all female teachers at the age of 65. Principals of the schools were also given authority under a second recommendation to use their own judgment in the matter of half day classes for children who are just starting their terms in school. These classes will be regulated by the accommodation of the class rooms.

A request by the supervisor of the Belleville General Hospital for the use of the Collegiate auditorium for the purpose of holding examination day exercises on May 17th was referred to the Auditorium Committee with power to act.

A recommendation, that St. Michael's School Board and the Board of School Management of Albert College be responsible for the forty-five cent charge for each pupil to cover charge for entrance examination costs, on motion of Trustee Ed. Lally was passed.

A motion by Trustee Reg Moncrieff and seconded by Trustee R. L. Brown, that the government be petitioned against any proposed change in school text books for a period of one year received unanimous endorsation even though it was pointed out by Principal F. W. MacLaurin, that there was "not much use in passing it, because the government generally proposed these changes three years ahead."

Contents of Letter Denied

Six Collegiate students who signed their names to a typed letter in which they charged they had, against their will, been given periods of physical culture exercise under orders of Principal F. C. MacLaurin, and who also signed in their letter they had been called "slackers" and "home guards" by the Principal when they refused to join the school cadet corps brought a heated denial from the latter when the letter was unexpectedly produced and read by Trustee H. J. Allin. The Principal coupled his denial of the alleged statements with his own explanation of the matter.

The youths stated in their letter they did not wish to take training but wished merely to take the usual High School Course. Trustee Allen pointed out in one paragraph, "

We have a motion on our books here, that distinctly says there is to be no coercion, no force, or anything of the sort used to make a boy take cadet training. I don't believe these boys should be given any drill of the sort, if they don't want it", commented Trustee Allin, as he finished reading part of the letter.

"Have you received Principal MacLaurin.

"Yes, we have all the names right here," pointed out Trustee Allin. The signatures, however, were not revealed.

"This is the first intimation I have had that there was a letter of that sort was to be brought up here at this meeting. It has taken me completely by surprise," declared Principal MacLaurin. "I believe if anything like that was going to be brought up—if there was any criticism to have been made, that I should have been given a chance to state my side of the case at the same time."

Many Read Word

"First, I have never used the word coerce or force in form or any way speak of. Secondly, I believe this letter is not initiated by any of the boys whose names are there. I wanted a letter from the parents saying they did not wish their boys to take part in any cadet drill, or a letter from the doctor saying they were not able to take part in the drill. Then the letter from their parents said they did not like drill. There's a reason for this exercise."

"I don't have discipline in the school. Years ago the boys took the drill uniformly and everything was similar. But it is not the case now. These boys, who didn't want the drill simply take it in the humorous way through physical exercises they would be organized and not running after the balls. Then the number of them were out drilling. This matter of cadet training is not in any way a militaristic training, but in order to be efficient as it should be kept I explained, that while the other boys were out they must take part in physical exercises or nothing to keep them out of mischief."

"I would like to find out the names and have a talk with the boys and find out, where that letter really came from," declared Trustee Principal.

Trustee Allin explained, that the letter was from a lady who was trying to get her boys through school at a cadet drill. He said he had intended badly at home. "Why are the children taken out of the classrooms when the rest of them are out drilling?" asked Trustee Allin.

"So that they will be under supervision," explained Principal MacLaurin. "Some of the boys are unable to do their short hand or typewriting and they are kept in the room."

"This cadet training is disorganizing the whole school," maintained Trustee Allin. "Some boys are kept after school, when they were out drilling and every window was filled with the faces of the girls and teachers watching them."

It was explained by Principal MacLaurin, that the regular drill period was 2:30 to 4:00 o'clock.

"The girls might have stepped to the window and watched the boys march from their parades ground", he pointed out.

"It still say, that cadet training is disorganizing the whole school", declared Trustee Allin, emphatically.

"Well, I'm trying to organize the cadet corps, but if it is the wish of the B.I. declared Mr. MacLaurin.

Principal Challenged

Trustee Allin returned again to some statements made in the letter by the boys. "Slackers" and "home guards." If I'm not mistaken I have from the six boys, that you called them that, will you resign?" he asked Mr. MacLaurin.

"Would you take the word of five or six boys against that of their own teacher and principal?" shot back Mr. MacLaurin. "I should resign on such a thing. I have always spoken sincerely to any of the pupils of this school...."

In this case I would" retorted Mr. Allin, waving the letter.

"As a new member I would like to ask, if the facts are read correctly in the discussion that is in order. We're talking about something, that we don't know anything about," remarked Trustee Ed. Lally.

"I think we should get order altogether," declared Col. E. A. Geen, chairman.

Trustee Lally: "We'll have a queer state of affairs on this Board if we bring this sort of thing in. What the natures should be given."

Trustee Allin: "All right, I'll hand this letter over to the Board of School Management and let them look at it."

Under inquiries Col. Ponton ask. if he knew anyone in that room knew anything of Geo. Harriss, once of this city, but happily situated now in Redwood, California, where I am told he has attained a very high position. Not at this time nor one of our scholars here? It's very nice to speak of the successful men who have gained their eminence here in this school and then have gone away."

"I'll be happy to look up the name for you in his records", volunteered Principal MacLaurin.

A further suggestion by Col. Ponton to the effect that the School Board as a unit should send an expression of loyalty to King George on the occasion of his Silver Jubilee was greeted with unanimous support.

In remarking on the ceremony attached locally on May 6 on the occasion of the Jubilee it was pointed out by Col. Geen, that all school children, who parade on that day will be given suitable medals purchased by the Board.

Col. W. N. Ponton gave notice of motion, that he would at the next meeting introduce a resolution, which would approve of cricket as part of the school sports.

The matter of the purchase of a new flag for the flag staff at Queen Alexandra School was left to the Supply Committee with power to act.

The meeting adjourned in the evening of Tuesday, May 7th when it is hoped to strike the estimates for the year.

Police News

Local police were called to the west side of the river to quell a disturbance which was made in residence. The police soon established peace and quietness. Out of inspectipants being ejected from the house. No serious injuries resulted during the arguments.

A general falling off in the matter of transients stopping in Belleville over night has been noticed of late, and only seven appeared at the police station seeking a night's lodging last night. The prevailing warmer weather that has been in vogue of late, gives the boys a chance to sleep out in the open, if they have some little shelter," explained one police official today in reference to the decline of transient at the police station.

Enjoying his liberty exactly 48 hours, Vincent McMahon of Frankford, was arrested on Monza street, last night and locked up charged with intoxication. McMahon was released from the Canada Refractories today only 48 hours prior to his arrest in Belleville. He was apprehended while driving a motor car west on Monza St., a charge in the local police court will follow.

Local streets and adjacent highways were the scenes major motor accidents during the past 24 hours.

Modernizing the Plumber

If we are asked to name the greatest contribution of science to the home of today, without hesitation we would answer plumbing. Modern plumbing has wrought a transformation in the house-hold. It has brought with it new standards of comfort, beauty and efficiency. If your plumbing is out-of-date your house is lacking in one of the very essentials of modern comfort.

Modernizing your bath room is not an expensive job today, provided you have the work done by a reliable plumbing firm. This city is served by a number of first class plumbing concerns, of which Gavn R. Dobbs, at 12 Victoria Ave., is an outstanding example. This firm employs only qualified experts in all the work it undertakes. Those men do the work you with suggestions.

OVERHEATED PIPE IS CAUSE OF FIRE

Fire of a serious nature started in the Parks Kennels, operated by Mr. and Mrs. McGuire, five miles east of Napanee, on Highway No. 2, about 4 after the clock on Friday morning. The fire is believed to have started from overheated furnace pipes. The furnace was being relighted when the fire started in the upper part of the house.

The contents of the lower part of the house were practically all removed but nothing was saved from the upper floor. Neighbors formed a bucket brigade and endeavoured to confine the limits of the fire by throwing water on the roofs of buildings across the highway, which were in danger of catching fire from the sparks.

It is estimated that the loss will be about $3,000 and it is partly covered by insurance. The seventy-five dogs and pups quartered in the kennels were removed to safety to a

SPRING REACHES HIGHWAY CAMP

Arrival of Mail Man Stirs Population of Camp

St. Ola, (Special)—Easter Sunday and a very quiet day in camp. We are not as yet going to church on account of the measles, although all cases are nearly well and anxious to get back to work soon as the doctor says so.

Yes, Spring is here. At least seven reports of mosquitoes were turned in on Good Friday.

An innocent and harmless diversion was enjoyed on Sunday afternoon when a return game was staged between the famous Senators and Bear Cats. Many favorable conditions that did not exist last Sunday were in evidence today which gave the Bear Cats a better showing. First the scouts discovered a plowed field level enough for a diamond in closer proximity to Camp. Second, the bat—a pick-handle, was trimmed down and divested of slivers by the blacksmith during the week in his spare moments. Third, a new umpire in the person of Happy Day was discovered, who contended that a man who made a three bag hit on a foul was entitled to keep his base and call it a fan ball. Fourth, Score-keeper Norman Mitchell was more generous today with his lead pencil in marking up runs for the Bear Cats. This generosity in all probability resulted from threats on his life by a big, overgrown Bear Cat in the event that the score was not more favorable to them than it was last Sunday; although far be it from the purpose of your scribe to insinuate that the game was not absolutely played on the square!?? Fifth, last but not least was the fact that our old friend, "Shad" Murray, catcher for the Bear Cats, showed a return of the old perfect form.

The score showed a decided improvement, being 25 to 15, still, however, in favor of Lefty Grove's Senators. The Wellington House team of Camp are determined to at least tie the score before many more games.

Now, good folks at home, just a quiet tip for you. One evening last week a real musical concert was in progress and being enjoyed by all in one of the bunk houses, when the door was opened and a cry went up, "The Mail! The Mail!" Everybody, even the actors, dropped all interest in the music and rushed the mailman. "Oh, Charlie, surely you have a letter for me tonight." If you could only picture the faces of those who did not get a letter you would all down right now and write a big letter telling us all about everything.

THE DRAMA

Vancouver Players Praised For Presentation at Trial Scene From Saint Joan

Ottawa, April 26. (CP). — Two teams from Canada and one from Ottawa will provide tonight's donations Dominion Drama Festival, leaving half a dozen plays for presentation Saturday afternoon and evening.

The Adjudicator said the London night praised highly presentations by the Vancouver Embassy Players of the trial scene from George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" and the London Community Drama Guild's performance of "St. Simeon Stylites" by F. Sladen-Smith.

he Adjudicator said the London group was "delightful" in its presentation of the story of St. Simeon, fifth century saint, who believed he must explain his sins by sitting atop a big pillar outside Antioch.

The saint was perched on the column against a backdrop of robins-egg blue sky, which darkened as the story progressed. St. Simeon disgruntled at interruptions of his visitors, poured forth his wisdom and protest with energy to the amusement of the audience.

Mr. Ward credited the Cobourg, Ont., Dramatic Club with consistently courage in its presentation of "Smoke Screens" the story of a divorced mother's somewhat muddled love for her daughter. He said the subtlety of the play made it difficult to put across but added, "it was good to see a straightforward and honest manner."

Col. H. C. Osborne, Honorary Director of the festival, said no foundation existed for rumours which had appeared in a Toronto newspaper that scenery used by the Playmore Club of Toronto in Marjorie Price's "God Caesar," and in the Toronto Masquers Club's presentation of "And so to Bed" which will be seen tonight, was lavish and expensive.

He said the charge that the two clubs had spent considerable money on the sets they used in the regional productions in order to force their way into the finals was unjust, and that the scenery in fact had cost little.

The Toronto Hart House group, which won the Bessborough Trophy, highest award of the festival last year, will play "His Widow's Husband" by Jacinto Benavente tonight. The remaining plays will be the Ottawa Drama League's production of "Fantastic Flight" by Sewell Stokes; the Toronto Masquers "And so to Bed" by J. B. Fagan.

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

WEAKENED after his long illness, King George, who on May 6 this year celebrates the 25th anniversary of his ascension to the throne of the greatest empire in history, was forced to turn over many official duties to his four popular sons.

In particular, the Prince of Wales took a more active part in affairs of state and seldom left the home fires for long, after his father's illness. Should death claim the monarch of a troubled empire aged King George and more and more it was noticed that he was forced to take long periods of rest. For the past few weeks both the King and the Queen retired for a vacation to store up strength for the arduous Silver Jubilee celebrations which commemorate on May 6, with a large thanksgiving ceremony to be held at St. Paul's Cathedral all during May, June and July. Many special ceremonies galore for the royal family to attend and they will need all the stamina they are famous for to retain their health.

PAREGORIC: CODEIN USED BY ADDICTS

Health Conference Hears of T. B. Ravages in Indians

Ottawa, April 26 (CP)—Restrictions placed on the sale of narcotics and morphine had driven drug addicts in Canada to paregoric, Col. G. E. H. Sharman, chief of the narcotics section of the National Health Department, told the Dominion-Provincial Health Conference today. After similar restrictions had been imposed on paregoric the drug addicts took to codein.

Last September Canada had been asked at the League of Nations why this country's consumption of codein was the highest in the world. It was 109 kilos per 1,000,000 inhabitants. The nearest to Canada was France with 107 kilos. In the United States consumption was 32 kilos, in Great Britain 11 and in Australia four.

Found Too Late

"I suppose your situation with regard to the drug addict is the same as ours with cancer cases," said Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Public Health. "You don't get them until it is too late."

Following medical action by the League of Nations the situation regarding these drugs would be greatly improved, and the next six months would show considerable improvement.

Twenty-five per cent of the deaths from tuberculosis in British Columbia came from 2.5 percent of the population—the Indians, Dr. G. Weir Procival Medical Officer of Public Health, told the conference. The Indians had not attained immunity to the disease.

How T.B. Spreads

The circulation among the white residents of the Provinces was a menace. They went from house to house selling moccasins and beadwork and also engaged in the berry-picking. Dr. Weir suggested this spread the disease, and should be regulated.

The services of a travelling diagnostic equipped with a small prophylactory unit to investigate epidemics of tuberculosis among the Indians was recommended by Hon. T. M. Uhrich, Minister of Public Health for Saskatchewan. He also urged the removal of children with tuberculosis lesions from schools attended by healthy children, and segregation in separate schools.

Potential Spreaders

Hon. T. G. Murphy, Minister of the Interior, said the government was endeavouring to establish the extent and magnitude of the problem of tuberculosis among the Indians. It would be the purpose of the department to get potential spreaders out of the schools. However, it had to be borne in mind to send a "cured" Indian back to his primitive surroundings was a "pretty hopeless situation" so far as permanency of improvement was concerned.

A travelling diagnostician would shortly be appointed in British Columbia, said Dr. H. W. McGill, Deputy Minister.

Bridge Street Auxiliary Hold Easter Thank-Offering Service

The Easter Thank-Offering meeting of the Bridge Street Auxiliary of the W.M.S. was held on Wednesday evening in the Church Hall. Mrs. Semple, the President, presided and conducted a helpful Easter service of worship in which Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, Mrs. W. H. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Wm. Bateman and Mrs. while Meadows Sparling, Fred Hepburn and Miss Ethel Brown and Reddick rendered a much appreciated duet.

The guest speaker was Mrs. A. N. Burns of Toronto, member of the Executive Board. Mrs. Burns based her address on two passages of Scripture found in the 32nd and 39th chapters of Matthew "What think ye of Christ?" and "To what purpose is this waste?"

Mrs. Burns believes that our attitude towards Christ depends on how we in our hearts, answer this question. If Christ occupies the first place in our lives then God will His great missionary enterprise be of vast importance to us.

It required a visit to India, where he had an opportunity to compare her father, Mr. W. Russell in Glasgow, Scotland.

Those who attended the Easter Sunday service conducted by Bethany choir on Good Friday evening were delighted with the program consisted of two piano solos by Misses Beatrice Breen and Ruth Clarke, two violin solos by Mr. Faulkner and two vocal solos by Mrs. Mabel Breen, also a vocal solo by Mr.. Bruce Martin. "Open Wide the Gates of the Temple" by Merrick gave an Easter Talk, mentioning the Easter Lily which took place each day for a week before the First Easter. The cantata, "The Easter Gift" was given by the full choir. Mrs. Bruce Martin read the story of the gift of each verse with others. By illustrations from the different events of the story of that Easter long ago.

Miss Helen Jones is visiting her parents at Stirling during the Easter vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Sine, Frankford, were entertained to tea Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bateman.

STRIKERS REFUSE TO TAKE WORK

Burst of Song By Children Marks Friday's Quiet Time

Crowland, Ont., April 27 (CP).—A quiet spot in Crowland relief strikers Friday stubbornly refused to return to work on the Beaver Street sewer project after Inspector Chris. Airey of Niagara Falls, Ont., declared it unsafe. Lefty, ordered police protection.

It was a quieter crowd—and a smaller one—which greeted the squad of 34 police as they arrived at Beaver Street to protect any desiring to work on the sewer project, closed down Friday.

Burst of Song by Children

Beyond a brief burst of song by a few children the crowd contented itself with a murmuring sort of watchfulness. It centred from a nearby factory cast a yellowish cloud over the scene. Inspector Airey led his detachment of Provincial police to the head of a shallow ditch called the sewer project.

Following Thursday's procedure police lined either bank of the ditch. Mr. Inspector and township road foreman. Tom Disher, asked if anyone wished to work. Silence. Then a "no," but not as vociferous as Thursday afternoon.

The procedure was repeated Friday afternoon and today; in fact Inspector Airey did not know how long it would continue.

The crowd grew intense at one point as a lone man, Alfred Tkocovitch, said he was willing to work. Didn't get him a spade but he refused, wanting to know what he would be working for.

WEEK-END NEWS OF 4TH THURLOW

4th Thurlow — Church service was well attended on Easter Sunday by Rev. Merrick gave an inspiring Easter sermon to the congregation.

TEACHING OF FRENCH

Possibility that the teaching of French may pass as a compulsory subject in the schools of Ontario in the case of high school and collegiate students who are not planning to attend a university, has stirred considerable discussion especially in Quebec. Montreal Gazette voiced surprise that such action should be given even the shadow of official sanction, muchless adoption, as there has been evident a desire to extend the knowledge of French in Canada by sending teachers into Quebec, to live among and learn from the French-speaking people. It points out that this experience has been not only to the advantage of the teacher but also to the improvement of relations between the two races.

Canada is a country of two languages officially and to many it must seem strange if the teaching of French is removed from the list of compulsory subjects. If complaint is made that French as taught in Ontario does not train the student to speak French, the time that a better system is adopted, the Gazette says.

Those who went through the schools years ago remember that they took three or four languages in addition to English. Many of them feel that they would not like to part with that knowledge even in this matter-of-fact and scientific age for the value of the culture which foreign tongues bring.

The slaughter of the language goes on apace. Hebrew is getting to be almost a dead letter in the colleges. Greek attracts few and German very few since the war. Latin, they say, will likely be placed on the optional list and French with it.

Everything today seems in a flux and there is just a possibility that some things which have real value in training may be thrown into the discard.

Education is endeavoring to become practical in that girls and boys for life, even though the economic machine fails to offer them jobs. Science will more and more attract youth. It is to be noted, however, that the institution in French will be maintained in the universities. The reason is clear—France is one of the leading nations of the world with a literature and science which make it impossible for the real student of affairs and scientific progress not to be alert to the latest developments in France. As a matter of fact there must be sympathy for French and other tongues and the culture of the various races. Universities will not put up with a narrowing of culture by intimacy through language and literature, and writings in foreign tongues.

The educational question is one of the big problems of this day. No one believes the present curriculum gets the maximum of results. So much of school training is forgotten as soon as the student leaves school and undoubtedly not enough of the benefit of discipline remains.

HEALTH PROBLEMS

Compulsory medical examination annually may be enacted by law in Canada to improve the health of the people and so lower the burden of illness with its attendant cost. This idea was promoted at the Dominion-Provincial Health Conference which has been meeting in Ottawa.

Emphasis was placed on the importance of periodical examination which will result in warding off of diseases or checking signs of weaknesses which are developing.

Another matter brought out at the conference was the cancer-fear of many people who allow valuable time to be lost in fear of going to a medical examiner to ascertain if there is trouble.

It is beginning to look as if the old Chinese idea is not so far wrong—of paying a doctor for keeping a man well and leave him without pay when his patient gets ill. Ill patients are less able to pay than well ones. That is natural.

Something new in the management of medical services may be expected in the not-distant future, it would appear. Under the present system many, who might be spared long lives, delay going to a competent medical authority until a long time has passed.

Sharing of the burden for the benefit of the whole of society seems to be the main object of the social movements.

Opposition may develop to compulsory examination by persons who make a protest on the grounds of liberty, but the most of the people once they got the fear of an examination out of their minds may be only too pleased to be put in the way of advice and information invaluable from the standpoint of health.

To wait for a doctor until one is so sick one cannot hold one's head up is a grave mistake. It is well to have the medical attention in case of sudden illness, but there are so many maladies which lurk in the background often a long time before they manifest themselves so patently that the individual cannot help but feel that there is something wrong.

SCRAPPING WOODEN COACHES

President S. J. Hungerford of the Canadian National Railways proposes scrapping thousands of wooden coaches, counted in the equipment of the railway and it is to be hoped that some means may be found of carrying out his recommendations. Every railway accident in which wooden coaches are involved demonstrates their danger, compared to the modern steel coaches. It is noted by Mr. Hungerford that other railways refuse to give interchange facilities for them. Replacing them with modern coaches would give employment to thousands of men, something worthwhile these days, as well as removing a railway hazard.—Niagara Falls Review.

BURGLARS OUT OF PLACE

In the play "What Every Woman Knows," an ambitious but egotistical and not very bright young man breaks into a house for the purpose of carrying on his studies, and eventually marries the clever young woman of the household. This is commonly regarded as an amusing fantasy. But now comes the fact. A burglar in England was caught because he picked up and began to read a book which made such an impression on him that he burst into tears and cried himself to sleep in the armchair. Another burglar, in Cairo, wasted time by giving himself a hot bath on the premises he had entered. By the time he was washed and dressed, a policeman was waiting for him.

We are far from holding up these actions as examples. Yet we think the offenders deserved lenient treatment. They do not seem to be marked out for a criminal career. One was not only studious but soft-hearted, while the worst type of criminal is soft-headed and hard of heart. If he breaks into tears it is usually over his own miserable plight, not over those Oliver Twist or Little Nell. But there is evidently hope for a burglar who wants only what he could find in a free library. The other fellow's desire was equally laudable. He had a passion for physical cleanliness, which is at least akin to cleanliness of soul. Of course it would not do to encourage these methods. Any householder would naturally be alarmed and annoyed by the presence of a burglar, however clean, in his bathroom. In both cases the intruders seem to have chosen the wrong profession.—London Advertiser.

MINERAL VALUES

Despite the low prices generally prevailing for base metals, in no previous year has the Canadian output been so great. Nickel production surpassed that of 1929, the previous record year; lead output exceeded the record established in 1928 and copper and zinc the high level of 1930. Production of metals in the platinum group was much larger than any former annual Canadian output. All minerals produced in Canada during 1934 had an aggregate value of $277,500,000 as compared with $224,000,000 in 1933. In only two previous years, 1929 and 1930, has this total been exceeded. Canadian gold producers continued to concentrate on low grade ore, but the amount of actual gold recovered, 2,969,680 fine ounces, was somewhat greater than in 1933. With the premium being paid, values were higher than ever before and reached a total of $102,500,000 as compared with $85,000,000 in 1933. Operations have been well maintained this year.—St. Thomas Times Journal.

SMALL AIRWORTHY MOTOR

To further development of small airworthy planes for the novice pilot, an aircraft engine only 20 inches in diameter but which will develop 90 horsepower, has been ordered by the Bureau of Air Commerce from the Continental Motors Corporation of Detroit. Its weight, according to the contract award, will not exceed two pounds per horsepower.

The engine is a radial, six-cylinder plant and will operate on the two-stroke cycle which gives a powe impulse from each cylinder every revolution. The ordinary aircraft and automobile engine gives a power impulse in each cylinder every other revolution. Thus the new engine will have as many power explosions per revolution as a 12-cylinder four-stroke power plant.

Prosperity is the touchstone of virtue; it is less difficult to bear misfortune than to remain uncorrupted by pleasure.—Tacitus.

They who lie soft and warm in a rich estate seldom come to heat themselves at the altar.—South.

The genius, wit and spirit of a nation are discovered in its proverbs.—Bacon.

Proverbs are said to be the abridgements of wisdom.—Joubert.

Proverbs were interior to books, and formed the wisdom of the vulgar, and in the earliest ages were the unwritten laws of morality.—Disraeli.

It is the old lesson—a worthy purpose, patience, energy for its accomplishment, a resoluteness undaunted by difficulties and then success.—W. M. Punshon.

TO A YOUTH

You have started,
Eager-hearted,
Mile on mile,
As you meet life.
Then, lad, great life
With a smile.

Though you be weary,
Still be cheery
At each test;
Keep on groping,
Keep on hoping
For the best.

Cares that meet you,
Can't defeat you,
If you still
Let no morrow's
Griefs or sorrows,
Break your will.

Nothing new here,
But all true, dear;
You will find
You can take life
Now, and make life
Sweet and kind!

CRIPPLED CHILDREN the world over will benefit from the $1,000,000 expected to be raised by an exhibition-tour of a $435,000 quad-house, owned by Colleen Moore, a motion-picture actress. The tour, which will take in a three-year schedule, and embrace every important city in the United States and abroad, began in New York City, last week, where a fee of ten cents was charged. From the beginning, children had little chance. Adults swarmed around and over the amazing miniature.

Apart from its cost, the house is made notable by those who contributed to its construction and decoration. Artists who painted miniatures, ceiling frescoes, and designed minute tapestries included James Montgomery Flagg, Willy Pogany, Alice O'Neill, Leon Gordon, Elizabeth Barrett.

Fired by the enthusiasm of the artists, famed writers asked permission to write "first and only" miniature editions for the library of the house. These volumes, about an inch tall, are written by hand in microscopic script and include items from Conan Doyle, Hendrik van Loon, Edna Ferber, Joseph Hergesheimer, Louis Bromfield, Irvin S. Cobb, Sinclair Lewis, Gene Fowler, Kathleen Norris, Jim Tully, Elinor Glyn, Rupert Hughes, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Thos. Sancher Winslow, Warner Fabian, Fannie Hurst, Booth Tarkington, and others.

The castle-like house by nine feet and fourteen feet high, was nine years in the making. It began as a small doll-house for Miss Moore's own pleasure.

Excluding rivets, the house contains 200,000 pieces, and is so exactly practical as to have gardens, singing birds, and running water. Secret chambers, oddities of design, and such natural extravagances as one showing Noah suffering from a hangover give the structure some piquancy which the owner never considered when she ordered the castle built.

Snags encountered by the designers included no great desire by Soviet craftsmen in enamel to decorate a prince's bedroom. The walls of brownie were pitted for the enamelled surface, but when the craftsmen of the U.S.S.R. learned that the room was to be that of a doll-prince, they declined the opportunity. California enamelers, less resistant to royalty, finished the room.

The mistress was giving the new maid, fresh from the country, a list of household requirements.

"There you are, Alice," she said, and then suddenly remembered an item she had almost forgotten: "Oh—er—don't forget we shall want a new griller for the kitchen, too."

Alice slared vacantly.

"Don't you know what a griller is?" asked the other, sharply.

"I should think I do," replied the maid, significantly. "It's a big hairy monkey, the size of a man. And if you want one of those in your kitchen, I'm leaving at once."

"Willie," said the doting aunt, holding her nephew close to her, "tell me who you like the best—your mother, your father, or me?"

Willie squirmed to get away. "I don't want to tell," he said; "it's too near my birthday."

The town boomed for nearly fifty years of the late Mr. Henry Corby, M.P.P., but is getting town down. Since its erection it has been one of the landmarks at the corner of Bridge and George streets. We have heard the old-timers inhabitants of the city tell of the time when Mr. Corby built his house about the year 1850 it was thought that he was building out in the country and he was asked why he did not go to Shannonville while he was at it. But Mr. Corby was a far-seeing man and soon merchant after merchant whose home had hitherto been over his store, followed suit, and to these pioneer Bridge street settlers done the city owe much of the beauty of large street. The carpenter work of those days was done chiefly by hand, and Mr. William Brennan, who has always maintained the highest reputation for doing honest work, points with pardonable pride to the window sash and blinds being taken down today as his handiwork after completing his apprenticeship forty-five years ago. After all those years they look as good nearly as the day Mr. Brennan put them up.

MEN'S CLUB HOLDS CLOSING MEETING

Arthur Morrow, Formerly of Stirling, is Guest Speaker

Stirling, April 27—On Wednesday evening St. John's Men's Club held their closing meeting in the form of a banquet given in their club room. Mr. Arthur Morrow, a fine-ing old boy who is now a member of the teaching staff of Barrie Collegiate was the guest speaker, and a fine group of varied numbers made up the balance of a very interesting program.

The gentlemen took their places at the table at nine o'clock, and the President, Mr. Earl Morrow, acting in the capacity of chairman called on Mr. W. Dunn, Secretary, for his report. The Treasurer's report followed, showing the club to be in excellent financial standing. The supper committee then fulfilled its obligations in providing the fine display of wholesome food which made up the menu. Mr. H. Cook, Walter Wright and J. B. Belshaw, comprising the committee, did an excellent job in arranging tables and food with as little confusion as possible.

After the supper the first number on the program was the toast to the King. Following this the gathering greatly enjoyed a group of selections by Mr. Harding. Old time songs were well given by Mr. Harding who played his own guitar accompaniment. Mr. George Bailey was present with a fine collection of curios. Most interesting ones were on display, the beads and weapons of stone used by the Indians who once roamed through the wooded land which is now known as Hawdon and Sidney townships. Some of those present were surprised to learn that articles of great value in this collection had been found on their own premises, such as stone, flint, knives, and many other things which have been dug up. Mr. Bailey carefully explained their uses in an interesting way. Mr. Bailey's entire collection will occupy some fifteen hundred pieces.

Mr. Ellis was next called on to propose a toast to the Church. In this he did. His subject was the problems faced by the clergy, particularly in the smaller communities. Their task was a difficult one in this emergency virtue. "In proposing such a toast," said Mr. Ellis, "it is only fitting to couple with it those pioneers who, through hardship and sacrifice had laid the foundation of the church of which we form a part. We owe it to them to go on to greater things." In responding to this toast, Rev. A. S. McConnell stated that while the toast was made to the universal church, it would be well for those present to observe the fact that the branch of which they formed a part was entering upon its seventy-fifth anniversary. He then gave a short talk on the history of St. John's Church, founded in the year 1874 by Rev. Green who conducted service in the old Town Hall. He was succeeded by Rev. Preston who was instrumental in starting the building which now stands. The talk was interesting and educational.

At this time the guest speaker was introduced by the President.

Mr. Arthur Morrow brought greetings from the men's club of Barrie, which organization was going forward in a flourishing manner. "There are many things on which a man may speak in our present day," Mr. Morrow stated, "we as a people have a right to be proud of things we should be proud of. Schools, churches, homes, and all mechanical devices for every modern convenience. But the great thing we can aspire to is character, which can only be constructed properly through the co-operation of the first three mentioned." Since St. John's was about to celebrate an anniversary, Mr. Morrow chose to speak on the preparation now under way at Barrie, where the Anglican Church, of which he is a member is to celebrate its 100th anniversary. He offered many suggestions whereby the men's club could have a very important part in the work of the church. "It is essential for such a fine club as St. John's to have an objective, no matter what it is, it creates interest on the part of its membership to know that they are part of a machine that is in operation. It is the life of the club."

The members of the club deeply appreciated the helpful hints delivered by the speaker. Mr. B. Bedford proposed a toast to the Men's Association which was responded to by Mr. W. Heath in a fine manner. The visitors on this occasion were Mr. C. F. Linn, Mr. James Fitzpatrick, and Mr. Arthur Dunbar. Three gentlemen were welcomed individually by the President, and each expressed his pleasure in his present visit. This very successful meeting closed with Rev. A. S. McConnell pronouncing the Benediction.

St. John's Church Stirling

Good Friday was observed in St. John's Church with the Anle-Communion Service at ten a.m. followed by an address on The Last Words from the Cross, by the rector, Rev. Canon Ellis. On Easter day, Holy Communion was celebrated at 7.30 a.m. and 9.30 a.m. with the rector, Rev. A. S. McConnell, L.Th., being celebrant at both services. At the Choral Celebration at 11.30 a.m. a large choir assisted in the special Easter Music. At 7.00 p.m., Evensong took the form of a children's service, a large congregation of both parents and children being present. At this service the children presented their Lenten Mite Boxes and listened to a special Easter address. Mrs. H. F. Ellis made a splendid contribution to the service with her rendition of the sacred solo, "Oh, Eyes That are Weary." Mrs. H. H. Alger assisted at the organ at all these services.

Car Accident on Belleville Marmora Road

Four people narrowly escaped injury on Wednesday night when the car in which they were travelling turned completely over. The car, a new Ford V8, owned and operated by Mr. Harry Heath got out of control when the driver, trying to avoid a soft spot in the road struck a large stone and threw it into. It veered to the soft shoulder and rolled over the embankment. With Mr. Heath in the car were his son William, his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Adams, (nee Elspeth Heath). Mr. Heath suffered cuts and bruises about the face. Mrs. Adams received injuries to her back. Mr. Adams, a severe cut on the head. William escaped uninjured though suffering from shock. The unfortunate victims were brought to the office of Dr. Pedley for treatment. The car was badly damaged and was towed to a local garage.

Mr. Frank J. Gould of the Royal Bank, Dunnville, was an Easter guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Gould.

Dr E. A. Carleton is spending a few days with his father at Roslin. His many friends will be glad to learn that he is rapidly recovering from his recent operation and expects to resume his practice about the first of May.

ITALIAN LINER DAMAGED IN ICE

Sealing Ship Rushes to Waters Off Newfoundland

St. John's, Nfld., April 27 (C. P. Cable).—Her stem badly damaged in the ice field 150 miles off Newfoundland, the Italian steamship Titania is reported she needed immediate assistance from an icebreaker Friday. The sealing ship Imogene, commanded by Captain Wes Kean, was rushing under full steam towards the scene from here.

The message received indicated the Titania, 4,900 tons, had been seriously damaged in other parts of the hull and probably could only be assisted by an icebreaker.

It was estimated the Imogene would require from 12 to 15 hours to reach the scene.

British Bacon Quota Costly to Consumer

London, April 27 (CP Cable)—The British bacon quota scheme is sharply indicted in a report released yesterday by the produce section of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce. The quota has been in operation for two years.

It has been, the report says, costly to the consumer out of all proportion to its benefit to the home producers. It has put an unexpected subsidy into the pockets of the foreign producer.

THE WORLD'S MOST IDYLLIC ISLE

On a Pacific island, two miles long, and one mile wide, the world's greatest eugenics experiment is taking place. Out of two races, a third race is being born.

One hundred and forty-six years ago a mutinees lookout man on the commandeered British ship Bounty, set up a shout of "Land ho." Fletcher Christian, lieutenant in the navy of George III, led his men ashore on to the semi-tropical paradise that was named Pitcairn Island. There were nine Englishmen and twelve Tahitian women.

From this group there have been 1,000 descendants, most of whom have migrated to other islands. The remaining 200 live an idyllic simple life close to nature on Pitcairn Island. They have become closely inbred throughout the years and everyone on the island is related and at least a cousin. The inbreeding has done no observable harm. A new white race is being evolved from the fusion of the white race and the polynesian. The offspring are healthy and happy folk, bright and intelligent. They speak a mixture of English and Tahitian.

Head of the island's semi-communistic government is Parkin Christian (INSET ABOVE), great-grandson of the founder.

These pictures were taken by the Templeton Crocker-American Museum Pacific expedition on the two-masted schooner Zaca. The show (TOP), three large row boats at the landing place in Bounty Bay. They are the common property of the community and are well filled when they go out to greet the seldom-anchored visiting mail ships. Mrs. Geo. E. Foster, 134 Albert Street, returned to the city yesterday following a delightful and lengthy period of convalescing in the Toronto General Hospital. Mrs. Foster was transported to Belleville in the Martin Ambulance and is reported as progressing rapidly since her operation.

Weddings

PHILLIPS—HODGENS

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Plainfield United Church Parsonage, Saturday, April 27th, at ten o'clock when Miss Mabel Hodgens, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. Ernest Hodgens, of Latta, became the bride of Wellington B. Phillips, son of H. J. Allin, Chairman of the Supply Committee and passed at the registry meeting of the Board of Education last evening.

During 1935 an estimated expenditure of $6,500.00 will be required to run the four public schools and $5,000 for the Collegiate and Vocational. The total amount will be disbursed as follows:

Public Schools

YOUNG—HILL

A quiet, but interesting wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Shannonville, Saturday, April 27th, when Helen Marie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Hill and Mrs. Hill was united in marriage to Mr. Alexander Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Young, Langside, Chapeau, Quebec. Rev. Canon Bedford of the Church of the Redeemer, Deseronto, officiated.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, entered the living room which was tastefully decorated with palms, ferns and Spring flowers, as Lohengrin's bridal March was played by Miss Irene Russell of Belleville. The bride's gown was of white satin and honey beige lace fashioned on Princess lines with accessories in harmonizing shades and carried a sheaf of Talisman roses. Miss Dorothy Fraser, friend of the bride, as flower girl, in a pale coral crepe de chine frock carried a colonial bouquet of forget-me-nots.

The bride's mother wore a black crepe dress with corsage of white accents of white and wore a corsage of lily-of-the-valley.

After a dainty buffet luncheon the bride and groom left for Montreal and other points on the drive, the bride travelling in an ensemble of navy tree bark crepe with navy and white accessories.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Young will reside in Toronto.

CHAMBERS—POST

A very charming event took place on Wednesday, April 24th, 1935, at 11 o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Post, Kildonan, when, under their only daughter, Lada Lauretta, became the bride of Clifford Wesley, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Chambers, also of Kildonan.

The bride looked in a white satin gown, with veil and carrying a beautiful bouquet of Bridal roses and ferns, as she entered the drawing room on the arm of her brother, Mr. Alvin Post, to the strains of wedding music from Lohengrin, played by Mr. Vernon Strebe, and took her place under an arch of evergreens, decorated with white bells and the usual very tall vases with potted plants.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. J. Fletcher, of Eldorado.

The young couple were unattended. During the signing of the register, Miss Elsie Post, a friend of the bride, sang very sweetly, "When Your Heart Is Young." Miss Post was accompanied by Mr. Vernon Strebe.

After the ceremony some sixty-five guests returned to the dining room where was prepared a very lovely wedding lunch; those serving were friends of the bride, Misses Elsie Post, Gladys Martin, Genevieve Holland, Freda McKean and Grace Robinson and were all dressed in white.

Miss Lamoine Post, little niece of the bride, acted as flower girl, she was dressed in a yellow silk dress and carried a basket of red and white petals.

Mrs. John Chambers, mother of the groom, and Mrs. Manley Post, mother of the bride, received the guests. Mrs. Chambers was gowned in a beautiful navy blue crepe and Mrs. Post was attired in a brown crepe trimmed with satin.

The groom's gift to the bride was a sterling silver necklace; to the flower girl, a brooch; and to the organist a belt buckle and chain to match.

Later in the afternoon the bride and groom left on an extended trip by Whitby and Toronto, the bride travelling in a brown flecked swagger suit, with accessories to match. Later the young couple will take up residence on the groom's farm at Mount Pleasant, Ontario.

Among the guests from a distance were: Mrs. Mary Burgess, Madoc; Mr. Elisha Post, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Long and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Post of Malone; Mr. and Mrs. Alger Post and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Post, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Fox, Wooler, and Mr. Kenneth Rolnes of Stirling.

Fees Reduced

Contained in the report of estimated expenditures was a report that the Board had adopted a resolution of the regular Supply Committee to deal with the Fee Sys and that item in the Public Schools. On the motion of Trustee Graves it was seconded by Trustee C. J. Harrison it was decided to advise principals of the schools that the collection of fees for the remainder of the year be discontinued, that the fees be reduced for the next school year, beginning September 3rd, 1935 as the following schedule.

.50c for Primer; .60c for First Book; .75c for Second Book; .75c for Third Book and .75c for Fourth Book, and that a notice be sent advising parents of the fact. This also was passed by the Board.

In speaking of the satisfactory working of the system during the past term Trustee Allin pointed out that the principals of all schools had spoken very highly in its favor and had declared themselves satisfied with its operation during the past three years. In view of their knowledge it had given universal satisfaction, added the chairman.

DERBY CANDIDATES

Louisville, Ky., April 27. — Turf followers who have developed Economia trying to figure the winner of the sixty-first running of the Kentucky Derby are looking to the south race as Churchill Downs tomorrow to provide a basis for prediction on the outcome of the classic.

Ten derby eligibles, trained here including Chance Sun, the favorite, were entered today for this race at Churchill Downs, Inc., a non-profit corporation. Chance Sun will carry top weight, 118 pounds.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Anne slid along the path between the shrubs, closing her mind to everything except the feel of the garden. A mother-bird on the other side of the shrubs was flying away voluminously, rustling the leaves and flapping her wings in alarm. Anne's breath in the shrub border just ahead. Anne stepped through, thinking she might catch sight of the sharp-tongued little bundle of fur, she was enchanted at delight. How lovely. She was in a tiny patio walled with green, paved with mossy green tiles. In the centre a white urn reared its graceful shape to catch the drops of a tiny fountain—a birdbath. Perhaps the mother-bird had been marshalling her young to their daily dip.

"The quiet was broken by voices, one was coming along the path. Soon she could hear every word, spoken distinctly.

"You might have known she'd try to bag you, one way or another, Pincus Hill," Vronsky was saying away. You picture her, I can't suppose the Easter rabbit will lay colored eggs for you, too." The gruff voice shrouded laugh that was not a laugh but a scoff. The girl in the white tuxedo. Only now she'd be wearing slacks and a white knitted flannel jacket. She was the sole companion of Vronsky's precious that had first descended upon Bois Joli.

"Well, then, what's she doing working the mines? She acted as if she'd just been hatched out of a convent, Pulling that innocent stuff on me, and a chaperon to see she got home safely. Ugh!" The girl's voice was Dolph's rumbling and peevish.

"Maybe she was acting a part, at that. They'll probably split whatever they can pry out of you sixty-forty," Vronsky's voice had the cold blue eyes and no eardrums would know that. "Maybe it's to fall for you, Dolph. Didn't you look at her? Or did you just close your eyes and pull her out of a dark hole?"

Anne stood still. Should she step boldly out on the path? Or was she need hear no more of whatever it was they were saying about her? Then? But she had heard. Enough. Too much. Unwillingly, she was a partner in a business deal that had to be left covered. Some ugly business concerning the mines. She had had cause to wish her anywhere but in Bois Joli. Dolph and Yvonne, the wispy blonde in the black lace dress.

"I met her at Tony's with a fellow I know. She fell for me right off the reel. Didn't let a date and let me take her home."

"Didn't she? Didn't that mean anything to you? Maybe you didn't think it was your fatal beauty got her!"

"Yeah! Well this one happens to be barking up the wrong tree. She won't get a cent from me. Not a red. She can't prove anything. I never wrote her a line, not a line. I make it a practice to forget over 'em. Bitten by a fox, huh?" Anne picture Dolph's cheeks reddening and jiggling, the little black button eyes glaring.

"I don't think you were ever even nipped by a fox," was the blunt comment of the betrayed girl whose name was Zhilyn, but who was Secretary . . .

"Whadda you umean? She hasn't got anything on me, Bill, old dear. What is there for her to have?"

"How far did you ride with her when you took her home? Was it to the door?"

"Charleston. She cried, so I had to. That's just go to do with it!"

"Did you buy her ticket, state-room and all that?"

"Sure I did. What do you think she'd buy it with, baloney?"

"Then," Vronsky's voice Sanda Claus, if you weren't such a conceited ass, you'd see what a trick called the Mann Act?"

There was a smothered squeal of rage. Anne recoiled. At the same moment a stray breeze stirred the shrubs and a spray of water from the tiny fountain into a rainbow, lifting Anne's cap from her head and whirled it through an aperture into the path.

Silence for a minute. Dead silence. Then the crunch of shell beneath a heavy body and Dolph stood inside the patio, the girl close behind him.

"So it's you!" His head was rolling, his shoulders were bunched. "Spying! Dirty little sneak! That's you. Nobody's gonna spy on me and get away with it."

"Cut it!" Bill strode forward, thrust Dolph aside with a sweep of her brown capable hand. "What are you doing here" she demanded of Anne.

"I came out into the garden—I'd finished my work—this part is open to the servants." Anne, taken by surprise, was stammering.

"Were you here when we came along the path?"

"Before you came, I've been here watching the birds, and the flowers."

"Yeah! I'll bet—birds and fountain." Dolph jeered. "Watching to see what you could pick up. Carry it back to headquarters, huh, and get a rap on the knuckles. A day off, huh, so you can pick up men on the beaches. The one that chimed you out of his car on the corner. I'll fix you. You won't pick up—"

"Dolph!" Bill's voice said, stop rapping!" Biff's scorn had the effect of a slap. "Get back about your dear!" to Anne.

Dolph thought the wall, was cold and small. Dolph had seen her with Craig Braden, had seen her get out of the car at the corner. To him she was the sort who pick up men on streets, who get dumped out of cars on street corners—no she was not a lady, not like She was a torch! A torch flame, mounting, mounting, sending out licking little tongues of . . .

"I heard—enough," she said, quietly. "Dear—keep your head. It couldn't help hearing. You were talking so that your voices carried."

"Why didn't you let us know you were here?" The girl threw water on the flame.

Anne's mind was drumming. "I should have let you know—how should have. I'd no right to go on hearing. If I'd come out on the path when I first heard them—if I hadn't been afraid Dolph would try to hurt me—Oh, what I wrong with me! Why must I always be hurting people, fighting them, making them hate me?"

"Don't be foolish," she said, staring hard at Dolph. Certainly he would understand. He would know why she had chosen to keep out of his path. She miscalculated the wisdom of the girl. The girl caught the message in Anne's eyes—added to it the unreasoning rage, the reticent anger of Dolph . . .

"I'll get to forget it," Anne said, earnestly. "I want to forget anything that had to do with Dolph, him."

"Where you are." The girl's broad hand clasped Dolph soundly on the shoulder. "She's glad to forget you, can't expect more. Fatal beauty, to know 'em all prostrate. Dolph, old cake."

"I don't believe her. She was spying. She's a dirty little sneak!" Dolph went on unheeding although he knew he was losing ground.

"Oh, for the love of mercy here," Dolphus, chuck the whines and let's move on. She's not going to report your goings to market, and even if she did, there's nothing you can do about it now. Be a sport and let's get on. Let's go back to the others. I've got a thirst all the way to my toes."

"She 'thirst' moved Dolph, as the girl knew it would, like a powerful magnet. He turned and scuffed out the path beside Anne.

"I trust you to keep your word, to forget what you've heard," the girl said to Anne.

"I've already forgotten," Anne's chin was high. She moved away, dabbing her fingers in the cool spray of the bubble bowl until the girl had gone.

When she thought that Dolph and the betrousered girl had had time to reach the house, she retraced her steps, slowly, using the garden path.

Once she had gained her own room she shut the door, locked and tried it to make certain she was secure against pursuit. Then she laughed, but the sound was that of a sob. Silly! Locking the door when there was no one to enter. But What was the matter with her? Sob after sob racked her, with no least to ease the pain. She sobbed without thinking what she was sobbing about, without thinking at all. Finally, worn out, she walked to the window and looked out over the garden. It smiled back at her, golden and glowing in the late afternoon sunshine.

Who was she? Certainly not the Anne Austin of a few months ago. What transmutation of body, of soul had gone on within her, that Anne she was antagonistic to her whole world. That antagonism was individualistic and centred in herself she did not question. For surely she could not be the only person in that every other self in this new and bewildering world was engaged in plotting and working to defeat her. That only she was straight: and true?

She must accept Carl and Bats and Craig and Dolph as representative and understanding Phoebe Prime at his employment office, and Vronsky who had risked a fat commission by entrusting her with this job and who had been kind to her. She was very confident. Yes, Carl and Bats and Phoebe were exempted from the antagonism she was giving off as waves. Perhaps Craig Braden, too, to keep themselves safe in the midst of it. And even Carl and Bats and Phoebe must have had their trials, but managed to stir up between others and herself was so continuous it must be entirely one-sided. Eventually they too would come to doubt that all the world hated them and believe in her tumbling world was to be free of them, that their will, their determination to bend her to them. All the world was to serve and save Anne, and even Thea's is a little bit queer." That is what she was asking Carl and Bats and Phoebe to believe.

Well, they wouldn't. She couldn't expect it of them.

Soon she'd be alone, her every thought about her ears, burying her deep in the midst of it.

Heavens, what had she been thinking of! Bats had told her to be back at four, and it was after four, and she had her cap to mend. At four o'clock, Anne was at the door of Madame's boudoir. A cloud was gathering again, black and menacing, threatening. She ought to know about the evening wrapper, she had not seen Madame's "creates" because she would not let the saleswoman dictate to her!

CHAPTER NINETEEN

"Pick out some carpet rags that don't look like I was wearing 'em to a wake, Fifi," Madame ordered. "I'm dying down to Manny with the kid and I want to look as though there was life in the old girl yet. And help Bats pack my bag. We're gonna stay all night. But in a wrap I've got something that'll knock sides style—some warmth. That ex-burglar Bats—been wraps you went to see this morning——"

Anne felt the dark cloud spread-ing, deepening. She rose arm herself, be ready to fend and thrust through to safety.

"Let's have a look at 'em. A quick look. If I keep them bids standing I'll be setting down to start."

These wraps were very disappointing," Anne said. "I chose one. It came, but I sent it back. It was not what you would want."

Now, the rush of resentment against the truth, she must not thrust through. Why didn't it strike her?

"Good. I got too many carpet rags already. I'll explain how you did not like it. I've been to Bermuda, Hustle them things into the bag and help me climb into my dress. You can both have the evening off. I'll see you all this side with a Manny, so no one'll be needing you. Beta, you see that rags. Are his copper. If he gets out of them rags, he's liable to forget his stun-talk. There's my longevity. No wonder I'm half crazy, chasing after kopperheads that hide every place but where you're looking for 'em. Thanks, Fifi. Put 'em there on the chair with the bag. Now, if I can't find 'em. Black chiffon? Block chiffon? Where's it? Ah!"

Anne's heart was beating. She did not want to look lively. Oh, all right. No time to argue. Bring me a wrap that I can't think, no perk it up."

"Mrs. Adolph Hoag. Jewels were "beads and junk", as clothes were "duds" and Madame brought out sapphires set in antique silver from the jewel safe in the wall. The blue of the stones made a warm glow at her decisively.

Anne looked at last in a cluster of bags and wraps and parasols. Madame's wrap was there, and had gone, Bats and Fifi went about setting the apartment to order again. Anne was alone. Madame had left a couch, punching them with her fists, Madame's evening wrap in her shape. Suddenly she stood erect, and sated herself rather than Anne. Yes, it was Chic in black velvet who he really is Of course we know She's the chauffeur. We don't have been something else before. Bats was a mask.

Anne dropped what she was doing. Of course Carl Case wasn't Carl Case. He was the man who had met than she was Anne Brent. She had been a fool. Carl Case, the friend of her mind she had known, and Bats and Phoebe, the people she would know. She would know from Carl who it was masquerading there under the name of Vronsky. Madame she must not try to pear around the office of Vronsky. Oh, she was a fool, a fool, a fool!

"Why do you say that," she asked as casually as though her heart were not drumming at her ribs like the wings of a flushed pheasant.

"Because I recognized your style with the wraps from Celeste," Bats said. Simon opened it. He was right. I thought it was for Madame, being so large and important looking and all. But I knew it was for Miss Case."

So, why didn't Bats get on with it! Anne felt she must fly at Bats and tear the mask from his face, behind Bats' slowly revolving mind, shake it out where it could be seen by her. She defended if there was for defense.

There's nothing unusual in one of us receiving a package, "she said, as though she wrapped in her interest in the least in what Carl Case's package contained but that she was trying to keep Bats talking. Carl were denied the privileges of receiving packages. The fraternity did not encourage fraternity. "The fraternity—I'd've sent it to him."

"No" Bats was explaining herself. Only it seems kind of funny him to have a book of the size of the books some of them in a foreign language. Madame thought it was, though he couldn't read it, and I thought it was a book like they have in the theatre, where these were in writing—and the rest of 'em were blank. Maybe it was a school—about machinery and drawing—I don't know. Anyway, I'm not encourage fraternity."

"He" Bats was explaining herself. Only it seems kind of funny him to have a book of the size of the books some of them in a foreign language. Madame thought it was, though he couldn't read it, and I thought it was a book like they have in the theatre, where these were in writing—and the rest of 'em were blank. Maybe it was a school—about machinery and drawing—I don't know. Anyway, I'm not encourage fraternity."

"Yes, I'll have to go," Anne said, "I don't know a thing about mechanics, so I ought to be very valuable. When I get back I'll—"

"As soon as you can get your hat and coat on," Bats said, "I'll be ready."

"Very well," according to cheer," she nodded toward the servants' dining room.

Anne. A little mental exercise will keep their brains from cramping. I'll be back in time for the car awaits, Madame."

"I'll be coming just as I am. I won't need a hat. I'll be right away before the others notice."

Anne left the room. Madame through the door. "I'll drive the car to the corner side of the next block see where it will be out of sight, and you can release yourself boning up on your helper's duties from it. Then you'll find in the right side front pocket of the car. Don't be long, Bats to shed this stunning bras and get into overalls."

Beta came around the corner of the house carrying a basket of fruit and vegetables she brought in from the hothouse as the car circled the drive, and stood in the two motor gage.

PHILLIPSTON—ZION WI.

The April meeting of the Phillipston-Zion Institute met at the home of Mrs. Harold Beatty on Tuesday after noon, April 16th, with a number of members present also some visitors. The meeting was opened with the President in the chair, with the Ode followed by all repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison. Roll Call was answered by suggestions for next year's meetings. Secretary Treasurer gave Report. A letter of thanks for Donation to the Crippled Children's Fund was read by the Secretary. A letter from Institute Director, Mrs. Bills, Kitchener, on "Keeping out Flies and Rats" which everyone enjoyed.

Mrs. R. Cranston then sang a solo which was much appreciated. Mrs. Clifford Kelcheson leader for the afternoon handed the program over to the President, Mrs. Bunnett, who called for reports, thanking the section of Mrs. Beatty for the co-operation shown her during the two years of her presidency. She then sent their directed the election of officers in a very capable manner which resulted as follows:

Honorary Director—Mrs. Marshall. 1st Vice President—Mrs. Harold Beatty.

2nd. Vice President—Mrs. Milton Robinson.

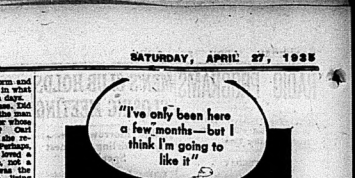
"I've only been here a few months—but I think I'm going to like it"



THE WORLD looks pretty rosy to this little lady.

She gets Castoria for a laxative. And she loves it! It is one laxative she takes willingly!

And that's very important! For if a youngster hates the taste of a laxative and struggles against taking it, her nerves are upset by the struggle. And her stomach, rebelling against the flavor, may be upset also!

So pleasant taste is one of the important reasons why Castoria is the right laxative for children . . .

CASTORIA

The Children's Laxative

Here's another:

Like the carefully chosen food you

from babyhood to 11 years

give your child—Castoria is designed just for a child's delicate needs. It contains no strong, purging drugs such as some adult laxatives contain.

It is safe for delicately-balanced young systems. It will never, never cause griping pain. It is mild. It does waste matter thoroughly but very gently. And it is not habit-forming.

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—Washington's failure to step up the commodities price level mixed silver to at least equal the foreign price gave the market for the silver shares a nervous morning today. Holders were rather liberal with their offerings, breaking prices down all along the line.

Mayo Silver fell 3 cents to 2.31, recovered to 2.58 but dropped down again at the close at 2.47 for a net loss of 26 cents. Castle, touched 1.05 before stiffening and it closed at 1.13 off 7 cents. Beaver group proved about 7 cents, Nipissing 10 and Provincial a few cents.

Hollinger at 16.80 off 20 cents. Some was a strong spot, moving up 10 cents.

TORONTO STOCKS
(Close)

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—The flop in the silver price weakened the metal shares, Sherritt and Hollinger and the rest of the Toronto Industrial Board trailed along to a lower level in today's session. Recessions of 1-4 to 1-2 were boarded for distillers Seagrams, Walkers and Continental Alcohol A. Construction shares were unchanged except for a 1-8 rise in Canada Cement Tar. General Steel Wares and Page Hersey gained 1-4 each and Steel of Canada 1-4.

Other losses were 2 3-4 for Dominion Steel Pfd, 1-4 each A I, Tip Top Pfd, 1-2 and Abitibi 5 cents, Ontario Silk Pfd, added a point.

Consolidated Smeltters showed a net loss of about 1 1-2 while Nickel dropped a small fraction.

STEWART-WARNER SHOWS BIG RISE

First Quarter Net of $496,063 Compares With $167,466 Year Before

Earnings of the Stewart-Warner Corporation in the first quarter of this year were nearly 200 per cent large than in the initial quarter of 1934, a statement shows.

For the three months ended on March 31 the consolidated net income, after all charges including depreciation, taxes and reserves for year-end adjustments, was $496,063, which was equal to 47 cents a share on the 1,346,847 shares of common stock outstanding. In the first quarter of 1934, March 31 last year, consolidated net profits were $167,466, or 13 cents a share.

Net sales for the quarter were $5,262,107, compared with $4,065,721 in the first three months of last year, a gain of 30 per cent.

MONTREAL FUR ON TWENTY PERCENT SALES TAX

Montreal, April 27 (CP)—Montreal's fur trade, by two per cent on all articles, except for a group of exemptions to be named only by the city council and will go into effect May 1. Merchants collecting the tax were accorded five per cent commission. Cakes, pastries and biscuits and leaf tobacco were added to the exemption list. Sales tax is estimated to produce $8,210,000 during the next 12 months, and is the principal factors in the city's attempts to secure some $8,000,000 in new revenue to balance the budget.

FARMERS ON LAND MARKET IS WEAK

Notable Increase in Price of Dressed Beef

Owing to many of our farmer friends being busy upon the land of the Saturday market was not as largely attended as usual. Nevertheless there has been a decided increase in the price of dressed beef, namely an advance of 1c to 2c per the hundred weight. Shipment of cattle out of the country has been the cause of the increase. There were but few other changes to note in products from the farm and garden. Two vendors offered maple syrup for sale at $1.25 per gallon, this being the lowest price of the season. Maple sugar sold at 30c per pound.

Eggs were offered for sale at considerable quantities and were reasonable in price namely 16c to 18c for specials and 15c to 17c for pullet eggs. The rulling price for butter was 26c per pound. Dressed chickens were quite plentiful with prices varying from 50c to 90c according to size and quality.

CHILD IS BORN ON WAY TO HOSPITAL

A child was born to Mrs. H. W. Thompson, 200 Station Street, while being taken to the Belleville General Hospital in an ambulance, yesterday. Reports from the institution are to the effect that both Mrs. Thompson and the child are progressing as well as can be expected. Late yesterday afternoon a hurry-up call for the city ambulance was received and the service was given. Upon the arrival of the police with the ambulance at the Thompson home, the chauffeur was forced to drive rather cautiously and before they arrived at the hospital the child was born. Mrs. Thompson was accompanied by two neighbor women.

MILITARY NOTES

The regular Friday night parade of the Argyll Light Infantry was the most creditable for this season. Band and men totalled 188. Owing to Col. E. A. Gren attending the Board of Education, Maj. Sr. R. Wills was in command. Regimental and company drill was indulged in.

All ex-sarmant officers are requested to send in their names and address to Staff Sergeant Sheppard, 355 Bleecker Avenue in order that they may be invited to a social evening on May 6th to commemorate the King's Jubilee.

It is expected that there will be large turnout of the regiment on Monday, May 6th to take part in the jubilee celebration.

LADIES INVITED BANQUET GUESTS

Anti-Cant Men's Class Provide Enjoyable Evening

The Anti Cant Young Men's Class of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church held their monthly banquet and social evening in the church hall last night at which the ladies were the invited guests.

The president Mr. Bert Orr, President of the class in a brief introductory address welcomed the guests and expressed the hope, that they would again be present in the near future.

At this point Mr. Ted Rowland proposed a toast to the King saying particular emphasis on the Silver Jubilee. Mr. Arthur Sharp proposed the toast to the Ladies. He stated, that this was the first occasion, that the Anti Cant Class had broken down barriers and opened the gates to the ladies and he hoped, that the gates would be left open and that there be more banquets at this would take place. Miss Bessie Hart replied to the toast on behalf of the ladies, she said, that the other ladies and herself had also been curious at what took place at these banquets and that she was glad, that the gates were open and gratified them a chance to look into the inner habits of the class, that the Anti Cant class proposed two beautiful selections on the piano, which did much to add to the enjoyment of the evening.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a most enjoyable hour, quet and social evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

THE PLAY

Scott's Young People Put on "A Fisherman's Lack"

The play entitled "A Fisherman's Lack", put on by the Scotts Young People in the interests of their ball-ballets at the Wallbridge town hall on Tuesday night was truly a huge success.

The curtain was fine and a good crowd was in evidence. The performance of the first character of the play in a splendid manner.

Clara Carr as Mrs. Manly was very interesting and unaffected. Andy Dalsaid as Tom Manly reprehensive of the fisherman. The villians parts were well carried out by Guy Scott as Squire Hammond and Elijah Ramsay as James Hammond, his son.

The love making and its interruptions of Elmer Smith, as Si Kidder and Mabel Chatterton as Susan Manly kept the audience in gales of laughter. Mrs. Hammond or Uncle Davie which was full of humor and pathos was well taken by Colin Dow Hammond, Mrs. Kidder and daughter in the supposed ward of Mrs. Hammond played by Sarah Carr.

Little Nellie, a waif of the ocean was well rendered by Nina Sine and Charlie Chard represented the revenue officer. Mrs. Bessie Dow furnished the music during the play.

Between the acts solos were given by Mrs. Alton Sine on the harp and Leonard and Jeanette Chard, Pianists of the evening amounted to twenty-one dollars.

SUCCULENT MUDCATS NOW BEING CAUGHT

Succulent mudcats, a welcome addition to the larders of any an accomplished angler in this city are being caught freely at the big bridge piers, and scores of amateur anglers are to be seen along the bridge for the past week or so engaged in the fascinating pastime angling. Many a fisherman, lucky enough to catch more than a mess of fish, has been forced to dispose of a portion of the catch to his friends.

COLLECT SPAWN FROM MASKINONGE

A noticeable increase in the number of maskinonge in lakes and creeks throughout this county is reported by Mr. Chas. Cohen of the Department of Game and Fisheries, Belleville. Mr. Cohen has been in charge for the past week or so engaged in the work of maskinonge spawn for culture at the local hatchery. The spawn is being collected chiefly between Green Marmora and Crowe Lake.

FIFTY MORE MEN TO BE TAKEN NORTH

Although no official word has yet been received from the camps regarding the departure of the men, an effort was being made today by Dominion Employment Service officials to secure fifty men for work on the Faulkner Highway, with the expectation of sending the draft forward to the camps. It is hoped by Superintendent Ross to have the draft made up of married men. Physical examination will be given them in this city, after which they will await orders for their departure.

117 HOME VISITS BY TRUANT OFFICER

Balmy summer breezes have resulted in more work for the local School Attendance Officer, according to his monthly report submitted to the local Public Utilities Board. During the months of March a total of 117 home visits were made by the officer, while 56 visits were made to the various schools. Two home permits were issued during the month.

The pitch was in splendid condition and dry enough to support a fast game. A bitterly cold wind made things uncomfortable for the spectators.

On all sides disappointment was expressed that the King was unable to attend. Before Referee Pegg whistled the start of the game the Prince of Wales shook hands with the players of both teams.

Starting won the toss for Sheffield but the wind made no difference to either team. Hooper and Surtees combined to carry the ball down the Throstle area. It was passed to Palethrope, who beat Richardson, but lost the drive.

Aroused by this reverse the Albion forwards, who were driving differently and their attacks were ably supported by the defence. Carter, however, of many battles, opened the way for several attractive moves, but Sheffield were given opportunity to equalize by balloon-ing the ball over the bar.

Sweeping Passes Used

The Throstles, progressed with sweeping passes. Rapidly Surtees took play to the other end and twice Pearson saved from Starling, who was at the feet of a crowd of players. Back then went Sheffield with the ball in his possession.

The Birmingham team was now on top. One of the forwards flashed past too quickly for W. G. Richardson, and his desperate effort to reach the ball.

Pearson was responsible for carrying but nothing came of the ensuing attack. Then Starling's opportunity was awarded a free kick a few yards outside the penalty area but Richardson was on the little winger. Starling was illegally charged and Sheffield were given a free kick on the kick.

HOMERS FIGURE IN LEAFS' WIN OVER BALTIMORE

Knock Down and Drag-out Battle Staged By Teams

BEARS KEEP PACE

Cliff Melton Hurls Two-Hit Game to Win

(By the Associated Press)

Toronto Maple Leafs and Newark are running one-two in the International League race but their latest contests came by vastly different means.

While Cliff Melton was holding the Buffalo Bisons to two hits in the Newarks 4-3 victory yesterday, Toronto engaged in a knock-down drag-out battle with Baltimore's hefty clouting Orioles and emerged on the long end of a 13-12 score only after two hours and 46 minutes of struggling.

The Bears made only five hits off Ken Ash and Hod Lisenbee but Ernie Koy's home run with two on in the first and another circuit clout by George Mogridge in the third gave Newark its seventh victory in ten starts.

Toronto's triumph over Baltimore was the Leaf's sixth in eight games. Tomorrow-Sunday the Baltimore ball-chips for 20 hits including home runs by Frank McCormick, Wes Schulmerich and Jimmy Pattison, but it took a six run rally in the eighth to clinch the verdict. Baltimore's ten hits, including George Puccinelli's three-run homer and circuit clouts by Woody Abernathy and Vince Barbee, bringing the total Orioles' total home runs this season to 29 in 11 games. Frank Demaree, Toronto first sacker, who had made only two hits in 26 times at bat, established a single in addition to the homer in the Orioles' total.

Jimmy McCloskey's wildness in the early innings and an error by Gordon Hinkle enabled the Rochester Red Wings to make it three runs in a row Syracuse 4-3. Driven from the box Thursday Pete Appleton came back to pitch Montreal Royals to a 5-2 triumph over Albany Senators. Appleton allowed only four hits and blanked the Senators after the first inning.

Rugged Wrestling Witnessed As Kiwanis Club Opens Series Al Dunlop Wins from Gyorffy

Many Times Contestants Parted, as Young is Too Rough

SHOW IS LATE

Jack Dallas Wins Semi-Final Bout From Herman

Al Dunlop, Toronto badman, retained his rights to the local rufflan and terror wrestling title by defeating Johnnie Gyorffy two falls in a rough and tumble three-fall match in the main event of last night's Kiwanis wrestling show at the Arena. Nearly 500 fans booed Dunlop and shouted words of encouragement to defeated Gyorffy as the latter, after the "rabbit-stretched" villain proved the better wrestler Gyorffy drove down shady tactics and brute strength, after Dunlop had taken the first fall in the semi-final saw action personified when the lithe Jack Herman, of Toronto, failed to stop his brawler Italian opponent, Jack Dallas, after a rough stanting after a hectic 20 minutes of rough work. The opening bout proved most uninteresting as Bulldog Findlay lost to an inexperienced youth named Joe Mondeau. Findlay carried the winner for the greater part of the show and looked much better than even in defeat.

Dunlop and the Gyorffy-Dunlop match saved the show which was nearly one hour late in starting owing to the doctor trouble the wrestlers had on the road. From the outset the fans were behind Gyorffy and handed Dunlop the "Bronx cheer" many times, and tqowned on his "dirty" actions when he continually butted, elbowed and fouled Gyorffy whenever the referee was not looking. The boys opened fast, both seeking the same hold and leg lock at the same time. Referee Willie was forced to untangle the contestants as their legs and arms became more tangled. Dunlop showed superior strength and his opponent resorted to punching with the closed fist that resulted in a rough house battle with fists and kicks entering. So rough did the bout become that in separating the boys the referee became tangled up with the wrestlers. With a series of flying tackles Gyorffy dropped Dunlop to the mat in the first 15 minutes.

Dunlop the Aggressor

Returning for the second round the boys mixed it up plenty but Dunlop proved the aggressor and after tossing Gyorffy around the ring in the main event of last night's Kiwanis wrestling show at the Arena. Dunlop the Aggressor

Returning for the second round the boys mixed it up plenty but Dunlop proved the aggressor and after tossing Gyorffy around the ring in the main event of last night's Kiwanis wrestling show at the Arena. Nearly 500 fans booed Dunlop and shouted words of encouragement to defeated Gyorffy as the latter, after the "rabbit-stretched" villain proved the better wrestler Gyorffy drove down shady tactics and brute strength, after Dunlop had taken the first fall in the semi-final saw action personified when the lithe Jack Herman, of Toronto, failed to stop his brawler Italian opponent, Jack Dallas, after a rough stanting after a hectic 20 minutes of rough work. The opening bout proved most uninteresting as Bulldog Findlay lost to an inexperienced youth named Joe Mondeau. Findlay carried the winner for the greater part of the show and looked much better even in defeat.

Dunlop and the Gyorffy-Dunlop match saved the show which was nearly one hour late in starting owing to the doctor trouble the wrestlers had on the road. From the outset the fans were behind Gyorffy and handed Dunlop the "Bronx cheer" many times, and frowned on his "dirty" actions when he continually butted, elbowed and fouled Gyorffy whenever the referee was not looking. The boys opened fast, both seeking the same hold and leg lock at the same time. Referee Willie was forced to untangle the contestants as their legs and arms became more tangled. Dunlop showed superior strength and his opponent resorted to punching with the closed fist that resulted in a rough house battle with fists and kicks entering. So rough did the bout become that in separating the boys the referee became tangled up with the wrestlers. With a series of flying tackles Gyorffy dropped Dunlop to the mat in the first 15 minutes.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Modern style wrestling returned to prominence in local sport circles last night with three charity bouts staged by the local Kiwanis Club. To start with the contestants were nearly an hour late in arriving at the local trouble with their motor car. Then to make matters worse "Bulldog" Findlay was matched with a green inexperienced youngster and eventually won, much to the delight of the fans. The semi-final affair was one of those rough and tumble fracasses, that saw a squatty little Italian named Dallas slip Jack Herman's shoulders to the canvas in jig time. The main bout of the evening proved the crowd-pleaser, however, as Johnnie Gyorffy, the favourite, was given a sound trouncing by Al Dunlop, much to the disapproval of the paid customers. All in all the bouts were spectacular and kept the fans in a frenzy.

Two outstanding events, which the majority of the fans failed to witness occurred, however. The first a crowd of spectators put the "bee" on Al Dunlop in the main bout and called him most everything but a gentleman. Now ordinarily Al is a quiet going young man, but some of the verbal abuses hurled at him apparently did not run very well, as the rubber-stomached grappler hopped from the ring and shut the hecklers up in short time. Walking over to the section in question Dunlop hurled just one question at the hecklers—"Who's a fake?" He asked. There was no reply.

The second incident occurred in the dressing room just prior to the last fall in the main bout. Gyorffy and Dunlop actually came to blows over something that is all a mystery to us. Out of a blue sky the lads started to argue and Dunlop tossed Johnnie for a ten yard loss. Cooler heads separated them including a local traffic officer called in, and the show went on. Dunlop told Gyorffy he'd beat him as they left the dressing room, still muttering over some variance that still remains a mystery to us. Incidentally we understand, that the Kiwanis are bringing Walter Ferrell, pro football player, to take Dunlop's measure next week.

In all probability the local baseball season will be ushered in locally on the King's Jubilee, May 6th, with a morning game versus the fast Copeland Brewery team of Toronto. Although final arrangements for this game have not reached completion as yet, negotiations have been entered upon by clubs. It seems the Copeland team is slated to open the season at Napanee, versus the champion Cliftons, on the 24th of May-the May 6th. The Copeland "Beer Barons", desiring to kill two birds with one stone, wrote to the Stewart-Warners requesting a morning game with the locals. Incidentally Carman Buah and Dave Rowan, two Belleville youths, are with the Toronto a local uniform this year, are members of the Copeland team. Naturally there will be some little rivalry between the two clubs as the feelings ran quite high during the sojourn of Buah and Rosen in this city. It this game is arranged doubtlessly other exhibition games, of the spring training variety, will follow as the "Radios" have been forced to cancel their Sunday games, the announcements coming out of otner C.O.B.L. towns in relationship to pre-season games. Which is as it should be.

The recently formed Kiwanis junior city baseball league, is receiving no end of activity among the 'teen age diamond aspirants. For instance the College Hill team has already signed 22 players, all under 16 years of age and are now ready to play baseball. If the B.A.R.A. and Kiwanis Club can boast of producing these boys the spirit of city league baseball qualities, in two years' time Belleville will have a crop of young baseball players coming along quite capable of filling the shoes of the presently cropping up in the senior ranks. In many past ones baseball proved a boom to the game in Belleville, when the Station gang battled it out with the Wharf Rats and the College Hill gang staged fist fights during the games with the "Rats" and "Aristocrats", those were the happy days when baseball players were receiving the education, that resulted in such players, as the Goyer boys, Hank Gowdy, Bill Lamont, Bobby Mills, Art McGie, Harry Pringle, Bill Ponton, Ed Brown and other old time players. Yes one could go back to the time of Hamie Stafford, Ed Reeves, Vine Brennan, Ed Thomas and others, who received their early baseball training on the old commonsphere as is being introduced in the new local league.

The local softball contingent is right on the bit these days with the Wall Street League opening on Monday night at the College Field, while the Senior City softballers are preparing for their opening on Tuesday next. At this meeting the league will adopt its schedule and finish all other business prior to the opening of the season. Incidentally the delegates should be prepared to come to the meeting ready to name a secretary-treasurer also.

Bill Fry and Ed Goodier, gulding lights of the Aajmaa Club lacrosse team, inform us that Lloyd Morey graciously declined, the full-time duties of coach of the local box squad for the ensuing year, but assured the local lacrosse team of as much assistance in that role as he could possibly spare from his business. Incidentally Morey expects to introduce junior or juvenile lacrosse in Trenton this summer, while the Aajmaas will operate two each teams in Belleville. These teams will band together and form a compact little league of their own to endeavour in reducing the game among the younger element of both players.

Twice a week the Belleville United soccer team is working out east of the Stephen-Adamson plant in Foster Ward in preparation for the coming football season, which may open on the King's Silver Jubilee, if suitable opponents can be procured. Early this week Alderman William Harvey put in an appearance at one of the soccer team's practices and presented the club with a new football. Naturally the players feel highly indebted to Mr. Harvey for his timely gift. In connection the Belleville United team are very much in need of a couple of good defence players, better known as backs. In the meantime Secretary Harold Thurgood is communicating with surrounding soccer clubs in relation to the possible football league being formed in this community.

We see, where the Peterboro Hockey Club organized for next season and are already importing players into the Liftlock City. They Covert goes to work in that city on Monday, while "Red" Geddes, star Toronto junior forward, is also headed towards the shores of Otonabee, we hear. With one local hockey player already migrated, the local hockey moguls had better start counting noses.

Chicago White Sox Make Merry Slipping Into Second Place With Cleveland Still on Top

Detroit Continues in Slump Despite Batting Shake-up

CARDINALS WIN

Hold Third Place in National, Being Tied With Cubs

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr. Associated Press Sports Writer)

If the can observer a little control to mix in with his otherwise potent pitches, Joe Cascarella may turn out to be one of the hurlers Connie Mack is looking for to help the Athletics get out of the cellar places in the American League standing.

So far this season Cascarella had pitched two games, both against the Yankees, allowed seven hits in all and lost them both because of passes. Last week he dropped a 4-3 game 3-1, walking all the runs to first. Yesterday Joe granted only three hits in seven innings, fanned seven rivals and saw the A's wind up on the short end of an 11-2 score.

One of the blows and two passes loaded the bases in the second inning and Frank Crosetti cleared them with a homer. Two more walks led to another run in the seventh and Cascarella was taken out for a pinch hitter the Yanks slid some serious hitting to pile up six more runs against a trio of successors in the eighth. Meanwhile Vito Tamulis, pitching for the Yanks because Lefty Gomez had a cold, was credited with a neat eight-hit performance.

The triumph put New York above the .500 mark for the first time this season but failed to alter the standings. The Yanks remained deadlocked with Washington, which walloped the Red Sox 10-3 when Manager Joe Cronin failed to support his star southpaw Wes Ferrell. Mule Grove, Cronin made three of Boston's five errors.

Indians Still on Top

Chicago's slugging White Sox slipped past Boston into second place, slamming out an 11-4 victory over St. Louis on the combination of Ted Lyons' six hit flinging and five home runs, including Zeke Bonura's fifth of the year.

Cleveland had no trouble retaining the lead, burying the Tigers under an 11-3 count. The Indians smacked out a five bunches with Willis Hudlin improving after a bad start.

The Giants and Phillies furnished the highlight of the National League program, coming with the score tied at 5-5 when darkness halted the battle in the 13th. John Mize batted home the winning run, making it five for the season, and held the game safe with a two run second in the eighth inning.

Brooklyn's League leaders had a narrow escape when Tom Zachary weakened toward the finish after Boston errors had given him the early lead. But Dutch Leonard came to the rescue and the Dodgers came out ahead 5-4. The Cubs and Cardinals tied for third place. Each won a 3-2 triumph.

Chicago beat Cincinnati despite Lon Johnson's five-hit hurling, while the Cards went 11 innings against Pittsburgh before they got the odd run off relief hurler Bill

GOLF FACTS

Not Theories !

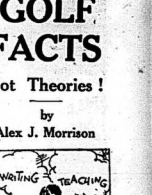
by Alex J. Morrison



Recently I played a match with this long-driving Charlie Lacey over the Islington links at Great Neck, Long Island. Although we came out all even, I took 73 to Charlie's 72.

The scores were acceptable considering the condition of the course at this time of the year. Mine was palpably good for the fifth round played this year.

A locker-room discussion brought out a point about mental lapses while playing. I had missed a few short easy shots through letting my mind wander away from the game. Charlie claimed, and rightly so, that he would have the advantage over me even if we were both in the same physical condition, because his mind was filled with just one thing, playing golf.

I have many things which are bound to enter my mind, such as problems in writing and teaching. Having to think of golf helps.

RUTH'S ELEVATION DENIED

Boston, April 27—The Boston Post in a special dispatch from New York today says Babe Ruth will take over active management of Boston Braves not later than June 1. The report was denied at the Braves' office here today.

The post writer says Bill McKechnie, manager, "will be bunted upstairs" into another job.

RELIEF STRIKERS' CHILDREN PARADE

Serious trouble is threatening in Crowland township, Ont., between police and strikers. Demonstrations and clashes have taken place and provincial police were asked to quell disorders. The strikers sent 40 children in trucks to Toronto to parade around Queen's Park. They were received by Young Pioneers League. The children are seen here arriving in Toronto by truck, and getting their evening meal.

It is a rare sight to see the Prince of Wales doing desk work. A view of the island of Tristan da Cunha, which lies in the South Atlantic ocean, midway between Capetown, Africa, and Buenos Aires, Argentina. One hundred and seventy persons reside on the island without benefit of taxation, plumbing, movies, radio or bread lines. One of the inhabitants, the first to do so, arrived in New York as a member of the crew of the S. S. Empress of Australia. He is Donald Glass, 28 (INSET). The island is visited only once a year by a supply ship. During the last years of the war, the natives were absolutely no outside contact with the world and knew nothing of the conflict.

Success of Noel Scaffa CENTRE, New York private detective, in recovering stolen jewelry is being investigated by federal grand jury. Latest achievement is recovery of $185,000 in gems stolen from Mrs. Margaret H. Bell (TOP LEFT), in Miami last winter. Scaffa is also credited with the return of furnes in jewels stolen from Mrs. James P. Donohue LOWER LEFT, Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken UPPER RIGHT, and Mrs. Joshua Goaden (LOWER RIGHT).

RELEASED FROM SPY CHARGES

Accompanied by her lawyer, Marjorie Tilley Switz is laughing gaily as she is smuggled through a side door of the prison of La Petite Roquette, following the ruling that sfree her in the great Paris spy trial. Both she and her husband, Robert Gordon Swit, of New Jersey, admitted their guilt when they were arrested late in 1933. Because they named names, they were freed. Feeling is running so high against them among the relatives of others who were imprisoned through their testimony, that the French governm ent promised that they would leave France at an early date. Mrs. Switz is a Vassar graduate.

DRUMS OF CHANCE DESTROYED BY INCENDIARY FIRE

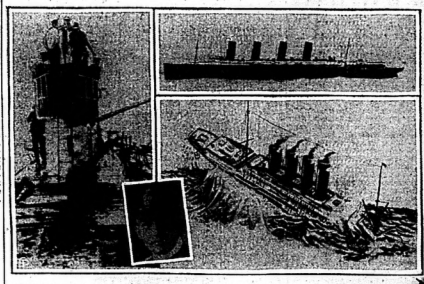
TORPEDO SENT LUSITANIA TO BOTTOM 20 YEARS AGO



Monday, May 6, is 25th anniversary of the ascension to the throne of King George. Tuesday, May 7, is the 20th anniversary of the sinking of the S.S. Lusitania by a German submarine. Among the 1,195 lives that were lost in the terrible disaster, nearly 175 were Canadians. The sinking precipitated the United States' entry into the great war. Captain Schweiger (inset) of the German U-boat 3-20, type of which is shown ABOVE LEFT, directed the fatal torpedo. The submarine and its crew were later destroyed by a depth bomb. The last photo of the Lusitania is shown TOP. An artist's conception of the death plunge of the vessel is also shown.

STRIKERS REFUSE TO WORK FOR RELIEF

Both police and strikers say anyone can work unmolested if they wish, but out of 500 strikers in Crowland township, Ontario, not one has come forward to take one of the new shovels. The township asks the men to work for their relief. The men demand regular scale of pay. Result—deadlock. Layout shows, TOP, strikers and their families on parade. LEFT police lined up on both sides of sewer excavation where men are asked to work. RIGHT, Inspector Airey talking with Haslam, strike leader. No violence has been shown yet and police and strikers both appear to be doing their utmost to avoid strife.

NO, IT'S NOT ELECTION TIME

No, it's not election time for Premier Mitchell Hepburn. The head of Ontario's legislature took several members of his cabinet on a personal tour to see how relief was being administered in Toronto suburbs. The cabinet ministers found particular enjoyment in making friends with the kiddies. They also found that relief supplies are not adequate and promise to do something about it. Mr. Hepburn is shown here with an armful. All three seem to be enjoying the situation.

Father Coughlin Launches "Third Party"

A scene in the Detroit Olympia auditorium as 15,000 persons heard Father Charles E. Coughlin, "radio priest," thunder his demand that his national union for social justice be made a national political organization. The third party threat found approval with the listeners, apparently for the Canadian-born priest, who is shown as he addressed the crowd, was greeted with thunderous cheers. He wishes the party launched to "blast out of existence reactionaries, conservatives and hypocrites, who disgrace the halls of Congress." He charged that the Roosevelt administration, "counter to the true interests of the masses, prefers to consult wickedness in the high places." Coughlin said, "We reject atheistic Communism. We disavow racial intolerism. We turn our backs on industrial Fascism."

Daily Short Story

One or the Other

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Patrolman Joe Hendricks had no desire to shoot a man. Not even a crook and a corrupter of youth, like Barlow.

Yet it looked like it might end in shooting by one or the other. Joe's superiors were pounding him. Barlow was pounding him, only Mary Louden didn't constantly urge him to "do something." But Mary was afraid.

"There's no use in arresting him" Joe told her in talking about it. "He's got crooked political connections and he'd wiggle out of it. These young punks he has working for him would quit if Barlow didn't buy the stolen stuff from them. They think he's a big shot."

Crooked politicians or not, Joe's superiors wanted Barlow. They wanted an ending of the epidemic of stickups and robberies in the district that Joe patrolled. They looked to Joe to make an ending.

Finally he did.

Some of them still talk about it; what happened. But only a few of them know the exact facts.

They say, and it's probably true, that Barlow's enemies were centered on Mary Louden. That he even went so far as to offer her marriage—to him a great condescension, and that when Joe Hendricks cut in on him he voiced a determination to "break that——cop."

However true that may be, he did taunt him when a storekeeper was badly beaten and robbed of money and goods. Which was the work of bandits. But the neighbors weren't talking. It wasn't a good thing to do.

Then Joe arrested Barlow.

Within half an hour of the arrest it was known in every crooks' hangout in the district. They looked Barlow's followers did, for his immediate release. But they wasn't released. He was held without bail for three days. And then Joe with other officers to aid him, rounded up every member of his gang.

Old charges were dug up and made to stick. Because witnesses were now willing to talk. Barlow was in jail and his gang was in jail. And, then, whispers began to go around, whispers to the effect that it would now be safe to talk, safe to go into court and point a finger and say, "That's the man!"

No one pointed a finger at Barlow. One by one his "young punks" were sent away to varying terms. But not Barlow. On the day the last one was convicted he was freed.

He immediately disappeared.

Good as Dead

It was the best way, the way that Joe Hendricks had planned and hoped for when he finally went to high police officials and convinced them that he could "get" Barlow if only they would see to it that he wasn't prematurely released through political influence.

"It was either that or run the chance of having some day to kill him," he told Mary. "As it is now he's as good as dead as far as this town is concerned. He knows it, too, I had the pleasure of telling him just before he was released."

"But I don't understand," said Mary. "He was just as guilty as the others. More, if anything. Why wasn't he sent to jail, too?"

"Because we didn't have enough evidence on him, for one thing," answered Joe. "He always stayed in the background. And what good would it have done to send him to prison for five or ten years when he would be paroled in two and come back as a regular hero. This way ended that!"

"But way?" asked Mary, "I don't see how he was punished at all."

"You couldn't get him to agree to that," Joe replied. "First he'd go to jail for a couple of years now. That would prove that he didn't squeal to save himself. Because that's what followers believe—that Barlow squealed on them. Their friends are looking for him now and they'll be looking for him when they get out. I started the rumors and Barlow will never convince them that it's not true. That's why he disappeared."

The bankers got together and sent out a report they was going to buy up all the cotton in the world and shoot the price up so high that a standfull of cotton would be as good as a handfull of gold. Well naturally the result was that not a single married woman in town would let her husband use such valuable material for Santa Claus stockings, so there wasn't a single five all that Christmas day, and every fireman in town had a little chance to run home and join the festivities a while. I'll see you later some time, Mr. Riley said.

Meaning the end of the subject.

FEAR CHILD DROWNED

Peterborough, Ont., April 27 (CP) —Fears six-year-old John McMillan had been drowned were expressed Friday as search continued for the boy, who disappeared. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Cyril McMillan of Peterborough. It is feared John was drowned in the Trent canal as his small pet dog continually leads searchers to the canal. A section of the canal is being dredged in the hope of recovering the body.

REEVE OF ATHENS DIES

Brockville, Ont., April 27 (CP).—Reeve of the village of Athens for the last six years, Edward Taylor, 67, died at his home there early Friday after an illness of two weeks. He was a dealer in agricultural machinery and was an auctioneer. He was born at Addison, Ont., and moved to Athens in his youth.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was around at the firehouse, tawking to Mr. Riley, the head ladder driver, and I said, Did you ever have a accident to be sorry taking ahs but a fireman, Mr. Riley?

No, I didn't and dont expect to, but just a accident I don't go to say I'm prejudiced sgenst the other professions, because everybody's useful in their own job, no matter what it is, that's my motto, Mr. Riley said. Now takking bankers for instants, some people have the idear that bankers is never happy unless they're taking money away from other folks and adding it to their own, but if it hadn't been for the kind harts of certain bankers I'd never of been able to tell you this story, because it never would of happened. It's a Christmas story, and naturally a little out of season, so perhaps you dont care to hear it, he said.

Sure I do, gosh, I said, and Mr. Riley said, Well, many years ago that firemen practically never got a chance to spend Christmas home everybody else spends it, I mean of course in their own home, and I guess you know the reason why.

Sure, fires, I said, and Mr. Riley said, Yes, fires caused the cotton whiskers trying to get sociable with lighted candles. Dozens and dozens of them every Christmas. But things was diffrent this particular time. Firemen had sent a petition to the bankers and Roger realized the airplane had small chance of outriding the dreadful southwest storm soon. With the engine disabled, Pat and his men would be fortunate if their lives were saved. But for twenty minutes he valiantly exerted all his skill.

Roger still vainly hoped to come through. Possibly he would have succeeded had not a blinding flash of lightning, followed by a deafening roar, shivered the crimson plane for one awful second.

The fire licked around the aft-section and Roger knew the game was up! Giving over the control to his sub-lieutenant, he turned to Pat, white-faced but calm. Quickly she looked to her parachute. "It is your only chance!" cried Roger.

"We will follow—It we can. Good-bye." Pat heard him say. "I love you. Happy landing!" Shifting her sobs and smiling bravely, Pat kissed him. A moment later she jumped overboard, tossed like a feather by the raging elements.

Columbus, O., April 29 (CP)— Fifty-five years ago Charles H. Winston, critically ill, vowed never, never, he would attend church regularly if he recovered. Last night he took a bath, had a hair cut and shave and attended church in his home town. Within less than 55 years, and then only because of illness and confinement in his family. He celebrated his 72rd. birthday today.

Durban, Union of South Africa, April 29 (CP)—George Bernard Shaw disclosed today that he has written a new play, one "which has had more than 10 minutes."

The play is entitled "The Millionairess" and was already set to London from Mimsby, South Kenya Protectorate, by the playwright recently.

"It is about a female Cecil Rhodes," he said. "It has no moral and teaches you nothing."

Rich Hill, Mo., April 29 (CP)— Rich Hill's betting sparrow has been fighting since March 24, but he won't win for his opponent is the sun reflection in the window of a building.

New York, April 29 (CP)—Five burglars, meeting for undisclosed reasons in the same apartment, agreed to do it about with their ownselves and split the spoils, police said now of them admitted after he was captured at sight. They arrested Max Goodmann, 22, and charged him with burglary and felonious assault.

New York, April 29 (CP)— Eighteen months old Conrad Lavery full two floors Sunday, was rescued by Mrs. Josephine Kovacs, both of them fell eight feet farther and neither was hurt.

Conrad was playing on a bedroom of the Brooklyn apartment when he tried and crawled out of a sill. He dislodged a bundle of papers and Mrs. Kovacs two floors below saw them crash to the flagstones. She leaned out.

Conrad was there on the papers, screaming for help. Mrs. Kovacs dashed for her son's aid. Conrad fell into them. The momentum pulled her through the window and after grappling with she fell right feet to the courtyard.

New York, April 29 (CP)—Writing for fun won't be fun any more —if the League of American Writers has anything to say about it.

The league, which includes 1,200 wing authors committed to work and write against war and fascism and to educate the problems of the working class, was founded Sunday at the closing session of the American Writers' Congress.

Moscow, April 29 (CP)— The Soviet clothing trust has decided to "standardize" women's wear and has designed dresses in 400 styles a variety which is claimed is enough to keep milady's every whim in the Soviet Union.

Hamilton, April 29 (CP)—Police think the latest petty theft was committed by a back-to-the-land enthusiast with some knowledge of gardening. He stole an assortment of plants from a front garden and was careful to leave the dirt of earth around the roots for transplanting. Finally he remembered the April drought here, carrying off a 46-foot garden hose.

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—Despite numerous warning signs against trespassers, Emelia Durt, 36, walked across the right of way into the path of a C.N.R. passenger train and was instantly killed, Northern Beach here had no chance to stop according to the police.

Strong Defense Air Base Near Canadian Border Plan of United States

General Kilbourne Says Century-Old Plan Respected

FEARS ARE AIRED

Protest Over Air Base Just Fuss Says Capt. Hand

Washington, April 29.—(AP)— The United States capital heard today a pending proposal to establish "intermediate" stations for transcontinental operations of the new general headquarters air force is a "camouflaged" pretext for a portal defensive air base near the Canadian border.

Objections, given by Brig. Gen. Charles H. Kilbourne, Assistant Chief of Staff in charge of War plans, at a secret meeting of the House of Representatives Military Committee, shed light upon the proposal.

It is part of a bill which the committee has approved, designating certain areas in other parts of the country for consideration it establishing air bases.

Kilbourne's testimony gave an indication why a flat proposal for a base in the Great Lakes region was eliminated from the measure.

Canadian Situation

"I should be very glad to put in the Bill the Great Lakes area but it could not put it in because of the Canadian situation," said the official, in testimony published today.

"You will notice No. 7 in by Bill is camouflaged. It is called intermediate stations for transcontinental flights, but it means the same thing."

At another point, Kilbourne said: "We do not want to sometimes anything that would look as though we contemplate planning any of from the century-old principle that our Canadian border needs no defence. I think it would be very unfortunate if we did."

Kilbourne's testimony emphasized the proposed aviation centres would be purely for defensive purposes and peace-time training.

Landing Fields

"We can not get out in the military line along the Canadian border," he said, "but I am particularly for and lend the advantages of landing fields and encouraging flying in the people who are on the border. I think we could do that without attracting any attention."

Testimony of War Department officials at the hearing disclosed the secret meeting reflected fear an international crisis might establish bases in Canada for operations against the population and industrial centres in the northeast quarter of the United States.

Trenton Station

Ottawa, April 29—(CP)—Canada already has an air base near the United States border and another 70 miles inland, it was pointed out today by officials discussing the Wilcox Airbase Bill, approved by the American House Military Committee. Neither base, the first at Trenton, Ont., and the other at Vancouver, was designed for military purposes.

Brig. Gen. C. H. Kilbourne, Assistant Chief of Staff in charge of War plans, told the American Committee one clause of the Bill was a camouflaged provision for a powerful defensive airbase near the Canadian border.

The Trenton, Ontario, field was started two or three years ago when Trenton at Camp Borden was abandoned. It was selected because it combined land and water facilities, but without any idea of war or defence in mind. It fronts on the protected waters of the Bay of Quinte off Lake Ontario.

Prayer for 'The King's Majesty'

London, April 29 (AP)—John Masefield, poet laureate of England, has composed a special prayer "for the King's Majesty" as part of the official jubilee program. It follows:

O, God, whose mercy is our state,
Whose wishes are children in Thy hands,
Who willed that in the years of fate
Thy servant, George, should rule the lands
That Thou hast made for years of strife
Have changed to peace, and for this thing,

Thou has given him length of life
Under Thy hand, be our King.
Oh God, vouchsafe him many years
With all the world as England's friend,
And England bright among her peers
With wisdom that can never end.

This is Masefield's third contribution to the jubilee, he having previously written a sonnet and composed a hymn of thanksgiving" for Accession Day, May 6.

Honors List On June Third

London, April 29 (CP Cable)— Titles will be the especial honors list in connection with His Majesty's Silver Jubilee celebrations, it was announced today. The usual birthday list, which will be published June 3, will contain the names of many men and women prominent in public affairs during the last 25 years.

No Interference with Execution

Flash:—3.40 p.m.

Harold W. Vermilyea was denied commutation in the report of the cabinet council at Ottawa and there will be no interference with the execution set for May 2. This information was given out at Ottawa by the Department of the Minister of Justice late this afternoon.

There will accordingly be no interference with the execution.

The report of the cabinet council was given as adverse to commutation.

About three weeks ago an effort was made by counsel for the man who was condemned here for the death of his mother in a hatchet killing on October 4, last, to have the sentence of death commuted to life imprisonment. Shortly before that an alienist had come to the jail and examined Vermilyea as to his mental condition.

9 LIVES MENACED IN HOUSE BLAST

One Man Injured in Explosion and Fire at East Windsor

East Windsor, Ont., April 29 (CP)—One man was injured and nine persons were endangered following a fire and explosion in an East Windsor home today. The house was burned to the ground by the fire, believed to have been deliberately started by an unidentified man.

Dante Chaneshenko suffered injuries to his hands and ribs as he went to the rescue of his wife and seven-year-old daughter. The ladder, which he was using broke and hurled him to the ground.

The Chaneshenko family with two roomers occupied rooms in the upstairs flat by the rapid-spreading flames and were forced to leap from a verandah roof to safety.

Mrs. Rhodel, complaining after the explosion, grabbed her four-year-old daughter and rushed out into the street. Mrs. Rhodel left her home of friends, put to bed and given medical attention.

The man said to have been sprinkling the gasoline, was described as tall and wearing a windbreaker.

It was the fumes of fluid that awakened Mrs. Rhodel who aroused her husband.

PETERBORO MAN GOES ON TRIAL

Faces Charge of Manslaughter in Death of J. A. Pilch

Toronto, Apr. 29 (CP)—Facing a charge of manslaughter, in connection with the death of James A. Pilch last February on the Kingston Road, J. H. Coones of Peterboro went on trial before Mr. Justice Percy Kerwin and jury in assize court today.

John J. Robinette is special crown prosecutor while A. R. Sproule is acting for the defence.

Mr. Robinette, in outlining the case for the jury, said Pilch was walking eastward on the Kingston Road, in Scarboro, when he was struck from behind by the car driven by the accused man.

Meet Miss Mystery Shopper Elusive Spirit of Good Will Pervading Belleville Better Days

A Charming Petite Miss Who Will Move Among The Throngs of Shoppers in Belleville Stores This week With a Price on Her Head — Ten Dollar Cash Reward For Her Capture.

An interesting feature of Belleville Better Days will be the hunt for the elusive Miss Mystery Shopper who has been engaged by the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association to add mystery and gaiety to the Shopping Carnival.

Miss Mystery Shopper will move freely about the business section, mingle with the shoppers in the stores, will be easy to look at and friendly to talk to—but there will be a price on her head. For her capture a cash reward of ten dollars will be paid if the following formula is adhered to:—

Her captor must have in his or her possession a newspaper advertisement of one of the merchants taking part in Belleville Better Days, and in identifying the young lady must use these words:

'PARDON ME YOU ARE MISS MYSTERY SHOPPER'

To assist hunters of the elusive Miss Mystery Shopper the following description may help to concentrate the prospects, and keep her stepping fast:

Height 5 ft. 7 ins., weight about 120 pounds, blonde, attractive personality, gowned tastefully in the prevailing mode.

The adventurers of Miss Mystery Shopper will be told daily in this newspaper from the first moment she steps into the character until her capture—and she expects some exciting moments.

Don't forget to have a merchants' advertisement with you.

TIRE TYCOON ON WORLD CRUISE

Sir Arthur and Lady Du Cros are pictured here as they arrived in San Francisco. He is the founder of the world's pneumatic tire industry and a member of one of Britain's well-known families. Long-time member of Parliament, he is to receive from George V. of England at his Sunset home when that monarch was recovering from illness in 1929. "The world," he feels, "is filled with foolish talk of war. England is calm and is exerting powerful pressure to put the damper on that talk."

GERMANS FORTIFY ISLAND OF SYLT IN NORTH SEA

Frank Admission of Plans to Build 12 Submarines

BIG NAVY SCHEME

Armored Shelters, in Sand Hills Are Reported

London, April 29.—(CP Havas)—Germany made formal notice that the Reich is building 12 submarines of 250 tons. All the Versailles treaty signatories will be notified through the German embassies and Ministers this afternoon, it was learned on reliable authority.

Reichswehr Minister Gen. Werner von Blomberg informed Britain Germany had no intention of changing the Reich naval program, it was disclosed. During the visit to the German Embassies here, Paris, Rome and Moscow he expected to state simply submarine construction is underway.

British Anxious

London, April 29—(CP Cable)— The German naval chief Admiral returned to business today faced with the growing menace of a re-armed Germany.

On the heels of conscription news reports Germany already has an air strength greater than the British home defence force, Hitler smashing through the Treaty of Versailles Germany next orders submarines. Now comes the disclosure Germany has built a great new naval and military base on the island of Sylt in the North Sea.

Sylt, it is stated, had been transformed into a second Heligoland, equipped with new fortifications, concrete and bomb proof shelters for long distance anti-aircraft guns.

"Skerries" is the code word for Sylt," reports the Daily Herald. "300 soldiers and sailors have been on the Island of Sylt, 18 houses for officers and men and the new air base. Large numbers of smaller houses looking like fishermen's huts with thatched roofs have also been erected there. But under the straw there is two feet of concrete; under wooden floors there are bomb-proof cellars with wall of concrete five feet thick."

Fortifications

"Actual new fortifications are armored shelters in the sandhills from where anti-aircraft guns, distance guns and anti-aircraft guns suddenly emerge, then vanish again underground. Also a closely secret way is kept about the fortifications. One investigation, one of the only reliable Nazi workers were employed.

"Two underground hangars have been constructed."

Berlin, April 29—That orders for "a number of submarines" have been placed with various German shipbuilding firms at Hamburg, Stettin and Kiel, was officially admitted today by a man in a position to know.

It was an open question, however as far as could be learned today as to the actual construction of submarines already had begun or whether orders have been given for delay the beginning of their construction until the naval parleys now in progress come to a close.

Construction Under Way.

London, Apr. 29 (Copyright, Associated Press)—Sir Robert Vansittart, Foreign Secretary, told the House of Commons today that the German government has intimated that orders have been given for the construction of twelve submarines of 250 tons each. This matter now is under consideration.

Although Sir John did not amplify this statement, it was understood in diplomatic quarters the German construction was understood to have been under way for some time.

Leading cabinet members began an intensive study of the question of Germany's return to the construction of submarines and arranged for immediate consultations with France and Italy as new secrets of the German navy have been learned.

German Naval Expansion.

Reports from diplomatic quarters here from Berlin said Germany was planning the immediate extension of her naval power by the construction of five to eight battleships, cruisers, a large number of small cruisers, fifty to seventy-five destroyers, forty to fifty small submarines and several aircraft carriers.

The entire situation will be thoroughly aired at meetings today and tomorrow of the various ministers concerned with foreign affairs and defence and their observations will be communicated to France and Italy.

Mrs. D. Scale, Toronto, Falls 20 Feet at Trenton Succumbs in Hospital

Arrived to Visit Friends When Accident Occurred

FALLS OFF VIADUCT

Found by Resident Half Hour After Accident And Conscious

Trenton, April 29 (Special) — Mrs. D. Scale, aged 56 of 436 Clinton Street, Toronto, former Trenton resident, passed away in the Belleville General Hospital, Saturday evening after falling near the Canadian National station shortly after 5 p.m. An inquest has been ordered by a Belleville coroner. Mrs. Scale arrived from Toronto at 5.13 and was found on the north-bound track below at 5.50 p.m. by Michael O'Hay. When found Mrs. Scale was still conscious. Whether the unfortunate lady tried to descend on the large stone abutment of the viaduct, where a path leads to the track, steps lead from the station to the tracks below. Mr. O'Shay, who was on his way to work, noticed the unfortunate lady immediately noticed Alex. Fleming, the operator on duty, who summoned Dr. Ross Harley. On examined the lady and found she had sustained a fractured skull and severe shock. He ordered her removal to the Belleville General Hospital, where she died a short time later, while being X-rayed. The victim fell from the south side of the track, step

CLOSEST GUARD TO PATROL AREA

Morbidly-Minded Folk Will be Kept Away From Prison Vicinity

In the event of the execution of Harold W. Jackson on the morning of May 2nd. next, no newspaper men will be admitted to the execution yard or be permitted to watch the hanging, it is announced by the authorities. Only the officials and those charged with the performance of the execution will be permitted to attend. This is on the order of Attorney General Arthur Slattery.

Several out-of-town Ontario papers who have made application to have their representatives attend have been advised, that members will not be admitted.

Although the gallows in the municipal jail yard, hemmed in by high walls of stone between the men's and women's exercise yards cannot be viewed from any portion of the jail, except from a few small windows in the rear in rooms, which are not used, special precautions will be taken on the morning of May 2nd to avoid having any morbid-minded viewing the last act. Special guards will patrol Church Street and the vicinity of the jail to keep the look out for tree climbers or others attempting to beat the law.

Vermilyea himself will not be seen on the morning of the execution by newspaper men, having already charged with the act. He will be taken from the present second tier cell corridor through a small door leading down the rear of the jail building to the small yard. This will be the first time he has been admitted to the open air since the death sentence was pronounced.

SALVATION ARMY LAUNCHES DRIVE

Adjutant Martin Speaks at Sacred Concert on Army Work

Eminently successful was the band concert arranged by the local Salvation Army Corps and held in the Belle Theatre on Sunday evening. Well over 500 people were on hand to enjoy the varied program of music and the efforts of local and visiting singers and artists.

In opening the program, Mayor Geo. O. Ketcheson, K.C., addressed the audience briefly, "I deem it an honor to preside at this gathering this evening," he said, as on other occasions since Adjutant W. A. Martin has been in charge. We have all worked together for the good of the city on past occasions and I hope we shall continue," said the Mayor.

The Salvation Army was described by Mayor Tice as "one of the best forces in the community working for the good of the city in which its corps was situated."

Following the address, Army Band was the following local artists, Mr. Gordon Miller (Jr.) solo, Belleville, Mrs. (Dr.) Stobie, Mr. A. E. Gordon, Miss Leona Riggs, Miss Maddock, and members of the band.

Following the address by Mayor Tice a march composed by the Bandmaster of the Regent Street Salvation Army "Call of the Citadel" was played by the band, after which a vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. Stobie, the singing "Hymns of the Old Church Choir." "Sweet Hour of Prayer" followed by Miss R. Arbuckle, and further tunes by the band, "Rejoice Ye Saints" by the Hymn Tune" and "For You I am Praying" by Miss Riggs.

A vocal solo followed by Mrs. (Dr.) Stobie, and a piano solo by Mrs. Gordon and Miss L. Riggs. Deputy Bandmaster J. Green and Band Secretary C. Ward, followed with a cornet duet, after which a vocal selection was given by the band's male voice party.

During the intermission Adjutant Martin addressed the large gathering, pointing out the activities of the Salvation Army Corps in various parts of the world, and related a few brief incidents of his campaign experiences.

"Is the Army still doing the same work it used to do?" asked the Adjutant. He answered his own question by pointing to the fact that at the present time the Salvation Army was engaged in a great missionary work in 83 countries, making it the largest religious enterprise in the world.

In addition Adjutant Martin outlined the present Self Denial Week campaign which has as its objective the raising of $700.00 in the city which will be devoted to philanthropic work. Under Sergeant-Bright and Cadet Mattison of the Toronto Training School have been well received in the city, it was stated.

A vote of thanks to the Mayor, the various artists assisting in the concert, the Y's Men's Club, and to the management of the Belle Theatre was expressed by the Adjutant.

EMPLOYEE FALLS 30 FEET OFF POLE

W. A. Campbell Sustains Broken Pelvis, Internal Injuries

Falling 30 feet from a telephone pole on the third concession of Sidney this morning, W. A. Campbell, local Bell Telephone employee, suffered a fractured pelvis, severe head cuts and internal injuries. He was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital in the city ambulance, where immediate medical attention was administered by Dr. C. S. Cronk. The injured man was resting quietly late this afternoon.

According to fellow-workers, Campbell was nearing the top of a 40-foot telephone pole, when he apparently missed his footing and crashed to the ground below, striking a large stone. Campbell was picked up in a semi-conscious condition and given first aid by fellow employees until the arrival of the ambulance and a doctor, who also hastened to the scene of the accident.

Following X-ray pictures of the injured man at the hospital it was disclosed that he suffered from a broken pelvis and was also suffering from internal injuries which were causing him considerable pain. The victim was completely out of inability to move his legs, but this was attributed to the broken pelvis. The fracture was reduced this afternoon.

Brockville, Ont., Apr. 29 (CP)

Frank Carley, Brockville taxi driver, was taken to hospital today in a serious condition from what police said was poison. Carley and his taxi car left a wagon at a street intersection and the taxi driver was later discovered at his home.

ALBERT COLLEGE FUTURE BRIGHTENS

Governors Praise Work of Principal Howard

The semi-annual meeting of the Board of Governors of Albert College met in Ackerman Hall, Dr. Frank Langford, Secretary of the Board of Religious Education of the United Church, was chairman for the session.

After the devotional exercises by Rev. Robert Hall, of Alma College United Church, the bursar, Mr. H. W. Ackerman, submitted the report of the financial standing of the college, which showed a marked improvement in the finances, and the year obligations of the college have been met and a large portion of the college's former indebtedness has been paid off since Rev. Bert Howard assumed the principalship. The report was unanimously adopted and resolutions of appreciation on the splendid work of the principal and staff and resolutions of confidence in the assured future of the college were passed.

Principal's Report

Principal Howard presented his report which was commended by members of the board. He reviewed the year's activities and pointed particularly on the loyalty and efficiency of the staff, of the graduating class, which was endorsed by the Albert College Women's Guild, the newly organized glee club under Professor Anglin and the work of the Conservatory of Music under Professor Ellis. Principal Howard said the prospects for the year were very bright," stated Mr. Howard, "and we are looking forward to a fall term with a definite increase in registration."

Of particular interest to the board members was the outline of the new business and economic administration course which is to be inaugurated in the autumn. In drawing up this the principal had the advice and active assistance of Professor C. B. Walker, head of the economic and business administration department of Queen's University, Kingston. People's Conference, all of which are assuring success for this branch in the new scholarship project sponsored by the People's Conference. The principal reviewed the progress of the second year course being taken at Albert College in connection with Queen's University and pointed out that all indications point to a marked increase in registration in this department also for the coming year.

Reference was made to the improved financial standing of the college brought about by adjustments and retrenchments effected during and by two bequests during the year. Several board members discussed the situation and the principal completed the principal on his efficient work in his herculean task.

Dr. Langford brought a resolution of confidence from the United Church Board of Education which met last week and which has been forwarded in close touch with the local situation.

R. J. E. Graham was appointed by the Board of Governors as a new member of the business executive of the college.

After further business discussion the meeting was closed with prayer by Dr. Langford.

The next meeting of the board will be held in the Albert College during the first week of October.

POLICE COURT

Local police court proceedings were short and to the point today when Magistrate H. J. Butler, K.C., presided over the session in the Magistrate's Court of Northumberland.

Two inebriates pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication and were assessed the minimum fine of ten dollars and costs. In the remainder of the trio, arrested by local police on Saturday night on a similar charge, failed to answer to his name, when it was called. A bench Warrant for the offender was issued.

George Dodds, was not asked to plead to a charge of theft of a gasoline, his case being adjourned until May 7th at his own request. "I want this case put over for two weeks so I can procure a lawyer," stated the accused.

"Why don't you spend that money providing for your family?" came back Chief Kidd, as His Worship granted an adjournment until Monday, but subsequently was called upon to add another day as Monday, May 6th, will see no police court proceedings locally, it being the King's Silver Jubilee and a statutory holiday.

BOTH LEGS REVERSED

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—Alfred Holmes, 21, had both his legs cut off below the knees, when he was run over by a Canadian National Railways freight train he was trying to board at a crossing here today. The youth smoked a cigarette and jested with passersby, who appealed incongruously to his legs to stem the flow of blood.

"Often that is someone who needs it," he said, as his lunch fell from the heavy bit he had been carrying.

RESOURCEFUL GANG

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—Resourceful gang of safe-crackers, believed by police to be responsible for many recent robberies here, made into Loblaw Groceteria on Yonge Street here early today and escaped with $1,500.

They forced their way into an adjacent empty store and then up through the wall between and forced the safe, cleaning out Saturday's receipts.

Preceded by the Belleville Municipal Band, over 200 members of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, Canton and Rebekah lodges paraded to Bridge Street United Church Sunday morning to hold divine service.

Members of sister lodges from the Quinte district including Trenton, Picton, Brighton and Frankford joined with the Belleville Brethren, Fathers of Quinte, Rebekah Lodge with those from outside the city walked for the parade at the church and joined in the services.

Rev. Dr. Alexa Semple welcomed the Lodges to the church and the choir under the direction of Professor V. P. Hunt rendered a number of anthems and solos. Familiar hymns were sung at the congregation—Mrs. G. H. Stobie and Miss Reddick took the solo parts of the anthems, while Jessie Hall rendered "Fear Not O Israel". The organ numbers were "Jerusalem" and "Salem" Rubenstein, "Blessed be the God and Father" by Dr. Wesley and "Barcarolle" by Tschaikowsky (the chimes being used).

The Good Samaritan

Taking as his text "A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho" from the Gospel according to St. Luke, 10th chapter and 30th verse, Rev. Dr. Semple delivered his sermon on the parable of the good Samaritan.

The practical religion of the good Samaritan in contrast to the attitude to this unfortunate wayfarer stood out in marked contrast to the indifference shown by the priest and the Levite whose thoughts were on religion more than akin to the temple ritual and Sabbath days.

The road from Jerusalem to Jericho was steep and dangerous, dropping in the latter 3,000 feet in 18 miles. This pilgrim fell upon thieves. They beat him into insensibility, stripped him and left him for dead, because dead men had no fears. Novelty is a handy bread winner, said Dr. Semple. "You do not have to be good to be popular, but to become a beautiful. You become a handful in your own home, in your home, business faith and his reputation, that he had taken years to build." Men do robbed another day but not of gold. The man who has something to do with another man for just what he can get out of him. It is typical that "men thieve bandits", declared Dr. Semple.

The priest passed by the man on his way to the temple. He looked and said him. Religion to him was just that his thoughts of God as being in the temple and the only time to have anything to do with God was on Sunday at worship. He didn't know of the great and relentless love of God.

The Levite, a musician in the temple choir, like the priest and the might have stopped and helped him, but he wended his way and ignored the facts to the temple authorities but nothing was done about it and the way was still open for the bandits to attack another wayfarer.

Story Still Appeals

The good samaritan came along. He did not know the pilgrim by name, he was even of another race. This did not matter. He saw and picked him up and helped him. "He did the natural and fundamental thing, stated Dr. Semple, and did a good job of it. Now we after twenty centuries, the story of the good samaritan still speaks to us.

With exquisite irony Jesus made the good Samaritan the hero of the story to bring out the contrast of the two attitudes.

The good samaritan was probably not the only man on the road alone. The main thing is that he befriended a man at once and not by proxy. He didn't mean anything to him. In this world of ours our relationships are impersonal. What we need, said Dr. Semple, is not an amalgamation of race, but one of fellowship for all.

"Jerusalem was a city of faith, schools, philosophy, Rome, law and London, literature, but the city of to-day must be one of fraternity, stated Dr. Semple. That's what people are looking for. Religious history has been the most terrible scourge of mankind. There's no use in finding fault today. Tomorrow the same thing will be repeated. In a literal term the highways are the symbol for the habits of good or mankind.

A certain college student termed the parable a true and good samaritan in three phases. The robber "What is yours is mine. I will take it." The priest, "What is mine is mine and I will keep it." The good samaritan "What is mine is yours, I will share it." Therein is love, hope and the life of God.

At the conclusion of the service the members paraded back to their respective lodges.

2 KILLED AS CAR HURTLES INTO TREE

Prominent Conservative of St. Thomas and Nephew Are Victims

St. Thomas, Ont., April 28 (CP)—Harry C. Burbridge, defeated Conservative candidate in the West Elgin Dominion by-election in September, 1933, and installed by retirement of Premier M. F. Hepburn of Ontario, and his nephew, Clare, 5, were killed instantly when their automobile left the road and crashed into a tree, one-half mile east of here. Mrs. C. M. Burbridge was injured.

Harry Brown, nearby resident, was aroused by the crash and came out to find the young woman walking about in the road in a dazed condition. Friends of her husband and the older man were in the wreckage of the car on the south side of the highway. Mrs. Burbridge is in the Norfolk General Hospital here suffering from lacerated skull and other severe injuries.

St. Thomas Residents

All three occupants of the car were residents of St. Thomas. (H. C. Burbridge at 49 Pearl Street, and Mrs. Burbridge at 39 Pearl Street, at 13 Bewsley Street.

The party had been travelling west in the turf showed where the sedan left the highway on the left, and traveled 50 yards along the ditch to where it struck a large tree.—

The car stopped right side up at right angles across the ditch. The front was smashed in, the top torn off and both front wheels were found 50 feet further down the road. H. C. Burbridge apparently had been driving, with Mrs. Burbridge on his left and Clare and her husband in the back. Death of the two men was apparently due to severe head injuries.

Provincial Constable L. L. Shipley and Constable Dr. Allen S. Boyd from here were early on the scene and the bodies were removed to funeral rooms. A coroner's jury under Dr. Boyd viewed the bodies today and adjourned for one week.

MUST ANSWER QUESTIONS

Toronto, Apr. 29 (CP)—An appeal of George A. Drew, former Ontario Securities Commissioner, for an order requiring Donald H. Mackshaw, Toronto, to answer certain questions following Walkinshaw's action for $50,000 damages against Drew alleging libel, was granted today by Mr. Justice A. C. Kingstone in a judgment delivered at Osgoode Hall. Mackshaw must re-attend for examination and discovery.

APPETITES SHARPEN

Callander, Ont., Apr. 29 (CP)—The appetites of the Dionne quintuplets, every day pest eleven months old, sharpened today as they recovered from recent colds although Cecile had a temperature of 100 and a half yesterday. Dr. A. R. Defoe said in his bulletin Cecile's condition gave no cause for alarm. The five children together showed a gain of two and three-quarter ounces today.

MOLLISON PLANE CRACKS

London, April 29—(AP)—Mrs. Amy Mollison, famous flying woman flier, cracked up her new plane today in a forced landing near Ste. Ursule Quebec Airdrome. She escaped with only a severe shaking-up, when the machine crashed, while she was landing, but teh retrosphile undercarriage was smashed.

WAGES INCREASED

Ottawa, April 29—(CP)—Increased rates of pay to freight handlers at Port Arthur and Fort William are recommended in a majority report filed today with Minister of Labor W. A. Gordon. The Majority Report in front the conciliation board appointed to adjudicate upon the dispute between the Canadian Pacific Railway company and the Canadian National Railways with certain of their employees at the head of the great lakes.

Hourly rates of pay recommended, which affects 300 employees, is between prevailing scales and the amounts demanded by the workers.

WOMAN ACCOSTED

Brantford, Ont., April 29 (CP)—Provincial and city police are looking for a man who signed himself "The Snake" in anonymous letters to Mrs. Dorothy Harwood, 36. Mrs. Harwood was found lying on a boulevard on No. 2 Highway at the entrance to Mohawk Park Saturday night and removed to the Brantford General Hospital, where she will be confined a few days.

Communistic Agitators, Outside Accomplices, Suspected in Break

One Convict Killed, Two Injured And Property Damaged

PAPER IS "TIPPED"

Riot Starts, When Gravel Pit Crew Refuses to Work

Stony Mountain, Man., April 29 (CP)—Ready to take action against all persons involved, prison authorities today sought instigators of a riot in Stony Mountain Penitentiary, that ran rampant for two hours Saturday, left one convict dead, two injured and extensive damage to penitentiary property.

Howling of 360 convicts in the penitentiary was silenced and peace was restored but the search for leaders of the uprising and their objective was being probed. Meanwhile an inquest was being held into the death of the fatally-wounded convict. As new facts came to light, Warden W. G. MacLeod said there was a suspicion Communistic agitators were responsible and outside accomplices inspired the outbreak.

Charges of disorderly conduct, wilful damage, rioting and possibly more serious counts will be laid against several prisoners, it was announced by Warden MacLeod.

He declined to divulge the name of the guard, who shot and killed convict George Forsythe, and said there would be no suggestions or action warranted by inquiry of the coroner's jury.

Paper Tipped Off

Dissatisfaction over meals and "dry" tobacco, along with general resentment against law and order, had been known by the convicts for previously. There were rumors of a wholesale delivery of convicts was contemplated but they could not be confirmed.

Indication the riot had been planned was seen in a telephone call to a Winnipeg newspaper office shortly before the rioting started. An anonymous caller told the editor to watch Stony Mountain Penitentiary." Communication was made with Warden MacLeod immediately but all was quiet. Within half an hour the riot was in full swing.

Tear gas bombs hurled the convicts at the ramparts, furniture, machinery and the buildings. Forsythe, serving a sentence of 12 years and 10 lashes for attempted murder arising out of robbery with violence in Winnipeg, was shot down as he attacked a guard with a foot-long knife. Tear gas and the death of Forsythe cowed the convicts and they were marched back to their cells.

Three Shots Fired

Three shots were fired by guards during the outbreak. Two of them went wild but the other killed Forsythe. He died an hour later in the prison hospital. The names of the wounded convicts were not divulged but they may be called as witnesses before the inquiry into the death of Forsythe is concluded. Damage to machinery in the tailor shop, kitchen utensils and windows was estimated in excess of $1,000.

The disturbance broke out early in the afternoon, when the crew at the gravel pit refused to work. The riot spread quickly to the tailor shop and the kitchen, where extensive damage was done. Joining the gang at the stone shed, the crowd pit crew marched into the "dome," a prison courtyard visible from inside shop windows. Shouting began.

Guards raced to restore order but their commands were ignored. Tear gas bombs were hurled as the convicts kept damaging whatever property they could lay their hands. Most of the 360 convicts in the penitentiary were said to have been involved. While the melee was at its height, Forsythe was seen with the knife going to attack a guard. A shot from another guard in the tower dropped him.

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

The King recuperates from serious illness in 1929.

ON November 11, 1928, a year after the end of the great war the King stood bareheaded before the Cenotaph in London and said a prayer for Britain's dead heroes.

A few days later he was ill with a cold. On November 22nd, a bulletin was issued from Buckingham Palace that the King was indisposed and would be unable to attend public functions.

It was only then that the British people knew that King George was seriously ill. From that day until well on in February of the following year, the health of the King was in a state of uncertainty.

Suffering from a congestion of the lungs, which necessitated an operation, the poison had permeated through his system and rendered him almost too weak to fight off the ravages of the disease.

It was during this period of illness that the people of the Empire showed their love for their King. Every day thousands of people waited at the gates of Buckingham Palace for bulletins; special church services were held to which literally millions of British subjects attended; the visitor's book at Buckingham Palace was filled every few days with notables from foreign lands calling to express their sympathy.

For the first time during her reign Queen Mary took over for a few days the official duties of her husband. Later a special council was appointed.

Of outstanding desire to live, plus a constitution that had been carefully looked after in early life spared the King and by Easter of 1929, he was able to appear in public again. Our picture to-day shows him in Queen Victoria's bath chair at Craigwell House, Bognor, where he rested during the period of convalescence. The publication of this picture in 1929 was the first real knowledge the people had that the King was recovering.

YOUNG BRITONS FORM NEW LODGE

Duly Installed By The Grand Secretary This Week

Trenton, April 29—(Special)— A new lodge of the Canadian Young Britons was formed in Trenton last week. The lodge was duly installed on Monday night by Dr. M. Ingratt, Grand Master of Ontario East. Orange Young Britons; and W. A. Chambers, Grand Secretary, both of Manotick. The following officers of the new lodge will be known as O. Y. B. Jubilee Lodge No. 418. Last night the first meeting was held since the inception and the officers were installed.

The following is a list of the first officers of Jubilee Lodge in Trenton: Past Master, Dr. Ingratt; Master, Arthur Smith; Deputy Master, Bro. Harold Chaplain, Bro. Ray Simpson; Recording Secretary, Bro. Reginald Bell; Financial Secretary, Bro. William Johnson; Treasurer; Bro. Harry Scarlett; Director of Ceremonies, Bro. Wilfred Barber; Senior Orator, Bro. Hay Macpherson; Junior Orator, Bro. Clifford Gauen; Inside Sentinel, Bro. Oscar Hickerson; Outside Sentinel, Bro. George Gunter.

Large Coal Boat Aground

The Canada Steamship Lines coal carrier "Collier" went aground at the mouth of the Trent River as she approached the Trenton harbor early Wednesday morning. For several hours they lay in the shallow waters and not until six o'clock in the afternoon was she able to dock with her load of coal for R. B. Powers and Son. Yesterday afternoon she left for several hours behind schedule. The same boat was the first to dock in the Port of Trenton this season when she arrived on Monday of last week. Capt. Steven was not present with the high bat nor gold cane as is the custom in many ports on the opening of navigation.

Order Eastern Star Service

The 11th annual Easter dance, sponsored by the Order Eastern Star, Trenton Chapter No. 118 was held in the Masonic Temple with many in attendance from outside points. The music was furnished by the radio famed orchestra led by Luigi Dumont. The entire programme was arranged by the celebrated leader of the King Edward Hotel Orchestra. At mid-night refreshments were served and dancing continued, until 2 a.m.

The patronesses were: Mrs. A. C. Twiddy, Mrs. F. Forster, Mrs. G. Adams, Mrs. R. Embury, Mrs. D. Macdonald and Mrs. A. H. Haynes. Stewards: R. Embury, W. H. McMillan, L. Hendrick, G. Adams and A. C. Twiddy. The dance committee was headed by R. A. Simmons and the secretary, Mrs. R. J. Clarke.

A Scout is Loyal—2nd Scout Law

The first of the chain of over a thousand Boy Scouts beacon fires which will celebrate the King's Silver Jubilee in England will be lighted by the King himself. From Buckingham Palace he will light a bonfire built by Scouts in Hyde Park, and this will be the signal for the flaring up of fires on thousand hill-tops in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

An official invitation to Canadian Scouts to attend the 26th Birthday Anniversary Jamboree of the Boy Scouts of Foland, has been received by His Excellency the Earl of Bessborough, Chief Scout for Canada. The invitation is signed by Dr. Mitle Chai Grzegrzol, President of the Polish Boy Scouts Association. The Jamboree will be held in the forest of Spala, on the estate of the President of the Republic July 31 to 24, and an attendance of 20,000 is expected.

During their present world tour, Lord and Lady Baden-Powell found the greatest number of Scouts and Guides in population in an unexpected place — small Tasmania. ### THE DRAMA

21 Plays Will Be Given When Final Performance Takes Place

Ottawa, April 27 (CP)—The third Dominion drama festival will end tonight after presentation of 21 plays by groups which reached the third after a series of regional elimination competitions.

This afternoon three plays will be presented, one by a Saint John group, another from Toronto and one from Regina. The evening program will see the Masquers' Club of Winnipeg, 1926 winners, the Stratford, Ont., Drama League and the Border Theatre Guide of Windsor, on the Little Theatre's stage.

Last night's performance by the Toronto Hart House Theatre of Jacinto Benavente's one-act comedy, "His Widow's Husband," with Allah Wade for its staging and to score extra points for acting. He directed the act as a "perfect Spanish scene" and remarked "what extraordinarily beautiful effects can be obtained by simple lighting." Miss Wade also liked the staging by the Toronto Masquers of the second act from J. B. Priestley's "So To Bed." A story of the illustrious and amorous Pepys in the world-famous 17th century diarist, but criticized to some extent the acting and production. However, the players showed fine appreciation of the period of the play.

Mr. Wade also criticized the voices in the Ottawa Drama League production of Sidney Box's "Fantastic Flight," a strange play, which crowded into about 45 minutes events occurring over 16 years, from 1934 to 1950, when the world's population is about to be destroyed by gas warfare.

He described it as a play "which rather attempts to do what the cinema does." He did not think the players acted sufficiently during the passage of time, an illusion which could have emphasized by deepening their voice tones.

Today's program will be given by the stage hands of John Theatre Guild in Lady Gregory's "The Travelling Man," the Little Theatre Guild of Toronto, in "The Poacher" by Stuart Ready and the Regina Little Theatre Club in Ernest Goodwin's "The Devil Among the Skins."

The evening program: The Masquers Club of Winnipeg in Tchehov's "The Proposal," the Stratford group in "Pinocchio"by Remo Bufano, and the Windsor Players in "The Torch Bearers" by George Kelly.

JUBILEE CLEMENCY TO BE PROCLAIMED

Toronto, May 30—Announcement that a recommendation will be made by Premier Hepburn on the occasion of the King's Jubilee that certain prisoners will be issued by Hon. Dr. H. A. Bruce, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, reducing the sentences being served by prisoners for offences against the law of the province.

"Provision will be made for a reduction of one day in every six days'—of—the term of sentence, and will be effective only upon sentences now being served in the Province said.

"A similar reduction may be granted by the Lieutenant-Governor upon the recommendation of the Attorney-General to prisoners whose conduct, in the opinion of the Superintendent of the prison, is to justify commendation.

The measure of clemency is to be effective as and from the 3rd day of May, 1935."

THE JUBILEE

The time draws near for the silver jubilee rejoicing of His King's Accession anniversary. The poet laureate, John Masefield, one of the greatest of the imaginative word artists and masters of emotions in modern British literature has written a sonnet, marked by real inspiration, one which will go down in history, perhaps along with some of the great works of Tennyson in his laureateship. The master of the King's Musick, Sir Walford Davies, has set the sonnet to music and it will be heard for the first times, on Monday next and five hundred men of the Welch Guards will sing the sonnet at the jubilee tatoo at Aldershot.

Ceremonies are very complete, the great old city of London is prepared for the fete, having put on its finest dress. On the first day of the ceremonies the Empire and the people of the world will listen in.

Not only in Britain but in all parts of the Empire the accession anniversary will be celebrated. State and church will mark the occasion.

The jubilee is set in a world very different from the occasion of 1910 when His Majesty ascended the throne. The whole face of things has changed in the past quarter of a century ago. The world is in fact and great changes seem imminent. But in the midst of change is the outstanding state institution which will not pass is the throne. The kingship has suited every age which has developed and it represents the quality of blending change after change. In his reign King George has played a part which cannot be told in words, a part which is included in a development which is changing world.

The jubilee finds the Empire looking to the throne and British institutions as a rock in the shaking world and seeing through the throne and the other institutions which have developed through the ages the one political great hope of the human race.

The jubilee will be marked unloubtedly with a greater inward richness than any past jubilee. This jubilee will be more significant than any in the history of the British race.

The kingship has its foundation in the very roots of the British people. As the kingship has developed it has shed from age to age it is the very soul of the race and is the symbol of the freedom of the people. It appeals to the noblest motives of mankind, such as the unselfish efforts which are so evident in connection with the approaching ceremonies.

The next few days of intense momentous ceremonies will be. Their Majesties the King and Queen, who have earned an Empire's gratitude by their rule of the past quarter of a century.

ART SHOW BY CHILD

A seven-year-old girl, Patricia Anne Thompson, of New York, is holding a "one-man" art show with one hundred drawings, which are only a sample of her work. She began to draw at four and at five years began art study seriously.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Thompson, the parents, must be a happy place for this child has portrayed the homelife of her parents more intimately than any other family in New York has ever been depicted. She has set down her visual reaction to everything from her own tonsil operation to her father's shaving.

The other day she went to a circus and hurried home to draw trapeze artists.

The little girl is one of a laboratory group of children artists, the aim of which is not to exhibit a finished artist but to give a demonstration of what can be done with sympathetic training to accelerate the child's natural artistic impulses. The children's work is never attacked negatively. Patricia has never had to undergo negative criticism but she has been encouraged positively and all her faculties are alive and she has an unusual awareness of life. Her childish errors have never been attacked. She is alive to the beauty of color and she is ready to attack the rainbow in any of her compositions.

The group is an interesting effort to develop the child's art leanings, furnishing her with culture as well as happiness in her work.

RAISING THE SCHOOL AGE

The word "school," which in Greek and in Latin originally meant "leisure," came to be given to the place where leisure was spent in teaching and in learning. It is a significant fact that in civilized countries leisure is compelled for the children that they may learn the lessons which the experience of the race has to teach, and prepare them as far as possible as individuals and as citizens for a higher range of living. The Governor's signing of of the bill lengthening the compulsory school attendance period is in effect turning years of additional leisure, due to unemployment, into years of profitable study and more effective preparation for active vocational life and for civic duties.

It is probable that such an educational requirement would not have been enacted if so large a proportion of youth between 14—the present school-leaving age—and 18 were not out of work or in immediate prospect of it. Moreover 50 per cent of the boys and girls in America of high-school age are now in school. In some cities the entire population of this age is in school. This legislation will compel for all what, on the average, half of them now choose. It converts a leisure period into an extended study period. As a reminder for this State at any rate—the secondary school level has been reached in the democratization of education. This is one of the most encouraging movements in the history of education in any State or in any country of the world.

As was pointed out when the bill was under consideration, it was not primarily designed to keep boys and girls out of labor. As the Governor stated in signing the bill, it is "a great step forward in regulating the employment of children"; but better than that. It insures a longer period for the later enrichment of life itself. So may a great future lasting good come from what is for so many today a period of dark adversity.—New York Times.

TREES AND DROUGHT

Norman M. Ross, chief of tree planting, Forest Nursery Station, Department of Agriculture, Indian Head, Sask., in a paper on "Tree Planting in Relation to Drought Control," discusses this soil drifting question and expresses doubt whether the drifting in the menaced areas can now be controlled, even in seasons of normal precipitation save by radical changes such is made in cereal farming methods. Suggestions as to wholesale tree planting, in the belief that by so doing rainfall will be increased, are not convincing to him, and he speaks from an experience of thirty-seven years of actual residence in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, thirty-four of which have been in charge of supervising a scheme which has for its object the establishment of plantations on prairie farms. In that lengthy period, he says, one hundred and thirty-five and a third million of seedlings and cutting have been sent out from the Dominion Forest Nursery station into the three prairie provinces, and distributed among 54,000 farmers. These trees have not increased rainfall, but they have done a lot of good, only a small percentage of the plantings having proved failures. The benefits have been numerous. The plantings have made the prairie more livable; they have tended to check the wind, to conserve at least some moisture, and have in some degree tended to conserve winter snowfall, "from which source increase of moisture may be expected as against a complete run-off."

Mr. Ross has reached the conclusion that, while trees do not increase rainfall, as many persons think, their planting, irrespective of field shelters, has already proved worth while, and the practice is deserving of every encouragement. Furthermore, in the drier areas trees can be grown anywhere on the prairie where cereal crops can be raised successfully in seasons of normal rainfall. Besides beautifying a home, they have, in a considerable economic value, so it is satisfactory to learn that planting is going on extensively with the encouragement of the Dominion and provincial governments. —Montreal Gazette.

LICENSING OF SLOT MACHINES

Despite the fact that there seems to be some doubt as to the legality of licensing slot machines to such an extent as to make their operation profitable, and therefore banish them from the community, the city of Woodstock is giving authority for the enforcement of such a licensing law. The fee for slot machines has been increased from $5.00 to $200.00. All operators who fail to take out licenses by the 30th of April will be prosecuted.

The result of this move will be watched with interest by many other Ontario municipalities. In this city, those who have investigated the law on the subject are of the opinion that prosecutions under such a bylaw will fail; although they may be in perfect sympathy with the Woodstock council in its effort to abolish the operation of such machines.

There is a big difference in law between "licensing" and "prohibiting." A license gives permission for the conduct of certain action, but if the fee is so high that it prohibits such conduct then it ceases to be a license. It is virtually a prohibition law. And that's something entirely different. At least, this is the view of local legal experts who have inquired into the various proposed means for eliminating slot machines.

It is the general legal opinion that slot machines cannot be abolished through licensing—even though the Mayors' Association of Ontario seems to consider the idea feasible. The most effective way to guard against gambling through slot machines is to pass a law definitely making the operation of slug-vending machines illegal.—Chatham News.

The longer I live, the more faith I have in Providence, and the less faith in my interpretation of Providence.—Day.

Prudence is a quality incompatible with vice, and can never be effectively enlisted in its cause.—Burke.

SO WOULD I LIVE

The kitten frolicked on the floor
Where poplar shadows played,
And chuckled a silken paw to catch
A leaf of shade.

He was a thing of matchless grace;
Life's probing wheezed joy,
His every movement, every breath
Was full of joy.

For him, the now was all, he knew
The moment, nothing more;
All time to come meant naught, nor all
Time gone before.

So would I live, so would I lose
The thought of days to be
Or of days past. My universe
A shadow tree!

"SOCIALIZED MEDICINE" SPREADS:

Observers of movements in medical fields predict that the real battle of the near future will be between those who want health insurance and the supporters of "socialized medicine," under which system physicians would become employees of the Government. The League for Socialized Medicine was organized last year in New York, and is said to have approximately 1,000 physician-members. Last week the Pennsylvania League for Socialized Medicine made its appearance in Philadelphia, with 100 physician-members. Its President, Dr. C. Dudley Saul, Professor of Clinical Medicine at Hahnemann Medical College, announced that personal plans call for the organization of units in every State.

CORROBORATION of Biblical accounts of the period of the Kingdom of Judah, before the reign of Solomon's first temple about 970 B.C., was announced by the Starkey Expedition into Jerusalem. Led by the British archeologist, Dr. J. L. Starkey, the expedition discovered porcelain archives, at Tel-ad-Duweir, between Beersheba and Gaza in Southern Palestine.

Giving names of famous Israelites mentioned in Biblical chronicles, the inscriptions appeared to be an interchange of correspondence between the Viceroy of Lachish and the King of Jerusalem. For some months the expedition has been at Tel-ad-Duweir, the site of the ancient city of Lachish, and the archives, carefully were the possession of a prince of Judah.

Previous archeological research has uncorbed only two or three inscriptions of the Hebrew language, "a dead language" even in the time of Christ, and scholars hope to learn more about this ancient tongue from "the most important find since the discovery of the Tel-el-Amarna tablets" in Egypt, 1887-'88.

A clergyman had been displeased for some time with the quality of milk served to him. At length he decided to remonstrate with his milkman.

"I've been wanting to see you about the quality of milk with which you are serving me," he began.

"Yes, sir," uneasily answered the milkman.

"I only wanted to say," continued the minister, "that I use the milk for drinking purposes exclusively, and not for christening."

36 RECORDS SMASHED IN DESERT SPEED CARNIVAL

On the edge of the Mojave Desert, racing day and night around a 5-mile circle on the silt bed of Muroc Dry Lake, a trio of speedway stars, Marvin in relays, smashed 36 official records in a standard stock Chrysler Airflow Imperial. And the new marks were unlimited displacement marks; for 1,000 miles, 1,000 kilometers and 12 hours. The distances ranged from one mile to 1,000 kilometers and the speeds, which included an 85.8 mile-per-hour average for the 1000-mile distance, ranged from well over 80 to 93.03 for the new 5-kilometer record. Temperature conditions were unusual, dropping, after nightfall, as much as 50 degrees from the noon high in the desert sun.

At the annual annual meeting of the vestry of St. Thomas' Church it was reported that during the year the church was renovated and the organ remodelled at a cost of $1,000. The greater portion of the amount has already been paid by subscriptions, and the balance has been provided for. During the year the balance due on improvements made to the rectory two years ago has been paid off. Yearly the portion of the church property free of debt by means of gifts have been made to the church during the year and resolutions of thanks to the donors were unanimously adopted. The gifts were as follows: Mr. H. Corby, memorial window; Mrs. (Dr.) Clinton, memorial altar. Smart, communion rail and litany desk. Altar Guild, rich altar cloth beautifully worked by Miss Barber; Mr. Henry Clapp and family, two service books for use on altar, desk and prayer stall; the Misses Hall, memorial pulpit; Mr. A. I. Bird, hymn board. The Church during the year gave the following gifts: To the church of England at Bancroft, a pulpit; to Collins' Bay Mission, a small organ; to St. John's Church, Belleville, an altar; to St. Church of England at Tweed, a credence table.

The Rev. E. W. Baker, M.A., B.D., at one time pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church in this city, will receive the degree of D.D. at the convocation of Victoria College on Tuesday.

Congratulations to Mr. Harry Alford, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Alford, upon his success in passing his examinations at the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, Toronto.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club will be held at Hambly's on the evening of May 4th.

April 30th, 1885, Snow storm all day. Six inches of snow fell. Icicles hung from houses. Sowing out and place in your archives. Spring work such as ploughing, seeding, and garden making was unavoidably suspended yesterday by an unusual and rather heavy fall of snow. The ground was soft and wet, so that a good deal of the first to fall melted as it fell. The storm set in during the afternoon and continued through the greater part of the night. This morning the sky was bright and clear and not less than two inches of snow covered the earth. The warm sun soon converted it to slush when it quickly disappeared.

NEWARK BEARS WIN TWIN BILL FROM TORONTO

Double Defeat Drops The Canadians to Fourth Place

HOMERS COUNT

Baltimore Has Knocked 35 in 14 Games Played

(By The Associated Press)

Newark Bears are still winning the close ones and that's reason enough for their present exalted position at the top of the International league standings.

The Bears moved up Toronto Maple Leafs in both ends of a Sunday double-header, 9-7 and 10-2, to boost their season's record to 11 victories and three defeats. Seven of Carlton Molesworth's men by one-run margin. The Bears had to travel 10 innings before Merrill May's single drove in the winning run in the first game. A four-run outburst by Newark in the last half of the eighth had sent the game into extra innings. The second game was a breeze for Van Mungo, who also allowed only five hits and was given home-run support by Georgy McQuinn, Ernie Koy and Bill Knickerbocker, each homer with the bases loaded in the second really decided the battle. The double defeat dropped Toronto to fourth place, behind Baltimore's Orioles and Montreal Royals.

Baltimore, walloping Buffalo twice, 13-4 and 6-3, clouted six more homers to bring its total for the season to 35 in 14 games. Eddie Mayo hit three on successive times at bat in the first game; Roy Gilson contributed another and Woody Abernathy hit one in each game. George Darrow and Harry Chmielewski took care of the Orioles pitching and had no troubles.

Montreal took two falls out of the Syracuse Stars, winning the opener 8-4 as Jimmy Ripple connected for a home run, double and triple, and the nightcap 4-3 behind Harry Smythe's six hit pitching.

Albany pounded out 14 hits to outpoint Rochester 9-7) in a free-swinging first game but the Red Wings came back to snare the second duel 4-1 as Tony Kaufmann allowed only six hits. Johnny Mize of Rochester was the hitting star of the day with a home run, a double and three singles.

Uncertainties of Baseball Illustrated by Standings of Teams in the American

Teams Picked For Top Now in Second Division

CARDINALS SLUMP

Rookie Pitchers Still Dominate Both Circuits

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

The uncertainties of baseball—which go a long way toward making it a great game—seldom have been better illustrated than in the current American League race.

In less than two weeks of campaigning Cleveland Indians and St. Louis Browns have run true to form, the Indians by racing to the top of the standing and the Browns by sliding to seventh place. But all the rest have been taking part in a round of upsets.

The slump of Detroit's champion Tigers, who tumbled to the cellar only to climb to sixth place yesterday by defeating Cleveland 5-4 for their third victory and the Indians' second defeat, is just one example. For six straight games last week the Tigers just couldn't do anything right. Then they bestirred themselves to do some real hitting behind young Joe Sullivan who made his first major league start before a crowd of 26,000.

Detroit collected 12 blows, including Hank Greenberg's homer, while Sullivan not only hurled effectively but drove in two runs.

The Red Sox, who sailed into first place at the start, continued their tumble into the second division as they made three more errors for a total of 16 in four games, wasted a lot of hits and took a 5-3 beating from the Senators.

Chicago Challenges Indians.

Chicago's White Sox, another big surprise, continued their heavy slugging to challenge Cleveland's lead when they made seven hits and five errors by opponents good for a 6-4 victory over the Browns. One of the blows was Zeke Bonura's sixth circuit swat and the club's fourteenth within a week. John Whitehead, a rookie hurler, pitched steadily for his third straight triumph.

The Yankees maintained their third-place hold on Washington by downing the Athletics 7-5, largely because of Earle Combs' homer with the bases full.

The Giants, who took the National League lead Saturday, pulled further ahead of Brooklyn when they blanked the Phillies 3-0 on Hal Schumacher's one-hit pitching.

A doubtful single by Orville Jorgens, which might easily have been scored as an error, and a ninth inning walk spoiled a perfect game.

The Dodgers, meanwhile took a 5-3 lacing from the Pittsburg Braves when they failed to hit Bob Smith in the pinches while Boston made its 11 blows off Van Mungo count. The National League sound sensation, rookie Cy Blanton of Pittsburgh, rang up his third straight victory 3-2 at the expense of the Cardinals and Dizzy Dean. Blanton allowed eight hits while Lefty Vaughan aided Dean for a homer, double and single.

A crowd of 29,514 paid customers turned out at Cincinnati to see the aspiring Reds lose to the Cubs 4-1 on a three-run ninth inning rally and the five hit hurling of Bill Lee. The attendance was 2,000 better than that of the opening day.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

By The Associated Press

Hal Schumacher, Giants — Shut out Phillies with one scratch hit and one walk.

Jake Powell, Senators—Led attack on Red Sox with double and single, scoring twice.

Bill Lee, Cubs—Limited Reds to five hits and fanned seven.

Arky Vaughan, Pirates—Clouted homer, double and single against Cardinals.

John Whitehead and Zeke Bonura, White Sox—Whitehead gave nine hits to St. Louis for third victory; Bonura his sixth homer of season.

Frank Hogan, Braves—Pounded Brooklyn pitching for four straight hits.

Hank Greenberg, Tigers—Smacked homer and double in triumph over Indians.

Earl Combs, Yankees—His home run with bases full led to victory over Athletics.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

One week from today, May 6th, the King's Silver Jubilee, numerous sporting organizations throughout the Dominion will capitalize on the proclaimed holiday and commence out-of-doors activities. For instance a rather unique relay race is being run between Toronto and Ottawa by the members of the Gladstone A. C. of Toronto, who, incidentally, are celebrating their 25th anniversary at the same time. The team, composed of 30 middle-distance and marathon runners from the club, will leave Toronto on May 6th on the start of their 295 mile grind to the Capital City. The runners have applied to Mayor Simpson, for permission to carry Toronto's contribution of $10,000 for the Canoer Fund in cheque form. Seven motor cars will accompany the runners, who will traverse from five to 20 miles, according to the class of runner. This is one of the longest relays on record and doubtlessly the plodders will pass through Belleville late Saturday night.

After a lapse of some weeks local activities loom on the horizon this week, starting with the opening of the Wall Street softball loop at the Dodger Field tonight. Saturday evening see the preliminaries of the city swimming championships open at the Albert College pool, while on Friday night the fistic will assume the spotlight. Then on this same evening the same evening the wrestlers are returning to town with another Klwanis charity card featuring Walter Parnell and Al Dunlop. (This one should be a honey). Next Monday the King's Jubilee, King Baseball makes its initial bow of the season with an exhibition game. The local soccer team has opened negotiations for their first game of the season for the same day. If arrangement can be satisfactorily made Tremeire Clem Allen may stage another of his amateur boxing bouts, that evening also. With a couple of meetings tossed in, the week looks to be one of interest for local sport fans. Taking advantage of the excellent weather conditions, local tennis and golf players were out in force, over the week end, as were the softballers.

In regard to the wrestlers, Chairman George Lee assured us that Friday night's bouts would get away to the advertised time. "We ran into that Friday night's delay was nothing short of a black eye to our fans," said Lee, "and we can be said the wrestlers could not do themselves justice either as they were forced to jump into the ring after spending over five hours cramped in an automobile Our next show will start on time, as the wrestlers will be in town at least six hours prior to the bouts", added Mr. Lee as he intimated, that some new faces would be seen during the preliminaries. Belleville local fans will be afforded the privilege of seeing no less a personage than Ernest "Big Train" Cavalier in a local wrestling ring this spring. The Kirkland Lake boy continues to coach scher and are awaiting his reply. Following last Friday night's bouts we learned that Rob Pearce, world's champion sculler is at present training at the Argonaut Club stadium in Toronto and may get into the game soon. Pearce's name alone would add much to the prestige of the mat game in Canada. He is a fine specimen and undoubtedly he would doubtlessly make a formidable opponent for some present-day grapplers. Pearce may delay his wrestling debut until after the season by his professional sculling championship this summer.

Efforts are being put forward to have the local district juvenile lacrosse league composed of a team from Belleville, Trenton and one or three in Belleville, all players to be under the age of 18 years. Jo Lally,

DELAY ENTRIES IN SWIM MEET

Meet Open to Town Residents Attending B. C. I.

Although quite a number of entries have been already received at the Y. M. C. A. for the City Swimming Championships Meet being held on Thursday and Friday of this week at the Albert College Pool there are still quite a number who have intimated they intend taking part but have neglected to file their entry. No one will be allowed to enter the meet unless they have applied for entry by Wednesday evening May 1st.

In addition to making the swim open to residents of the city and vicinity, the committee have decided to accept the applications for entry of any student attending the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School who reside outside the city. With this extension of territory it is hoped to stimulate and speed up the entry for what should be one of the best swim meets that this city of ours ever witnessed.

Miss Didrikson Wins Golf Crown

Houston, Texas, April 29—(CP)—Mildred "Babe" Didrikson bore down the last inside of the women's United States Golf Championship in determined strides today, the Texas State crown perched upon her head.

The lean, muscular girl sensation of the last Olympics won the Texas title here Saturday with a show of steel-nerved golf and announced plans for polishing her game to national lustre.

Meantime it became known she was next in pursuit of supremacy in this latest sports field by the scorn of others who "Wham it down to play they all began to laugh" sort of thing.

After she had lifted the Texas title by shooting an eagle and a birdie on the 34th and 35th holes to win two and one over Mrs. Dan Chandler, prominent Texas golfer, Miss Didrikson explained "The big reason I am glad I won the championship."

"After I had won those Olympic events and had world records, I was that someday I would be National golf champion," she said. "People laughed and that hurt me."

CHANCE TO MAKE DREAM COME TRUE

When Babe Ruth, the King of Swat, was ill in New York in 1925 the boy in the above picture, Johnny Howe, then aged 10, resolved to be a big leaguer when he grew up. And that's what he is now, a performer deemed of such promise by the Cincinnati Reds as to be farmed out this year for seasoning.

COACH IS NAMED FOR SOCCER CLUB

Charles Kidd, Cardiff City, Trainer Will Have Charge

An announcement of paramount importance to local soccer fraternity was made today, when it was learned that Charles Kidd, ex-trainer of the Cardiff City soccer team in the first division of English football, had been named as trainer and coach of the Belleville United football team. Kidd is well known in football circles throughout the United Kingdom and will be a decided asset to the local soccer set up.

Another announcement was made by the Belleville United to the effect that all future practices and games are to be held on the old Cricket Field, St. Paul street. The acquisition of this ideal playing field was made possible through the generosity of Col. W. H. Ponton, K.C. who donated the use of the field gratis to the soccer team.

Practices will be held in the future on the team's new playing field starting this evening. Negotiations to open the current season with a football game on Monday, May 6th in the King's Silver Jubilee, have been

Cornwall lacrosse stick manufacturer, will supply sticks to these kids at a figure far below cost price while the obstacles of other paraphernalia could easily be hurdled providing the proper effort is put forth. Harry Rice, editor of the Trenton Courier-Advocate, is boosting juvenile lacrosse in Trenton and can be depended upon to put a team on the field. Of course the local Asjima Club is going to sponsor an intermediate team locally and play their O.A.L.A. games in the Arena as usual. These juvenile kids could play their games at the Arena prior to regular intermediate fixtures. Incidentally we understand there is a movement on foot to change the name of the Asjima Club in the near future. The Royal A. C. has been suggested as the new moniker. The move looks like a good one as the majority of the sport fans cannot even pronounce Asjima, nor do they know for what it stands. (We're in the latter class.)

Dr. Van Blaskee, chairman of the re-stocking committee of the Belleville Anglers' Association announced today that large shipments of government fry had been received and deposited in adjacent lakes and streams. Speckled trout, brown trout, grey trout and pike constituted the shipment. The assured re-stocking of local lakes and streams by the Game and Fish-ery Department will naturally elevate the angling qualities of local waters, just one of the many features being supported by the local anglers' club, who held forth at the Armouries for their final casting practice on Wednesday night. "Then for that elusive trout, boys."

Weather permitting the Stewart-Warners will practice every night this week and again on Saturday afternoon in preparation for a possible game on the King's Jubilee. Bill Mills announced this morning, that all positions were still vacant and invited all aspiring belligerents to attend every practice.

Personals

Miss Aletha Chapman has returned to Windsor to resume her duties on the teaching staff after spending the Easter holidays with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Chapman, 2 Catherine Street.

Mr. Ambrose Doyle who has been a patient in Hotel Dieu in Kingston for the past few weeks is slowly recovering from burns received last September when his threshing machine was destroyed.

On Friday evening friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Clark, Bridge West, to wish them well on their departure for their new home in Corryville Place. Mr. Mont. Barlow expressed the regrets of the company at their departure from the city and Mrs. Percy Henthorn presented Mrs. Clark with a beautiful silver relish dish. Several numbers added to the enjoyment of the evening after which dainty refreshments were served.

Mrs. Laurie Lewis was hostess at a charming tea party at her home on Friday afternoon under the auspices of the Young Women's Guild of John Street Church for the Help Society. The guests were received by Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. J. R. McIntosh, president of the Society. The tea table was very dainty with its centrepiece of pansies and roses; yellow and mauve tapers were used. Mrs. A. Chambers, Mrs. George Ferguson and Mrs. H. R. Gibson poured tea and members of the Guild assisted with the serving in the dining room and library. Mrs. Allan Hitchon was in charge of the home-cooking table which was patronized by many.

Weddings

SHOREY—BEAT

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Shorey, 29 Bleecker Street, city, on Saturday afternoon a wedding was solemnized when their son, Maurice H. Shorey, was wed to Bray, daughter of Mrs. Carl Kessler, also of this city, were united in marriage. In the presence of a number of relatives the ceremony was performed by Rev. J. B. Mayhew, pastor of the Tabernacle United Church.

Miss Helen Clement was bridesmaid while Mr. Ray Dafoe did honors for the groom. Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served. The bride received many gifts, many beautiful and useful gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Shorey have taken up their residence in the city.

"TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION" FOR PAST 25 YEARS"

Then ALL-BRAN Brought Welcome Relief

Read this voluntary letter from Mr. Lecour: "I have been troubled with constipation" for the past 25 years. I tried practically every cathartic without results.

"Recently, I determined to give Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a fair trial. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has not only helped me, I believe it is an actual relief for chronic constipation."—Mr. Henry E. Lecour. Address upon request.

"Due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. It also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle—and safe for normal individuals. Often more effective than "bulk" in fruits and vegetables, as it does not break down within the body.

Isn't this natural food pleasanter than patent medicines? Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

PLAY PRESENTED AT THOMASBURG

Thomasburg—On Tuesday evening April 23rd the Oddfellow's Hall at Thomasburg was well filled with an enthusiastic audience to enjoy the play "All on Account of Polly" given by the Young People of Carmel United Church under the auspices of Christ Church Women's Auxiliary. The Rector Rev. F. C. Beazer acted as chairman.

The cast of the play was introduced by the director Mrs. Wallace Simmons as follows:—

Ralph Beverley, Polly's guardian—Mr. Percy Reynolds.

Baldwin Beverley, his son—Mr. Glen Patterson.

Peter Hartleigh, a prospective son-in-law—Mr. Clare Horton.

Silas Young, a money lender — Mr. Vernal Brindle.

Harkins, the butler at the Beverley home—Mr. Harold Brintnell.

Tommy, a poor little boy—Master Ruby Brintnell.

Ruby, Tommy's sister — Miss Ruth Brintnell.

Polly Perkins, a small town girl —Miss Fern Patterson.

Jane Beverley, Ralph's wife — Miss Mildred Jones.

Hortense Beverley, the elder daughter—Miss Iva Horton.

Geraldine Beverley, the younger daughter—Miss Margaret Reynolds.

Mrs. Herbert Featherstone, one of the four hundred—Miss Helen Meyers.

Mrs. Clarence Chadfield, a climber—Miss Mabel Cumming.

Marie, the maid at the Beverley home—Miss Letta Pirtle.

Miss Hornbrandt, a manicurist—Miss Mary Hicks.

Miss Bushnell, a hair dresser — Miss Ruby Stover.

The first act takes place in the living room of the Beverley home in the morning. Ralph announces to his wife and family that he has been granted the guardianship over Polly Perkins and her money. Polly arrives to find the house quite upset but Mrs. Beverley soon straightens matters. While Mrs. Beverley and the family are absent dressing, Marie, the French maid and Jane Ireland, Polly the family history.

The second act takes place the same day in the afternoon. Mr. Beverley has been met by his creditors, at last decides to ask Polly if he may use her money. This she quite readily consents to, saying she loves to help the poor and needy. Polly soon returns from the bathing beach with two little ragamuffins, Ruby and Tommy. Marie assists Polly in cleansing the children and preparing food for them. Baldwin Beverley, the idolized son who has already fallen in love with Polly, decides to help by taking the children to buy new clothes. Just before Baldwin and the children left, the society friends of Mrs. Beverley call, and are quite embarrassed to find these little ragamuffins in the living room.

The third act takes place in the same room one month later. The Beverley family and Polly are real happy. Baldwin has become a very popular clerk in a grocery store, the two daughters Hortense and Geraldine have become quite industrious. Mrs. Beverley has also learned to do her own work, the butler has been discharged, Peter has several notices mailed them, and boy friend of the girls also decides to look for work under Baldwin's direction. Everything ends happily and the play was well given.

Before the play community music was given by Mr. Fred Porter at the piano, Mr. Clarence Mouck, guitar and Mr. Albert Arbuckle played the violin. Between acts members of the cast gave piano duets.

Rev. F. C. Beazer moved a vote of thanks to the Carmel Young People for staging their play here.

SUNSHINE MISSION BAND

On Wednesday, April 24th the members of Sunshine Mission Band at West Huntingdon, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Sills. Dinner was served at noon and a splendid day of work was accomplished. A quilt was quilted. Five scrap books were also completed. A toy aeroplane was made and painted to be sent later to the Home Mission Fields in the North West.

There was also a perfect attendance of the Mission Band members also several notices mailed themselves of the opportunity of helping the junior members in their missionary work.

The Sunshine Mission Band of West Huntingdon met on Sunday afternoon with a splendid attendance. Miss Alma Trumpour presided and opened the meeting with hymn "Jesus Christ Has Risen Today," followed by the Lord's Prayer. The roll call was responded by a memorized verse of Scripture. Lorna Wright gave a reading "It is Easter Time," Russell Sills read the story of "Jesus With Two Friends" which told the story of Jesus meeting and walking along the road to Emmaus with James and John after the Resurrection.

The Mission Band hymn entitled "Royal Mission Banders" was sung and the meeting closed with all repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

PASTORS' TRANSFER GIVEN APPROVAL

Nature Builds Your Body—

but you supply the materials.

Health suffers if you run short of iron

Your food and drink are the only materials Nature gets to maintain your bodily strength and well-being. But the tragedy of modern foods is their shortage of iron. Even slight shortage for each person, then put every one of them on a 30-day treatment. The preparation he gave them was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (called pink because they have a pink sugar coating). Almost one month they returned and their blood was examined. again.

Rich supplies of iron for 30 days had greatly improved their health. Blood tests proved value of the treatment

When an authority counts the number of red corpuscles and tests the exact amount of iron in the blood . . . nobody can deny it because the microscope proves it! And the gains made by the 36 persons during their 30-day treatment were all recorded! By definitely increasing both the red corpuscles and the iron, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills proved a most reliable tonic and blood builder. This test is a confirmation of what this fine old remedy can do for you, if . . . as is likely . . . you need iron.

Wouldn't you like to feel really strong and vigorous again? Wouldn't you like to eat well, sleep soundly, take a keen interest in life again? Then you . . . Then put yourself on a 30-day treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Directly you begin taking this reliable old preparation, the reconstructive process will start. The blood will grow richer . . . will carry more vitality . . . and your own feelings will react pleasantly. Old aches and off days will give way to new vigor and brighter outlook on life. You will know once again the joy of possessing that priceless treasure . . . health! Full size box 50c. 3401

An iron deficiency in the blood is low stamina, pale skin, headaches, indigestion and simple anaemia; then develops into serious ailments, if not checked.

40 out of 45 people in a recent test were short of iron

One month's treatment helped them back to health and vigour

A tiny drop of blood from each individual in the above group was examined under a powerful microscope. In every instance the blood was thin and pale; later it should have been, due to the shortage of iron. The authority who conducted the tests recorded the exact amount of the

MANY PARTIES IN HONOR OF HOLIDAY GUESTS

Picton—Many parties in honor of holiday visitors have characterized the Easter season.

On Thursday evening Mrs. Ralph Welbanks entertained at bridge the happy arrangements of a farewell party at Verecville in honor of Miss Reta Welbanks who is leaving shortly for Toronto to train in nursing.

Miss Rose McKibbon, a teacher in Queen Victoria School, Belleville, who is spending her vacation with her mother Mrs. Herman McKibbon King St., entertained at a charmingly arranged bridge party at her home on Friday evening.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Gerald McCaw, and Mrs. Thos. Shannon, were joint hostesses at a surprise party at the latter's home, 208 Main St., west, honouring Mrs. John Goodwin. Five tables of guests spent a happy evening with cards. At eleven o'clock supper was served, following which Mrs. Goodwin was presented with a night-table lamp by Miss Edith Herrington and Mrs. Gerald McCall expressed the good wishes of all present to the guest of honor. A social hour followed when Miss Marie Fisher gave two very pleasing recitations, followed by a duet by Mrs. McCaw and Miss Margaret Graves.

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Graves and Miss Margaret Graves attended a very enjoyable joint birthday party in Bellville, arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Fleury at their home, 10 Pine St., in honor of Mr. Ennis Graves and Master Bobby Fleury.

The Normalites will spend next week in ten rural schools, in the county to gain experience in rural school teaching.

Miss Marion Wycott will spend the week with Miss Graves at S.S. No. 4, Hallowell.

A sad note came to the attention of the town authorities over the Easter week-end, when a father and mother and three seven children were evicted from their tenant house. The owner of the house was hiring another man to work for him for the coming season and required the house.

The family were finally housed in what used to be the council chambers in the market building, and were provided with food but no stove. However, the kindly keeper of the latter's home, 208 Main St., west, honouring Mrs. John Goodwin. Five tables of guests spent a happy evening with cards. ## COMMUNITY NEWS — FROM ELDORADO

Eldorado—The regular meeting of the Eldorado and Union Young People's Society was held in the Eldorado United Church on Thursday evening, April 25th. There were a large number in attendance. The meeting was in charge of the Ministry Committee. Miss Florence Walker, who opened her program by singing hymn, "Shall be the tis that binds" and Rev. W. J. Fricker offered prayer. The Bible lesson, Matthew 13, 24-30 was read by Miss Bernis McCann.

The subject for the topic was based on "Trinidad". Miss Grace Robinson gave a splendid paper on "Trinidad Immigration" and "Trinidad Religion" by Florence Walker. A paper on the "Horse of Trinidad" was well given by Miss June Strobe. Miss Rose Thompson rendered a pleasing solo "Isle of Capri" and Miss Gladys Martin and Pearl Snipp favored with a duet "Gate of the Ivory Palaces" which was very much enjoyed. The business period was in charge of the president Mr. Vernon Strobe, after the Mizpah Benediction a contest was enjoyed.

LATE JOHN DELINE

On Sunday, April 21st, 1935, there passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charlie Dipnor on Madoc Township, John Deline, in his eighty-fifth year.

The funeral was held from the residence of his daughter to Eldorado United Church on Wednesday, April 24th. Rev. Mr. Brazill, Rector of Parkhouse Church, Bannockburn had charge of the service.

Interment was made in the Eldorado cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs Charles Dipnor, Ross Glover, George Love, Oscar Taylor, Fred McCaw, Ernest Thaner.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holmes and family accompanied by Mr. Ellwood Adams of Trenton are spending a few days visiting relatives here.

Miss Annie Fox of Toronto spent a couple of days visiting her sister Mrs. George Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Gordon and family were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wanamaker one day last week.

The Misses Smith of Madoc are spending their Easter holidays at the home of Mrs. Charlie D. McCann.

Mr. Hlaha Post of Toronto is visiting relatives here this week and attended Church on Chauncy-Post wedding.

A slight error in the name of the occupant of the house of Mrs. MacDougall, was made in last week's news of this column. Mr. and Mrs. Sage should have read Mr. and Mrs. Bell.

At the Orange Hall, Eldorado on Wednesday evening, a very successful entertainment was presented by the Young People of St. Peter's Anglican church. When they presented their 3 act play entitled "The old home place". The three scenes taking place in the garden of Mr. Grant Farrow's home. The stage was beautifully decorated with flowers and potted plants, suitable for the occasion. Mr. Allen Harvey in his usual interesting manner gave two humorous readings "An Irish Proposal" and "A Yankee in love" between the acts.

The cast was as follows:
Grant Farrow— Rod Sagar.
Dr. Marsh—Allen Johnson.
Vesta Mason—Mrs. Allen Love.
Helen Mason—Mrs. R. Sagar.
Reginald VanHoy—Allen Love.
Matilda—Miss Alex Johnson.
Hankins—Charlie West.

Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne, directed the play. The play was well presented and was very much enjoyed by the large crowd in attendance.

GOLF FACTS

by Alex J. Morrison

I've noticed a great many players gripping the club while holding it off the ground. By so doing they have about one chance in a million to get the club head in the proper position in relation to the clubface.

The angle of the clubface in relation to the position of the left hand is important. It has a lot to do with both distance and direction. The rest of your swing can be perfect, but if your hands are at the wrong angle the shot can't be successful.

The best thing to do is to make a habit of letting the club head rest on the ground in a natural position and then placing your hands. Don't lift the club off the ground as you go to place your right hand.

Have the clubhead resting on the ground and undisturbed until you've placed both hands on them, lift the club and waggle it a bit to loosen up your wrists.

Educational Experiment Tried With Normal School Students

Will Spend One Week in Rural School Assisting

It has for some time been felt, that young teachers coming from the Normal Schools, since most of them will have to begin their teaching experience in Rural Schools, begin without sufficient knowledge of rural conditions. The young teacher, who is placed in a graded school system with a sympathetic principal to advise her, does very well, but the young beginner in a rural school has to work out her own salvation, with only the help, of her inspector, who has over one hundred others to supervise, is able to give her by occasional visits.

To overcome this handicap various plans have been suggested, and this year Peterboro Normal School, is making this experiment. For the week following the Easter Vacation, each student from that school, will spend the time in a rural school under supervision of the regular teacher. These rural schools have been carefully selected, so that the students may get as much as possible out of the time spent. They will by actual experience learn how to keep the registers of attendance, and other reports; they will observe the teaching by a successful teacher, and will during the work have charge of the school themselves for one day under the supervision of the regular teacher. It is hoped that this actual contact with conditions as they are likely to meet them when they later take charge of a school of their own, will help them to avoid, what has often been looked upon as the inevitable loss when there is a change of teacher.

Opportune Time

This experiment is coming at a very opportune time, when the records of the month are being compiled. It will also mark the close of Educational Broadcasts arranged by the Department of Education, beginning on April 8th, and for which a number of schools are making arrangements to listen-in. It would be well for those who are making this arrangement to bear in mind that the broadcasts will be carried on under Daylight Saving Time, so that the first will begin at 2 p.m. for Standard Time, instead of at 1 p.m. as announced a short time ago.

Eleven of these young teachers will be observing in the Inspectorate of South Hastings, namely Maude Burke at Sidney Public; Emma Collett at No. 7 Thurlow; Margaret Donaldson at No. 4 Thurlow; Margery Keith at No. 5 Sidney; Emily Mallory at Johnstown; Clara Wilson at Bayside; Harry Bates at No. 17 Thurlow; Joseph Hay at The Air Port School; Kenneth Shapley at No. 24 Sidney; Helen Hart at No. 4 Sidney; Everett Ketchum at No. 20 Sidney. The regular teachers at these schools will receive no remuneration for their services in this connection, but are doing it purely in the interests of better training for the profession.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"A Notorious Gentleman"

The story of a man who confessed to one crime so that he could commit another.

There is a very fine line between love and hate.

This statement is an axiom in the realm of human emotions, but it was never more clearly demonstrated than in "A Notorious Gentleman," the thrilling drama now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

In the story Clayton Bradford (played by Jonney Blackrgg) Charles Bickford's enemy of many years, wins the hand of Helen Vinson, the girl whom both love, and immediately Bickford's feeling for her undergoes a complete change. A lawyer himself, versed in the devising of "tricky" defenses for clients undoubtedly guilty of murder, he plans an elaborate defense for his own crime, and then kills his rival. But all the evidence which he has so craftily created points to Miss Vinson as the murderess. She is made to appear as the chivalrous friend, vainly attempting to take on his own shoulders the blame for a crime apparently committed by the woman he loves. The working out of this clever plot is said to constitute a screen drama of unusual interest.

"A Notorious Gentleman" was directed by Edward Lasemmle, and the cast, in addition to Bickford, Miss Vinson and Blackmer, included Dudley Digges, Onslow Stevens and many other popular players.

"Woman Must Draw"

Fine fashions and feminine foibles provide the intriguing background for the cleverly constructed plot of "Women Must Dress" with Minna Gombell and Gavin Gordon the second attraction on this same bill.

While the new Monogram film is of surprising excellence from the standpoint of story, direction and acting, it has an added allure in its varied and lavish display of latest creations in feminine finery which makes it especially attractive to women.

Outstanding among the members of the well selected cast is Minna Gombell in the starring role. Miss Gombell handles the difficult role of a wife and mother who changes from a plain middle housewife to an ultra smart business woman and fashion designer.

The star is aided by Gavin Gordon, playing the erring husband, Lenita Lane, as the other woman, Hardie Albright, as a young physician and Suzanne Kaaren, as a flighty daughter.

The picture is also marked by its introduction of a beauty contest winners representing various sections of the United States. Their screen debut shows much promise. They are Harriet deBusman, grand prize winner, Madelyn Earle, Anne Johnston, Anne Kasser, Nell Rhoades and Fay Hammar.

"Cat 99" Thrill-Filled Police Drama on Twin-Bill

Fred MacMurray, handsome Paramount player, who proved his romantic qualifications in "The Gilded Lily", emerges now as an adventurous, two-fisted fighter in the leading role of Paramount's "Car 99", which comes to the Belle Tomorrow (Thursday) and Wednesday, matinee and evening. This story of the famous Michigan State Police features MacMurray, Sir Guy Standing, Ann Sheridan, William Frawley, Dean Jagger and Martha Sleeper.

"Car 99" is based on true incidents in the experience of this great criminal fighting force. MacMurray portrays a young rookie engaged by Sir Guy Standing, whose heart to join the State Police. He emerges from the rigorous training

Otto Kruger, Robert Montgomery, Helen Hayes in Hugh Walpole's "Vanessa; Her Love Story," coming to the Belle tomorrow.

● Will Rogers is fond of saying: "Well, all I know is what I see in the paper". It is substantially true that all most of us know about current topics is what we see in the daily newspaper.

An unusual bond of friendship unites the reader and his newspaper, a relationship cemented by that wonderful thing we know as "News".

What is it?

News might be called the theme song of life. It is the sound of civilization's machinery in motion. It is the speed gauge of progress. It is the background of all thinking, all planning and all knowledge of current human affairs.

Because of this quality, when white paper leaves the printing presses carrying "the news", it has become an active force in its city, its country and the world.

In such an atmosphere of motion and vitality the Daily Newspaper places within the hands of maker and seller the power of contact with this new-reading public—a power that is limited only by the advertiser's own ability to use it intelligently.

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—Despite a slump in the price of silver, the metal stocks pressed higher on the Industrial Board of the Toronto Exchange today. In the afternoon trying also speeded up in the distillery issues and these closed higher while only the rest of the board loses narrowly exceeded gains. The day's turnover was down from last week's average.

A weak tone for the metals unsettled the Industrial Board in slow trading today. Consolidated Smelters led down three points to 35¾ and gains in nonferrous issues early afternoon while International Nickel was off a small fraction from Saturday's close. Brazilian and O.P.R. dropped small fractions each.

Volume improved in the liquor group with Industrial gains showing for Distillers Seagrams and Industrial Alcohol and in the oils a soft tone prevailed both International Petroleum and British American Oil selling lower. In the Utilities Bell Telephone sold higher and Consumers Power, Brazil, steel and construction issues were without feature.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Apr. 29 (CP) — Silver shares controlled to hold the chief interest in the gainers minutes market today with selling just about balancing the volume of buying orders. Prices swung up and down nervously through the session and closed not far off the dizzier changes that Base Metals were mildly weak on a much smaller turnover as the sagging golds displayed more weakness than strength. Over the board recessions and outstanding gains at the close.

The sharp drop in the price of silver was quite a jolt for the silver shares and they dropped quickly at the opening but swung back up around noon on short covering only to weaken again when the buying slowed up. Castle saw a low of 1.05, off 11 cents and Eldorado sold down to 2.31, off 15 cents. They had steadied at a better level around mid-afternoon.

Gold and Base Metal stocks were slow and barely steady. Hollinger weakened to 16.15 and Teck Hughes to 4.15. Moneta was a strong spot in the secondary gold group, selling up to 2.35 and Wayside was a feature of the penny golds, trading relatively at an advance of about five cents.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, April 29—(AP)—Most financial markets, although displaying considerable caution, still maintained a fairly bullish undertone in today's proceedings.

Among Dominion shares, McIntyre ruled unchanged while Canadian Pacific and International Nickel were a shade lower, on the high. Hiram Walker and Distillers Shares also yielded slightly. Canadian government bonds were steady. Canadian funds improved 3-32 of a cent at 99 17-32 cents.

Shares that worked up fractionally to a point or more included Amerada, Seaboard Oil, Standard of California and New Jersey, Cerro de Pasco, Howe Sound, American Smelting, King, Kresge, Woolworth, Sears Roebuck, National Biscuit, American Home Products, Common and Preferred and National Distillers.

"LEST WE FORGET"

Whatever may be said of the picture of this name now showing at the Belle Theatre, it is hard to deny that it is propaganda for war. For not all the books that have been written against war, nor all the sermons that have been preached against it, tell as much of its fearful pity. This is not a picture to pander to the rabid or the sensational, nor is it compounded of that mere emphasis upon horror and headlines which has marked so cinema versions of so many war books. What is given here is an actual and faithful photographic record of things that were done and endured by Canada's finest, and of blood in those four dread years in France—a record of human heroism and sacrifice with sobs and scenes as poignant as to be almost beyond belief.

Watching this procession pass by on the screen, one seems to hear the two overpowering emotions; pride in the valor and fires of men who could live, endure or die amid such horrors, and hate that a world, supposedly Christian and civilized, should permit such things to happen. Canada's finest, and their own blood in those four dread years in France—a record of human heroism and sacrifice with sobs and scenes as poignant as to be almost beyond belief.

WOMAN AVIATRIX COMPLETES TRIP

Jean Batten Arrives at Croydon From Australia

Croydon, England, April 29.—(CP Cable) — Jean Batten, young New Zealand aviatrix, arrived at Croydon at 5 a.m. today, successfully completing a round trip from Australia.

She was the first woman to fly alone to Australia and back by plane. The outward flight took fourteen days and 22 hours to establish the woman's record of Amy Johnson, who flew the trip in 19 days.

Miss Batten is the second woman to make a return flight from Australia. The first was Mrs. Bert Hinkler of Australia, who accomplished it in 1932, when the flight took 67 days. Miss Batten took 17 days, 16 hours and 15 minutes on the return trip, beaten her own record but for engine trouble on the last lap over France.

She declared her flight was not a publicity stunt and said she was not "just flying home". She was over six feet ahead of Mrs. Mollison's flight four years earlier.

LATE LORD HYDE LIVED IN ONTARIO

Toronto, Apr. 29 (CP)—Lord Hyde, killed in a hunting accident in South Africa, spent part of his early childhood in the wooded valleys of Ontario, home of Pickering on the Kingston highway. The infant was brought to Ontario by his father, the Earl of Clarendon, because the rest family to settle in the province were distinguished Canadians. The boy took out in August, 1914, a short time after their arrival.

The home was left furnished, in care of servants until 1922 when it was sold to the late Victor Ross.

BEAVER TRAPPING CASE

Sudbury, Ont., Apr. 29 (CP)—Matthew Kaggaina and William Bearfoot, Treaty Indians from Birch Island, found today their treaty rights for fishing and hunting only extended over crown lands and when they trapped for bears at Turbine they were breaking the law.

The two were suspended sentence when they appeared in court charged with illegal trapping and hunting.

Hymns are Played and Sung As Doomed Man Stands at Window

Prisoners Attend Special S. A. Service in Prison Yard

PRISONER HUMS 'AIR

Sacred music and the airs of old and familiar hymns welled in resonant volume from the stone-walled prison exercise yard at the county jail on Sunday morning as the Salvation Army Band under the direction of Bandmaster David Wardle played the specially arranged concert for Harold W. Vermilyea, rendered over three quarters of an hour of sacred music. Out of the stone-walled quadrangle the strains of music rose and was heard in the court house by officials.

Standing in the north cell block corridor overlooking the jail yard below in which the eighteen musicians comprising the band stood, Vermilyea peered through the heavily-barred windows, keenly enjoying the concert. At times he accompanied the soothsaying by his band through the familiar strains of some hymn or sacred song.

Vermilyea, known to the guard as he had been since his incarceration, has accompanied in the cell block by Adjutant W. A. Martin, the prisoner's pastor's counsel since he has been quartered in the jail. Before about the band in the exercise yard Vermilyea selected religious tunes prisoners confined in the jail. They had requested by letter, asking before the opening of the service and on benches.

The band included the playing of the hymns, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross", played to the tune of Remington and sung by the Londonderry Air, "In the Garden", "For You I am Praying" and the chorus of male voices "Take Salvation" and "What a Friend We Have in Jesus". Mr. W. J. Hart read the scripture lesson after which Bandsergeant Knight of Toronto, spoke.

Commissioner Vermilyea also observed his 50th birthday cake, purchased by Governor H. Hendrick, Wednesday. Donations of jail officials was presented to prisoners, some portions of it were distributed among the guards and officials. Several other handsful from the remainder of the prisoner to mark the occasion.

Police News

Local police were kept quite busy over the week-end answering calls and investigating the many infractions of the law. Five drunks were arrested, four of the men spending a few hours in the police cells were allowed to return to their respective homes after being constructed to appear in today's police court.

Twenty-five transients were afforded sleeping quarters at the police station over the week-end, sixteen on Saturday night and nine on the Sabbath. A rather disturbing situation arose at the police station last night, when a man and his wife accosted a police officer and address as Toronto, presented themselves as guests at a warm night's lodging. After serious and usual the night sergeant provided the man with a bed in the cell block, while the little girl was taken to the local Children's Shelter and put to bed, The pair continued their eastward journey today.

Shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday, Belleville, reported the theft of his bicycle last night. The bicycle was left parked on Pinnacle Street while the young man attended divine service. Upon his return the bicycle was found to be missing. Later when going over their beat the police found the cycle abandoned near the upper Bridge. It was apparently given and put to bed, The pair continued their eastward journey today.

Early Saturday night the authorities were called to the corner of Bridge and Coleman Streets to quell a small riot that was in progress. Upon the arrival of the constables, two residents were arrested and charged with insubordination and also of disturbing the peace. Magistrate Masden on the bench experienced considerable difficulty in the matter of motorists breaking motor and traffic rules by-laws. The motor car was removed from its parking place, opposite No. 2 Fire Hall, while others were warned in relationship to parking too close to fire hydrants. Still another was stopped for driving with four in the front seat. Charges in some cases will likely follow.

Geo. Symonds and W. Babcock, two local fishermen, reported the theft of fishing lines, hooks and sinkers from their fishing shanty along the bay shore. Later the police apprehended another fisherman in possession of some of the tackle. He asserted the authorities he had found the line and hook lying nearby. The matter is still being investigated.

No Free Necessary, Says Hand

Toronto, April 29 (CP) — Capt. Earl Hand, D.F.O., who established a reputation as a war-time aviator and who has been flying ever since, said he could see no reason why so far "all the fuss" caused by revelation of plans of the United States Government for air bases in Canada area.

"Location of air bases doesn't mean a thing," said Capt. Hand. "With long range machines the United States could have her bases on the Gulf of Mexico and still reach Canada without difficulty. As a matter of fact, in war time the farther from enemy guns an air base is the better."

Capt. Hand pointed to Selfridge Field at Detroit and said "Here is a United States Army base fully equipped, one of the finest on the continent, within one hour by air from Toronto. Air ports at Albany Buffalo, Cleveland and Detroit could be transformed into military flying fields overnight. So why all this fuss because another air base is suggested?"

Profits FOR SALE

. . . If You Run A Business, This Message Is For You

YOU, as a business man, are interested in profits. We, as a newspaper, are interested in helping you get them. We believe that furnishing profit-building ideas to make our white space more valuable to you is one of the biggest jobs we can do.

No one knows better than we do that no two advertising problems are precisely alike. But long experience has given us a very wide understanding of the buying habits of people who read newspapers. And so every selling idea The Ontario Intelligencer offers you has been given the same test: Has it sold goods to newspaper readers or hasn't it? This testing saves you money. It avoids wasted effort. It lowers your year-round selling cost.

Famous Meyer Both Service Free to You!

Many of these selling ideas are twice-tested. They are the ideas furnished by the Meyer Both advertising service; ideas that have been developed after research on a nation-wide scale. They are selling goods right now for merchants all over the United States and Canada. No one else but The Ontario Intelligencer advertisers may use these Meyer Both tested ideas in Belleville. No one else may utilize the illustrations, copy suggestions, layouts and merchandising plans which are your simply for the asking.

We want you to feel free to call upon our staff for help whenever you have an unusual advertising problem. Satisfying you keeps us in bread and butter. And that's what we're in business for.

THE LOVE FLIGHT

by Janet Dacre

CHAPTER TWENTY

Anne, waiting in the drive near the garage for Carl, found the book he had referred to in the right hand front pocket of the car. She had the feeling, as she opened it, that she was being invited to enter a room heretofore forbidden and marked private. She leafed the pages slightly. She would have imagined delicate curios in a forbidden room the same way. A text book of medicine mechanics. Carl might as well have asked her to amuse herself with a tome in Sanskrit. She smiled as by her hands over the pages with the thought she might find some imprint of herself between the covers.

"All set!" Carl came toward her across the clipped grass. Carl? Or was this young stalking in blue flannels a stranger? Always, before, he had been in the sunlit blue uniform that appeared so ridiculous the first time she had seen him in the employment agency. The uniform was in no way a part of him. It was a disguise and a mark of it as a definite, a permanent setting. And here he was in loose dark flannels that only made him taller and squarer at the shoulders and made the fair hair seem ever with his fair hair and northern eyes.

Oh, he was a young earth-god all right. An earth-god with flowing body, and hair like the sands even when he bent it over a tire or a cranky carburetor. She was glad—glad. Glad that he was tall and straight and square at the shoulders, that he had those straightness in his eyes, that squareness to the chin. Glad that he could swing along with his head in the clouds. This, then, was the other man, the man behind the Carl Case mask.

"You've grown inches since you left a fire mother's house," she said, letting him see that the new Carl was admirable in her eyes.

He was puzzled by her warm gladness, because to him clothes were a necessity, not an indulgence. Except for the execrable blue uniform he was never conscious of them.

"I guess it's the flannels," she added, noting his puzzled frown.

"Oh, yes." He laughed, straightening his tie. "I'd forgotten you've never seen me except in uniform or clothes. That blue horrors bobs me off, outside of the shoes, underneath it commits. I've brought an extra jacket." He swung it over his back seat. "It's chilly on the road later."

Anne noticed that the coat was of camel's hair, a belted traveling type, well-worn, but the same was true of London label.

They dined outside, in a garden. A long way out, Anne did not care how far, with her there beside her, driving her into the night. The scent of a small palm-filched summer house in the garden mingled sweetly against the pests of the semitropics, but the screens of wire kept the mosquitoes at bay, and the effect of the night was perfectly preserved.

For Carl had ordered cocktails, a carafe of the shell plasa Carl had parked the car and they approached the subdued lights of the inn, Anne had felt hesitant—as she always does with an air! Gleaming yellow in the half darkness, it seemed to say, "I am for your betting, Servants en trance in the rear."

Carl caught her hesitancy, the thought behind it. He laughed, teasingly, not bitterly.

"Oh, I do, here. I know the proprietor. I'm known him since—for some years. We don't need to dine in the main hall. There are summer houses—"

"How did you know I was thinking—that?" The individual in search of the lone wolf she had set out to be, crouched back, a little fearful now that its hiding place was discovered.

"Ask me something easy," He was looking down at her, flattered to find himself, unwittingly, in the position of intruder. "Maybe we're hooked up on the same wire. I did not mean to listen in."

She laughed and slipped her hand under his arm. She didn't mind sharing her hiding place with him.

They were gay at sinner. They began with cocktails—rum and lemon juice shaken to an iced froth and poured into frosted glasses.

"A tonic, and delightful." Anne said, sipping from her glass.

"Nectar from Bimini." Carl said. The proprietor used to bring it over himself before repeal. Made a name for his place with these cocktails."

"Bimini." She lingered over the name. "It sounds as though it had been named by one of our modern jass composers."

"Islands cast up by the sea always have a fascination for me. I've been to Bimini. We might be there some day."

Anne thought: He's thrilled me in his future—"We might go!" He doesn't even realize he's gone into the plural without asking my consent.

"Yes," she said, softly, so as not to disturb his dream, "we might."

The dinner was excellent. Not extravagant, but well prepared. Case was a gentleman, in the sense of the word that her world called a gentleman. He could order a dinner with the knowledge of fine and delicate discernment of result. And he could dispatch it without being awkward. He had a hearty appetite and was solicious about its enjoyment. Funny how social strata might be tabulated by the use of a knife and a fork.

He wouldn't eat with the fellow, Anne kept telling herself, "if he'd spooned his potatoes and gravy and used his fingers for the short ribs."

But all the time she knew it would have made no difference.

"Tell me about Bimini," she said. She hoped he would tell her how she had happened to be there in the circumstances of his being. But he seemed to take that part of his adventure for granted.

"It's just a stretch of sand and rock drowning out there on the water. Very white and shining with the sun. And against the sky and white houses snuggled under them. A little village on its smaller island near a group of dark rocks. Some one had the imagination to name them the Hen and Chickens, one sizable rock and a number of small ones. Natives live there in the village. Negroes and a few white folk. The white-house tender and his black boys from the island and the fishing and sea-snails, which live in purple and gold and green shells that imprisoned the voice of the sea. You can hear it when you hold the empty shells to your ear."

"And the larger island, the real island?"

"It must have been fairly habitable before it was discovered by the tourists. And when I was there it was quite a handy oase for those who didn't believe in prohibition. Treatment was entirely noble. It was a little island on the edge of every rum runner. Eliminating the undesirable of the tourist swarm, it could once be a peaceful little haven for those who love the sea."

"We love it," Anne said. White houses snuggled under the palm trees, sliding into the water at high tide, and the tumbling blue ocean. Oh, well, one could dream. No law against dreams.

"How long do you think we'll last at Boia Grande?" The question came from Carl with the suddenness of a shot in the stillness.

"Why—why——" she stammered the ground that did need the quake——"I hadn't thought. That is—you've been with Madame for quite a while, haven't you? You're more or less of a fixture; she places great deal of dependence upon you. It's different with me. You know why we're risking our jobs, being together this way?"

"Our being together has nothing to do with it, as long as we do our work. Not to Madame, at any rate. But there are other considerations. Dolph has not forgotten his experience with you and his smile. And that fool Berta has the brains and the persistency of a starved black cat. We might manage the two of them if they're not too much pressure from the outside."

Carl knew about Dolph, then. Why—why—she had him, let him understand that so far as she was concerned, there were to be no secrets of their present between them?

"I've been thinking. I ought to pull out." Carl went on, "before I manhandle him. The temptation is too great. One of these days I'm bound to yield and I've a notion he will be very messy when I've finished. I wouldn't go, of course, and leave you, with him still here."

"But what are we to do?" Anne saw only helpless—a blank wall.

Red descended to Carl's face, rose up into the fringe of his hair.

"That's the hell of it!" he said. "To know you're a mark, to be afraid of you somewhere is the power to get out from under, but that you've been locked in—short! Damn the social system that coddles you and weakens you and then, when you're sort as sponge and cockaure as the devil himself, tosses you into the grist mill and shouts, 'There now, grind, or get ground!' Two years ago I'd have said, 'Get your hat, Anne. We're off for Bimini.' And right now Bimini might as well be one of the moons of Jupiter."

"I know." She reached across the table, shipped her hand into his palm. "Even the moons of Jupiter will not be for—for—as long. And I never Bimini for the present. I couldn't go, not just now, and let you told me to get my hat. I'm in the middle, Carl. I've got to know whether I'm a miller or only a part of the grist before I can be in the mill-stone. I shall never be happy again, not knowing."

"I'd rather be you than some other mill-race."

He fingers tightened about her hand until she had to bite her lips to keep from wincing.

"All right, Anne," he said, "I've almost finished a stiff course in mechanical engineering. When I get that under my hat, I mean to make progress with my backstroke."

"You will. I'm sure you will." Her spirit was nodding brightly at him, encouraging him.

"In the meantime, you're to keep an eye on the doings of young Dolph. If he breaks loose again, let me handle him. I'll keep myself I have a way with his kind."

"I'm not afraid of him," Anne said accordingly. "I shall try to keep clear of him."

"And if you can't?"

"Then I'll about 'Help' and you may come running with a club."

He held up his clenched fists so that they were even with his shoulders.

"Two clubs," he said. And then stuck his fists into his pockets rather shamefacedly. Threats sounded like boasts. "I must get you some of those flowers. They smell like wild honeysuckle"—sniffing the air—"to carry back with you. I've a hunch we'd better be getting back. It's a long way"—it's a long way to go, but storms travel fast down this way."

Anne rose, slowly, her limbs heavy with the wants to remain there in the scented night. But she could not remain, no more than could he. Not yet. So they must go back to the mill-stone, for they could have only fleeting glimpses of palm-thatched moons from the sea-girt island.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

One of the garage men was waiting for Carl Case at the servants' quarters when he had driven the car all into the drive.

"Madame has a telephoned," he explained. "You're to go to Miami at once and drive the blue car if Madame has it."

"When did the message arrives?" Carl wanted to know.

"Only a few minutes go. I came up here looking for you and I thought you were in the garage over the car, said you'd gone out sky-larking with the young lady. I'm not sure what thing you turned up, Madame's in a hurry and I tell you to."

Anne could feel the fellow smiling knowingly in the dark. Madame's car, Madame's chauffeur, Madame taking her pet car on a joy-ride.

"Thank you," Carl's voice was as much rebuke in the single word, as Anne had ever heard. The fellow wheeled him about and booted him. Turning to Anne, he said, "Good night, dear. I'll see you in the morning before I'm off."

"Good night," she stammered into her room. "I'll be back, Berta, in a little look around."

Swiftly, methodically, the search progressed. Now the office was making one of her rounds, opening inside it. How clever this big clumsy fellow was at discovering pockets! He began at the bottom drawer of the bureau—a few minutes and this part would be finished. Only one more drawer—the top one.

"Humph! What's this? Out from the back of the drawer came the great hand. It held, gingerly—a leather box. Her bodyguard's pearls!

As the officer fumbled with the catch, the lid flew open. There, nestling against a bolster of black satin, was a sight that caused the officer's lips to pucker into an exclamation of whistle.

"Polis!" he exclaimed and moved his fingers to find under a drop light.

A faint cry escaped Bals.

"Mein Gott! Mein Gott!

Daily Short Story

"Grand Slam"

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

They were dining in one of the small, swanky restaurants in the West Fifties with which New York is studded. George Bresser was a well-to-do business man who had risen to eminence in the mercantile world by the sweat of his brow. Vincent Bardo had gained access to the social world by his ability to play bridge expertly and to teach it even better than he played.

They had drifted in there largely because of Bresser's ambition to rub shoulders with the elite. Bardo had helped him to acquire a little polish of manner, and he had developed an ambition to know what society writers called, "the right people." Bardo, who lived by his wits, was not especially for his other qualities, was quite willing to indulge him.

Between courses Bardo's eyes wandered about the room and a woman waved her hand to him in recognition.

"That's Mrs. Florine Van Sloel," he said to his companion, "a terrible bridge player but a nice woman. Plays only one other game always."

"We about half a dozen charities or so that she feels she has to sponsor. I don't think she has any too much money."

"Is that the Van Sloel who was divorced a few months ago?" asked Bresser, "seems to me I read about it. She looks pretty young."

"Just stepped into the thirties. Rather charming—isn't she?"

The next courses were brought and they attended to the functions of the knife and fork.

When they looked up again, a man was sitting alongside her.

"That's Jeffers Buchanan," said Bardo. "He is expected to be her next husband."

They finished their repast, and as they were passing by, Bardo stopped at Mrs. Van Sloel's table and introduced Bresser. She stretched out a hand in greeting. Then she repeated their names as Bardo's introduction to her companion. He muttered a hello and didn't even look up. Bardo and Bresser were embarrassed.

Bardo stuttered a halt choked "good-night," and Bresser followed. Then they walked out.

"Fine people," said the latter, when they got into the street.

A Note

Bardo received a short note from Mrs. Van Sloel several days later. It informed him that Mrs. Van Sloel was interested in brushing up her bridge technique and would be interested in teaching her some of the finer points of the game. Bardo answered that he would be delighted and an appointment was set.

But when Bardo arrived he found Mrs. Van Sloel very much disinclined to learn any new bridge tricks. On the other hand, she considered the entire business rather a waste of time. Of course, bridge was useful in a way. It helped the charities considerably and kept many a woman from sheer boredom. But she admitted she really didn't mind that she was a poor player.

"I called you," she said, "because I really owe you a debt of gratitude," Bardo blayed.

"That little scene in the restaurant," she continued, "humiliated you. I was heartily ashamed of Jack's action. It's little things like these that show up a man's character. I have since found plenty of flaws in his. I'm through with him."

"I'm sorry," replied Bardo, "that I should be the cause of breaking up a romance. That's altogether out of my line. I'm just a bridge player."

"It was a favor to me," she went on. "I feel as if I just barely escaped from a misalliance similar to the one I recently got out of. And incidentally, I'd like to make amends to your friend, too."

"That'll be more difficult," answered Bardo. "He's sensitive. He'll think you're doing it because you want some of his money—for your charities."

"The stupidity of men," replied Mrs. Van Sloel "is, any rate—go two can meet again in hope."

Minor Motive

Three months later, Bresser met Mrs. Van Sloel. He had called her up and asked her indulgence for a few afternoon cocktails together.

"When Bardo suggested we meet and renew acquaintanceship I always turned it down, because I suspected your motives he remarked.

Mrs. Van Sloel laughed amusedly. Bresser took out a checkbook.

"But now I see that there was quite another motive," he continued. "Tell me, which is your favorite charity?"

Mrs. Van Sloel was quite explicit. He wrote out a check which surprised even her.

"This," he said, as he handed her the check, "is my present to you on the day you become Mrs. Bresser. And don't you dare tell Bardo I met you this way or that you know anything about it."

Little Benny's Note Book

Saturday afternoon me and Puds Simkins was sitting on Mary Watkinses front steps tawking to her, me making her laugh by saying funny things and Puds making her preiend to laugh out of politeness by saying dum things thinking they was funny, which they wasn't and Mary Watkins said, Oh, you boys will kill me, you're so funny. When are you ever going to have a little serious talk? she said.

I've got a ambition all rite, Puds Simkins said. I've got a ambition to have a island all my own so I could leave people on or put them back depending on the way I feel and you'd be the very first one I'd leave on, bieve me, he said, and Mary Watkins said, That's very sweet of you, I appreciate that.

Ah, keep your old desert island, I said, and Puds said, Who said it was going to be a desert one? and I said, I did, because for the simple reason, why because that's the ony kind you could ever get. That's a swell invitation, asking somebody to come and get mosquito bites and eat raw sand. I dont want any old desert island for my ambition, I want a big picknick grounds with merry go rounds and shoot the chutes and slides as big as a house, and everybody would half to bring tickits so you could have a continuous free pass and you could send tickits over your frends use it, I said to Mary Watkins.

That's perfectly lovely, I appreciate that, Mary Watkins said and Puds said, Sure, go to his old picknick grounds and go ditsy on all those things, what a invitation.

With just then Leroy Shooster's mom comsed Raymin started to go passed, saying, Hay Mary, do you want to go around to the Little Grand and see the Eut Up Koncert? and she said, O how divine of you, I appreciate that.

And the next thing me and Puds knew we was sitting there alone feeling worse instead of better.

Twisting and turning, Pal dropped through the air. Her heart sank when she knew the parachute had not opened. Drenched, cold and blinded by the beating rain, she never knew how far northward the monsoon swept her.

But so far she had not lost consciousness. Every minute she expected to be dashed to earth. At last, with a soul-shattering jerk, the parachute opened and her downward speed was checked. Finally she saw the dense clouds lighten.

The sun streamed forth, revealing the magnificence of a lofty mountain range which she rightly guessed was India's northern barrier. Then weakness overcame her and she remembered no more . . .

In the doomed airplane, Roper held on until the last second of safety. The burning craft was nearing the ground as he, too, leaped into space. Hours later, unhurt, he landed far from where the girl he loved faced a strange situation.

SUSPECT TAKEN KNIFE IN HAND

Police of Boston Believe Man With Dirk Planned to Kill

Boston, Apr. 29 (AP)—What police interpreted as an attempt to assassinate Augusto Rosso, Italian ambassador, was frustrated in the Hall of Flags at the State House today with the arrest of a suspect who carried a dirk in his hand. The arrest was made just as the ambassador was entering the hall after visiting Governor James M. Curley.

Detectives noticed the weapon in the man's hand and sprang ahead of the ambassador's party to snatch it from him. The knife was unopened at the time but was of the type which would spring open with the pressure of a button.

The suspect gave his name as Eugenio Camini, 42, of Boston. He was taken to the detective bureau at police headquarters.

The ambassador is here for a two-day visit.

'COLLIER' GROUNDED IN TRENT HARBOR

Carrying Place—The month of April just past has appeared as one of the dryest in recent years. A Toronto newspaper records the fall as one-half inch as compared with the usual two-and-one-half inches. Farmers themselves have felt the lack of water, and though it has enabled them to get on the land a bit earlier than usual, they fear that the summer may be very dry indeed. Certainly Canada and Ontario want no such series of dust storms as Western United States have endured.

The first local dance following the Lenten season was presented in St. John's Parish Hall here on Friday evening last when a fairly large crowd gathered to dance to the music of Steve Hanna's orchestra. There were five musicians present and they provided splendid harmony, the dancers enjoying themselves until the early hours of the morning. The dance was sponsored by Mr. Harry McCluskey.

After spending a day grounded in the shallow waters at the entrance to Trenton harbour, the Canada Steamships Line "Collier" passed through the Murray Canal westward late on Thursday afternoon. Though only half loaded the big steamer stuck hard and fast on the bar in the Trent harbour, and a whole day was lost before she could be refloated ready to proceed. Unless dredging is carried out soon with the mouth of the Trent and the local canal will be of little use to boats drawing any depth of water.

A dance sponsored by the Red-nersville Ladies Guild and presented on Wednesday evening last in Quinte Hall drew from this community a number of young people.

Mrs. G. Morrison and Dougall of St. Catharines spent Easter with Miss M. and Mr. Will Corrigan.

Pulled by a large county road truck a heavy grader was used for several days last week to level the rough stretch of road lying between the J. M. Hamilton garage and the local post office.

Looking forward to days more prosperous when the new Canal bridge will have been erected, Mr. Reuben Ellis has leased a small plot of Canal property at the approach to the site of the proposed bridge and began there on Wednesday the erection of a new service station. The location seems excellent for the purpose. Located on the north bank just at a point where the present detour joins the pavement and just beside the place where the bridge will some day be, there should be every chance of the venture making a success of itself.

Burning marshes both to east and west of us have lighted the sky at night for some days now. Farmers have begun seeding and spring work is well under way.

Sunday School was held in the United Church on Easter Sunday morning, but is was "skip-Sunday", the regular service for the afternoon was not held. It is expected that next week's service may be the Mothers' Day service as there is no service scheduled for that Sunday either.

On Sunday April 14th., the Right Reverend John Lyons, Bishop of Ontario, made his annual visit to the local parish and administered the Apostolic Rite of Confirmation to a class of seven candidates at Trinity Church in Consecon. The candidates were presented to him by the rector, Rev. Arthur Strother. The church was well filled for the occasion and the congregation listened with interest and appreciation to the sermon delivered by the Bishop.

Divorce Cases Called No Ground For Pride

London, Ont., Apr. 29 (CP)—The great number of divorce cases listed to be heard at the present sittings of the non-jury supreme court is nothing of which London and Middlesex can be proud, said Mr. Justice Kelly when the court opened today. There are 33 cases listed and 22 of them are divorce actions, a record number for a local court.

The judge pointed out most of the divorce actions are undefended. The courts have found it necessary to exercise extreme vigilance to prevent connivance by parties to divorce actions, His Honor said.

MAIL FOR OLD LAND WILL BE CHEAPER

London, Apr. 29 (CP)—Mail for the old land is going to be cheaper, announcing cheaps in postal charges in celebration of the King's silver jubilee, the Postmaster General lets knowledge of an imperial penny postcard rate for July 15 instead of the present three halfpenny rate, the cutting in half of telephone rates between Great Britain, the Dominions and India between June 6 and June 30, substantial reductions on inland telegrams and parcel post and the equipment of more than 1,000 village post offices with telephones by the end of 1935.

SEVEN DOLLAR CAR INJURES CHILD

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—Andy Junca pleaded guilty today to driving a 14-year-old automobile that cost him only $7 when he knocked over five-year-old Barbara Reid who went to the hospital suffering from bruises and shock. He was remanded for sentence May 7.

CLOTHES ON PIER CLUE TO DROWNING

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—The body of a man identified by his brother as David Harding, 35, was recovered from Lake Ontario in the harbor today. It had been in the water all night. Life savers recovered the body after Harding's clothes were found on a pier.

RAIN DOWNPOURS AT LONDON, ONTARIO

London, Ont., April 29 (CP)—The weather observers at the London Airport Bureau early this afternoon had recorded a rainfall of 1.05 inch as of rainfall since the rain started early this morning. The rain was still falling steadily. On Saturday the showers totalled nearly one-third of an inch, bringing the rainfall for the week-end up to nearly an inch and one-half.

'Prosperity' Letter Reaches Fort Erie

Fort Erie, Ont., April 29—(CP)—"The prosperity chain letter" to chase away depression blues made its initial appearance in Fort Erie today when a number of folk received letters bearing six addresses at top with instructions to send 10 cents in unused postage or in currency to the first named and five duplicate letters to additional persons.

The sender is being notified it he does this he will receive 15,625 letters with donations totalling $1,562.50. It is the same "charm" which flooded Denver, Colo., area.

RELIEF STAFF TIRED

Chicago, April 29.—(AP)—With the Illinois relief crisis growing hourly more acute, employees administering aid to 250,000 persons in 101 downstate counties were fired today, effective tomorrow.

Funds were already exhausted in many counties and only milk for infants and fuel to warm invalids' homes were distributed. A few counties, it was said, would be able to continue for another week.

Unidentified Girl Found Wandering

Buffalo, N.Y., April 29—(AP)—A young girl, unidentified was found wandering aimlessly this morning. Lieut. Arthur D. Britt said she first gave her name as "Mary Hoban" but changed it to "Mary Marie Francis" when taken to headquarters.

Countless cities were given as her home. Lieutenant Britt stated, and questioning revealed she knew little about the first one she mentioned, Toronto.

The officers said she was five feet, six inches tall; weighed 125 pounds; had a light complexion, blue eyes and wore a black and green dress, tan coat, black slippers and yellow gold signet ring with the initial "M".

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, April 29.—(CP)—With the exception of a few sales on calves and sheep, movement on the Toronto Livestock market was at a standstill this morning. Not enough sales were made on killing cattle to establish prices on that division though a few loads of western stockers brought $4.00 to $5.50 cwt. Hogs and lambs were unsettled.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock branch were: Cattle 2,740; Calves 2,500; Hogs 700; Sheep and Lambs 1,000.

Calves were steady at $7.50 to $8, for choice vealers and at $3.50 to $4.50 cwt. Sheep also opened steady at $3.00 to $3.50 cwt., according to quality.

Bids on the hog division were steady with last week's close of $8 f.o.b. and $8.75 off car.

Quotations—

Calves, choice and choice—$7. to $8; common to medium $3.50 to $6.

Cattle, calves, sheep and lambs—no quotations.

SILVER RECEDING IN PRICE TODAY

Well Under Level Set By United States For Purchase

New York, Apr. 29 (AP)—Silver prices in world markets today receded well under the level at which the U. S. treasury is purchasing the output of American mines.

With the United States treasury maintaining official silence on its silver policy over the week-end and its failure late last week to follow up the Friday apurt in the world price, speculators became wary.

After a slump in London and Montreal, the price of foreign bar silver for commercial use was fixed in New York at 75¾ cents an ounce, off one cent.

In London, the price dropped to the equivalent of 74.19 cents an ounce compared with the New York price Saturday of 76¾ cents and the high in New York Friday of 81 cents. In the Montreal futures market, the July delivery dropped to 75⅝ cents compared with Saturday's close of 76 cents. The treasury price in American mines remained today at 77.57 cents.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD

Simcoe, Ont., April 29 (CP)—Mrs. John Barron, 76, last seen as she left church at Fairground, Houghton Township, last night, was found dead by the side of the road 30 yards from the church, by a passer-by about six o'clock this morning, apparently a victim of a heart attack. Coroner Dr. E. W. Zumstein, Delhi was notified.

BODY HIPPED TO BUFFALO

Drumheller, Alta., April 29 (CP)—The body of Corporal Michael Moriarity, Royal Canadian Mounted Policeman shot to reath Friday near here by David S. Knox, today was shippeid to Buffalo, N.Y., where a brother John, resides.

Request into the officer's death will resume tomorrow while later a coroner's jury will hold an inquest into the death of Knox, killed by a speeding automobile driven by a constable, when cornered by a pose a short time after he shot Moriarity.

U-BOATS PART OF WIDER PROJECT OF HITLER RULE

British Protest Against Latest German Step Expected

ARMS FIRMS DENIAL

Naval Parley Delayed For Announcement by Hitler

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Writer)

London, April 30—(CP Cable) — Germany is preparing to launch her naval program, Information reaches authoritative quarters here that submarines are only part of a wider construction scheme which Hitler will announce May 15.

German opposition to build submarines in defiance of the Versailles treaty, it is further learned, does not arise from the time situation of the past few weeks. Designs were prepared in December and some parts were actually constructed about January.

Meanwhile the proposed Anglo-German naval talks will be postponed until after Hitler's announcement. Whether or not they will be held at all remains for determination.

Protest Planned

The belief grew in diplomatic circles that Great Britain was planning a protest against the latest German rearmament sensation, although well-informed quarters said that Britain's reaction will be carefully considered.

The question appears to be one of the most ticklish problems to be tackled at tomorrow's all-important cabinet session when the statement of policy to be voiced to the House of Commons Thursday by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council will be whipped into shape.

Denial By ARMS Firms

Reports that representatives of Vickers-Armstrong the British Arms Manufacturing Company, recently visited Berlin with the idea of negotiating the sale of submarine patents to the German Government, was flatly denied today by the officers of the company. An official said: "There is no truth whatsoever in those reports."

London, April 30 (CP Cable) —

Mystery Girl Shopper Is Still a Mystery

Miss Mystery Shopper, a petite and charming, but elusive little miss engaged by the retail merchants of Belleville as one of the interesting features in the shopping carnival this week during Better Belleville Days, slipped unobtrusively through the doors of the downtown section of the city today on her first day's shopping tour of the local stores. She went unrecognized by other shoppers who crowded the counters in the various stores checking over the special bargains that have been laid out for the inspection of local and out of town residents.

Miss Mystery Shopper upon whose pretty head has been placed a reward of ten dollars for the one who recognizes and approaches her, with a number advertisement in the Daily Ontario Intelligencer of one of the merchants taking part in the Belleville Better Days shopping week. But that isn't all. The one who accosts Miss Mystery Shopper with the printed advertisement must also use these words:

"Pardon Me, Are You Miss Mystery Shopper?"

The dollars cash reward will then be paid the lucky individual who follows the clue.

Miss Mystery Shopper who will be seen so frequently in the crowded stores and on the streets during the remainder of the week will be dressed entirely in the other words, ly attired young women of the city who will be among the crowd. She will be covered handsomely in the prevailing mode and will resort to no particular disguise. She is 5 feet 7 inches in height and weighs about 120 pounds. She is blonde, and her eyes are . . . .

During the day she will accost various persons in the city who are on the lookout for particular bargains, which she will point out through the columns of this paper for the benefit of shoppers in her subsequent appearances in the day's activities.

Don't forget Miss Mystery Shopper and the ten dollars cash reward!

All the King's Men Can Not Prevent Runaway of All the King's Horses

London, April 29—(AP)—England's gala jubilee season was unofficially launched today with a good old-fashioned runaway.

King George's famous Windsor greys, bolting down Park Lane, smashed the royal coach into a bus and then into a coster's barrow.

The ancient and honorable vehicle scored a clean victory in each instance, emerging with only one slightly scratch on its gilt frame.

The royal equipage was returning its part in the May 6 procession, when a double-decker bus clipped one of the Windsor greys on the flank. Then things started to happen not so rehearsed.

Officials were investigating on for his life, the King's horses bolted. Before they could be brought under control by the outriders, the heavy coach took a parting swipe at the bus and slugged the coster's fruit-laden pushcart into complete submission.

Beyond the severe shaking-up the King's coachman received, there were no casualties. The coach was trundled back into the Buckingham Palace stables under its own horsepower.

The draw for tickets procured on Tuesday will be made Wednesday, when the grand prize will be the pieces of Tudor plate flat-ware with 87 pieces of china to harmonize.

An authoritative source said today the proposed naval conversations with Great Britain and Germany have been "postponed" pending an expected announcement by Chancellor Hitler on Germany's foreign policy.

The postponement, however, is expected to delay the talks only a few days.

Paris, April 30 (AP)— France, with an eye on Germany's rearmament plans today agreed to keep her own air force at full strength by calling for the recruiting of trained aviation machine-gunners, radio operators, and mechanics in the reserves at the end of military air force base attached to famous Le Bourget Field.

PREMIERS MEET

London, Apr. 20 (CP) — Prime Minister R. B. Bennett and other Dominion Premiers in London for the silver jubilee met Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and other British Cabinet members in the committee this afternoon.

The discussions were purely informal and preliminary. They did not concern questions of policy.

JURY VINDICATES ACTION OF GUARD IN PRISON RIOT

Opened Fire at Convict When Unarmed Guard is Attacked

PASS OUT FORKS

Witnesses State Forsythe And Erchaeson Were Leaders

Stony Mountain, Man., April 30—(CP)—Vindication of prison authorities in the slaying of George Bailey Forsythe, a convict, was given early today by a coroner's jury investigating the prison outbreak in the turbulent riot in Stony Mountain Penitentiary.

The verdict came last night and early today the jury of farmers and Stony Mountain townsmen heard the details of the violence, led by Forsythe and seven convicts, one of them a Florida Chain Gang fugitive, slightly wounded by a bullet, that ricocheted from a barrier.

Dropping of long-pronged kitchen forks concealed in their trousers leg and signalled danger to unarmed guards among the convicts. It led to the fatal fusillade, Forsythe rising fire from a rampart, when he and Forsythe attempt to attack D. J. Hill, an unarmed guard, with a foot-long knife.

"We the jury," said the verdict quickly returned, "find that George B. Forsythe, No. 3327, came to his death in Stony Mountain Penitentiary on Saturday, April 27, 1935, being shot by an officer in the discharge of his duty, while protecting the life of another officer (Capt. Piper) at attack with a knife in the hand of Forsythe."

Lumber Industry Shows Improvement

Sudbury, Ont., April 30—(CP)—Conditions in the Sudbury district lumbering industry which have been at a standstill for the last six weeks with cessation of spring cutting, will enjoy a six weeks revival with the opening of the spring drives.

One hundred lumber jacks were placed this week by employment agencies for the Spanish Timber Company at Foleyet and the Spanish Lumber Company on the Wahnapitae River for work as soon as the river breaks.

Slight Nervous Twitching Reveals Emotions of Doomed Man

"So, it's all up, gentlemen . . . the answer is . . . ."

Thus did Harold W. Vermilyea, condemned to die on the gallows in this city on Thursday morning accept the first official pronouncement of the death sentence delivered by Governor G. D. Roberts at the county jail shortly after one o'clock this afternoon. News of the rejection of the clemency plea by the cabinet council had reached the jail house this morning.

A slight spasmodic working of the facial muscles was slightly choked by the tense pall, but repressed emotion. A nervous twisting of the hands. A slightly worried look. All these contributed to reveal the emotional stress under which Vermilyea has labored for the past day or so, expecting bravely to hear the final de-

SURPRISE ATTEMPT AT RECORD FLIGHT

Trying to Reduce Transcontinental Transport Record

Los Angeles, April 30 (AP) — In a surprise attempt to lower the transcontinental flight record for transport planes, a huge Douglas liner left here from Glendale at Burbank airport for New York early today.

At the controls of the big ship was T. W. Tomlinson, vice president of Transcontinental Western Air Corporation.

Leland Andrews, veteran American aviation writer, holds the present record for transports at 11 hours, 34 minutes and 16 seconds. The record time was 4.56 a.m. (5.56 a.m. E.S.T.).

As Commander-in-Chief Will Stop Publication Of Unfavorable Reports

President Declares Items Do Not Represent Policy

EXERCISES APPROVAL

Reference is Made to Canada's Request For Data

Washington, April 30—(AP) — In a sharply worded message President Roosevelt today ordered the United States House of Representatives Military Committee to discontinue publication of testimony it is taking in connection with the War Department.

The President in the unprecedented action, warned the committee he would exercise his authority as Commander-in-chief of the army and navy if necessary to stop publication of anything he regarded as unfriendly to other nations.

Mr. Roosevelt called attention to statements made by two army officers before the committee concerning the relations between the United States and the builders of the North American Continent.

Says Statement Not Fair

"I desire," he said, "to inform your committee certain portions of the testimony of General Summerall, especially those relating to the Canadian border, do not represent either the policy of this administration or that of the Commander-in-chief.

"In the statement of General P. M. Andrews, many portions of said statement, especially those relating to the territory of friendly nations on the North American Atlantic and in the West Indies, do not represent the military policy of the administration or of the Commander-in-chief.

War Chief Approves Power

"It is necessary for me most respectfully to call to your attention and that of your committee the fact if the testimony in executive session is printed in public documents in the same way as testimony in open session, I shall find it necessary as Commander-in-chief of the army and navy to require that in future such testimony be given only after approval by me."

Canada yesterday asked the State Department for any public data of army plans of the United States. That action resulted from testimony by Brigadier General Malin Craig, Hilldring, Assistant Chief of Staff in charge of war plans.

The President addressed his letter to Chairman McSwain of the Military Committee.

In another letter to Secretary of War Dern, Mr. Roosevelt remarked:

"It is a matter of regret to me that I have been compelled to send a letter to Chairman McSwain of the Committee on Military Affairs. A copy of which I enclose."

WEATHER

A moderate deep disturbance covers the Upper St. Lawrence Valley and New England States and another extends from Alberta southward over the Western States, with high pressure over the Central and Northern portions of the continent.

Rain has been general from Southern Ontario eastward to the St. Lawrence Valley, and snow has fallen in some areas in Northern Ontario, while in the western provinces the weather has been partly cloudy and cool.

Lake Superior—Fresh northerly winds; partly cloudy and cool with some light showers or snowflurries over east portion.

Kenora and Rainy River—Fair; not much change in temperature.

Manitoba — Southeast winds; partly cloudy with somewhat higher temperature. Probably followed by light showers in southwest portion.

Saskatchewan — Fresh or strong winds; partly cloudy with light rain in some districts.

Says Peace Treaties Not Peace Treaties

Budapest, April 30.—(CP-Havas) —Treaties forcibly imposed upon nations after the War, Premier Gombos not be called "peace" treaties, Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungarian Regent, declared today at the first session of parliament since the recent elections.

"With our memories of the last conflagration, who can think seriously of war or of provoking it? To maintain peace, nations must exist with equal rights.

"We believe we will be serving the cause of peace in presenting our legitimate claims at the negotiations in the future."

TRY TO FLOAT VESSEL

New London, Conn., Apr. 30 (AP) —A United States coast guard patrol boat today began manoeuvring about the British schooner, James E. Newson, on the rocks off Latin Gull Island light, at the easterly entrance to Long Island Sound, in an effort to float the vessel.

FLORIDA BEAUTY TOLD BY JUDGE

Rotarians Hear Judge Deroche in Interesting Address

His Honour, Judge Deroche spoke at Rotarian meeting, Belleville, on his recent visit to the South. He mentioned speaking at the Rotary Club at St. Petersburg, where they have an attendance during the winter months of about 70 of their own members each week, combined with around two hundred visitors, making a luncheon group of about three hundred. He spoke to them, basing it on law administration in Canada, emphasizing the appointment, judges for life rather than being compelled to return for election every few years. He was grateful, as the close, to have three judges and several lawyers come to him and say, that every lawyer and every judge in the United States desired, that all their judges should be appointed for life rather than elected, but the politicians would not.

The Judge described the sports centre at St. Petersburg, where the bowling club of 350 members is perhaps the most splendid club of friendliness and comradeship. The spirit of the club, and all sports is illustrated by the slogan or motto pinned on the wall of the clubhouse, "Play the Game." Sooner comes to write against your name, it won't be Do Or Die, but you now did you play the game." The Shuffleboard Club as St. Petersburg has four thousand members.

Ocean Beach Attractive

It is Miami on the Ocean Coast, which seems to interest the Judge the most, especially the ocean beach where thousands bask in the sunshine for a distance of seven miles practically every day.

The Golf Stream, flowing within a short distance of the shore, makes the water warm enough for bathing nearly every day. He described the churches, the buildings of which do not need to be built against cold weather, so three sides of the church are practically all windows thrown wide open all through the Winter.

He touched also on the other side of life, the horse races, which thrives for ninety days during the year according to law. The course at Hialeis, about ten miles out of Miami, said to be the finest in the world with its one mile banked flamingo, said to be the prettiest thing in the world, flowing around in a large pool of miniature lake in the centre of the race course. There are also the Greyhound races, there being five of such courses in Miami and vicinity.

The Judge closed with a description of the Miami Beach City, in particular, which has a population of about six thousand, and which is adjacent to Miami. His description of the Miami Beach City in particular, which has a population of about six thousand, and which is adjacent to Miami. His description of the beautiful driveways through streets lined on either side with Australian Pines for miles and with the Bougainvilea and Flame vines running up the side of the buildings which are nearly all white or cream coloured, and with the ocean on one side and Bay or Biscay on the other side, it makes, in the Judge's view the prettiest city in the world.

He also gave this interesting item, that even in these days of depression, building permits in this small city amount to about one-half million dollars per month. Miami city has another half million and Coral Gables, a different city on the other side, a fair building program, meaning, that in general Miami, there is a building program going on of over a million dollars per month.

Forty-Five Children of C.A.S. Placed in City, Country Homes

Local Inspector, Officers, Co-operate With Gov't. in New Deal

"The Honourable David Croll, Minister of Public Welfare, is making a determined effort to put into force the terms of the report of the Rose Commission Report to the late Government, to give a new deal. This new policy of the Department is that every child shall be cared for in a private home. The old system of crowding children into homes and institutions must go. It has been found and proven that children raised in institutions, when put into the world have very little initiative or stamina and thus have an inferiority complex, which makes it hard for them to compete with other children, that have been brought up under natural home surroundings Children reared in private homes generally adapt themselves to everyday conditions than those raised in institutions, where the Children's Aid Society is endeavouring to create within the Department in this New Deal and have placed thirty-four children in boarding homes from Belleville city and country and eleven in the city."

This statement is given today by Mr. T. B. Ruston, local superintendent of the Children's Aid Society.

Shelter Receiving Home

"The special committee appointed by the Board of Directors of Belleville, Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, with the new phase are grappling very earnestly with the problems raised by the new order of things. The greatest problem before this Committee and local Board of Directors is the large Shelter and its heavy overhead expenses. Many suggestions have been thrown out and the Committee are giving very serious thought to this difficult problem and are endeavouring to work out a practical solution. In the future only a small receiving home will be necessary as a centre for observation and medical examination before placing the children in approved boarding homes.

In order to better co-ordinate the work of the Society and on the recommendation of the Committee, the Board of Directors have removed the Children's Aid Society's office to 340 Front Street, Belleville and Robertson Block. Also owing to the greater economy of space and detail office work they have appointed an assistant to the Superintendent.

Mr. Heise, Provincial Superintendent, visits here from time to time and has been in conference with the committee.

"Reforms are up to a general determination by the authorities, that the home one shall not be institutionalized and rendered unfit for useful and happy careers, when they take their places as good grown-ups", said the local inspector.

MOTORCYCLE TRIALS HELD AT HALLOWAY

Trials Held Over Five-Mile Course at Soggy Green

The Quinte Club of Belleville staged its trial Sunday afternoon, near Holloway. The course consisted of a five-mile track over rough road, hills, swamps, etc.

There were all makes of machines present. A number from Peterborough and P. E. County were present. There were twelve entries. The three leading were as follows: The prize was won by Willis Blakley of Picton, after four had tied for first place. He is from Picton. Second, Nelson Blakley and Sam Carew. Of these, Blakley won in a slow race from hill which proved very interesting.

The other entries were: "Chuck" Anderson, R.C.A., who done well; "Johnnie" McLean, "Norton" (L.P.); Bert Pallant, New Hudson (L.P.); N. Parks, Harley Davison (H.P.); "Tiny" Barnett, B.S.A., H.V. loped the track once but said the course was rather hard on the nerves. Griffi, on another B.S.A., had the same story. "Ray" Hay, "Bitsy" which was too "hot" a machine for such a rough track. Sam Carew (Peterboro) finished with fine showing as 1st position for a tie. Prinsons (New Imperial) done well for the first time home and the condition of the trial track.

A prize donated by Gordon Davies, Central Tire and Battery, was won by Blakley which was a Lodge & Shark Plug.

The Club meets Wednesday of this week at Mr. Vincent's at Picton to decide on another trial or run for Monday, May 6th, at which the boys hope to give the public a thrill in motorcycles.

Obituary

MRS. LILY JARVIS BRONSON

On Sunday morning, April 28th, there passed away at her home in Stirling Lily Jarvis, beloved wife of Joseph Bronson, in her seventy-fourth year, after an illness of long duration. Death was not unexpected for as the deceased was in failing health for a long period of time.

Possessing a bright disposition, she will be sadly missed by a large number of friends in the district of Stirling where she spent the greater part of her useful life.

Left to mourn her passing are—the husband Mr. Joseph Bronson, three daughters Mrs. Russell Stapley, Stirling, Mrs. Charles Brintnell, Corbyville, Mrs. Florence Krausmann, Detroit, Mich., and seven grandchildren, three also survive sisters and six brothers.

The funeral service will be held at St. Paul's United Church, Stirling on Wednesday, May 1st, at 1.30 and will be conducted by Rev. W. W. Rowland, assisted by Rev. W. Shadlock of the Stirling Church. Burial, Interment will be made in Clark's cemetery.

DANIEL HOGAN

Daniel Hogan, formarly of Millbridge, who had been making his home at the Hastings County House of Refuge since May 1934, died in the Belleville General Hospital early this Tuesday morning. He had been in failing health for some time and had been a patient in the hospital since March 27th last. He was 66 years of age and was unmarried. In religious faith he was a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

PRES. ALEX WEIR IS CLUB CHAMP

Annual Bowling Tourney of Y's Men's Club is Held

The annual club bowling tournament of the local Y's Men's Club was brought to a regular meeting night. The club members were divided into two teams and a delightful two hours of recreation were spent. No speaker was engaged for this suspicious bowling night, the teams taking to the "b" alleys directly following the club luncheon and announcements.

Pres. Alex Weir of Men's Club will be held on May 6th due to the Hinge Kinzie affair, and the nominating committee consisting of Y'smen Court Miller, Geo. Pauley and Harold Bonter are now hard at work to select a proposed slate of officers to be voted for at election for the next coming semester.

The bowling tournament resulted in some weird and wonderful scores being rung-up by the numerous contestants, all enjoying themselves into the recreation and friendliness. Pres. Alex. Weir led all bowlers of the night with a single score of 341 and a three-string of 883. Next highest was each and individually with a single score of 317 and a three-string of 871 while Vern Weir toppled the maples with a three-string score of 870. The winning team, composed of Dawson Boyd, George Pauley, Newt. Wilbur, Alex Weir and Jos Shortt, rolled a combined score of 2064.

Police News

Minor investigations kept local police authorities quite busy during the past 24 hours although no arrests were actually necessary except in one H. T. A. case, the offender merely being charged but not held.

A Victoria Ave. resident reported the loss of his garden hose to the police today. According to information received the hose was left on the front lawn of the residence last night but had disappeared this morning.

A vacant house on Foster Ave. has apparently been the rendezvous of burglars of late as the owner, upon inspecting the house recently, found several articles of furnishings missing. Inside finished doors and numerous other articles have left out the house had been removed. The case was reported to the police as to when the robbery had taken place, due to the fact, that the house had been vacant for some time.

Last night's April showers drove 18 translents to the police station during the night's duration and the cold damp surroundings that prevailed outside.

Two windows were destroyed last night by City Dog Catcher Thos. Thorne, after having been held for the necessary three days under the city ordinance. The destruction of the windows by the city dog pound empty this morning. Police officials announced that at times, persons were fast purchasing their dog tags, but that there were many dog owners still with unpaid dog taxes.

EDWINA BOOTH TAKEN TO LONDON

Los Angeles, Apr. 30 (AP)—Edwina Booth, movie actress, was on the way to London today for treatment of the mysterious disease she contracted while making a picture in the Hawaiian Islands last year.

The actress was carried aboard a train on a stretcher. She was accompanied by her step-father, Dr. James Lloyd Woodruff. Various physicians have tried without success to diagnose Miss Booth's malady.

In October, 1933, the actress' leaves in New York yiled a $1,000,000 damage suit against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, for which she was working when she contracted the illness.

WHY HIS HEADACHES CEASED

Wife Put Kruschen in His Coffee

He could not understand why the headache he had been subject to suddenly ceased. His wife told him, and he at once sat down and wrote the following letter:—

"I am 52 years of age, and ever since I was a boy of ten years, I was subject to very bad headaches. But two years ago the headaches stopped for what reason I did not know. I was surprised when one day my wife told me I had been using Kruschen Salts in my coffee for over two years. I am still using them, as I know of nothing finer for the system."—J. T.

Headaches can nearly always be traced to a disordered stomach, and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste materials which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons—prevent them forming again—and you'll never have to worry any more. And that is just how Kruschen Salts bring a quiet and lasting relief from headaches. Kruschen Salts aid Nature to cleanse your body completely of all clogging waste matter.

DIRECTORS NAMED BY CEMETERY BD.

JURGES AND BUSH ARE SUSPENDED

Punished For Part Taken in Fight at Baseball Game

New York, Apr. 30 (AP)—Ford C. Frick, president of the National League, today fined and suspended Billy Jurges, Chicago Cub shortstop, and Guy Bush, Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher, for their part in the fist fight that marked yesterday's Cub-Pirate game at Chicago.

After reviewing the reports of the umpires, Frick announced that Jurges has been suspended for three days and fined $50.

Frick did not disciplne Roy Cullenbine, Chicago pitcher and several others playing on both teams who participated in the wildest free-for-all of the new season.

The fight started when Harry Lavagetto, Pirate infielder, was spiked by Jurges as he slid into second after hitting a double.

FORMER O.C. 49TH ATTENDS REUNION

Col. A. Hoffman Smith Was in Charge in 1900

The commanding officer of the 49th. Hastings Regiment in the year 1900, Col. A. Hoffman Smith, who is now a resident of Edmonton, intends being present at the reunion of the veterans of the Canadian Northwest Rebellion of 1885, which will be held in Winnipeg in May, Col. Smith is one of Canada's 300 survivors of the historic campaign against Louis Riel and one of the four or five survivors of the expedition of 1885. He enlisted with this expedition at the age of nineteen with the 1st. Ontario Battalion at Quebec on May 7th., 1870. This fighting force consisted of 1200 men, which the present population was formed in 1885 Col. Smith joined the 2nd. Midland Battalion at Kingston.

One of the reasons, which will prevent Col. Smith in Winnipeg for the reunion is the fact, that he has not seen the city since 1885. Col. Smith is one of Canada's 200 survivors of the historic campaign against Louis Riel and one of the four or five survivors of the expedition of 1885. He enlisted with this expedition at the age of nineteen with the 1st. Ontario Battalion

Mrs. Jessie Bowen, Frankford Celebrates 93rd Birthday

Has Motor Trip in Afternoon And Entertains Friends in Evening

Gathered about her, in her decidedly comfortable home, amid many gifts, cut flowers, plants and congratulations from friends and relatives, a group of happy friends joined with Mrs. Jessie Bowen of Frankford, who celebrated her 93rd birthday on Monday April 29th.

A slight knock on the door was heard by the charming lady herself who instructed her daughter to admit three more guests, who dropped in to offer congratulations. As they entered the room, Mrs. Bowen rose from her chair and with a cordial briskly to greet them. Her handshake was firm and warm and her actions were certainly not those of a woman who had had an unusually busy day. There was a warmth of friendliness in her smile of welcome, that was contagious.

This remarkably active lady of ninety-three years had been on a motor trip for the afternoon and had returned home to a late dinner at which the guests thoroughly enjoyed a liberal portion of the fine birthday cake, which she herself had made.

Mrs. Bowen who resides with her only daughter in Frankford, stated that she very seldom retired early, but got real joy and contentment from the restful hours of the evening spend at home. She feels just fine all the time. Enjoying good health, and her sight and hearing are far superior to those of people many years her junior. There is nothing unusual about her diet, she says what she chooses and when she pleases. "I haven't any use for this dieting craze", she stated, with a merry twinkle, which at once portrayed the fact, that she was also endowed with a good sense of humour.

Born Near Norwood

Mrs. Bowen is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter McPherson of Dummer, Ontario. At this place, two miles from Norwood she was born and spent a good deal of her early life. Scotch—she was a Scotch Presbyterian, until fifty years ago when she moved with her husband the late Byron Bowen to Frankford, where there happened to be no Presbyterian Church. Since that time she has been a regular attendant at the Methodist Church, which is now the United Church. Mrs. Bowen is an ardent worker in the Women's Association and attends their meetings with marked regularity.

In comparing the youth of her day with the modern younger set, that interesting student of life was quiet frank in her belief, that present day youth, is forever on the search for an elusive something called happiness. While those of her day had it, lived it, in the home. Many boys and girls in those days lived and died without ever seeing the glamour of the city lights but they were happy and contented. The speed of the present age does not give true happiness a chance to develop to its fullness.

From this point the subject changed to topics of the day and with every last minute news item of interest she was well informed through constantly reading the Ontario Intelligencer, which had found its place in the home nearly for more than fifty year. Of course we must not—said the writer—forget Margaret Bowen, we'd be lost without it now.

When a group of guests were about to leave Mrs. Bowen again rose from her chair and walked to the door with her departing friends to wish them good evening. With that same smile, that greeted them which was truly refreshing, she hoped to entertain them again soon and these departing had the same hope of returning. Mrs. Bowen then returned to entertain her other guests.

Besides her daughter with whom she resides, Mrs. Bowen has one son, Mack, who lives in New York who was unable to be present for this happy event.

Oddfellows Church Parade

Stirling Lodge No. 229 and their associate organization, Stirling Encampment No. 80, and Stirling Rebekah Lodge No. 311, assembled in a large body for divine worship in St. Paul's United Church on Sunday morning. The auditorium was filled to listen with interest to an inspiring message delivered by Rev. W. J. Rowland on the theme of "An Old Testament Romance". The choir, under the direction of Mr. G. L. Chute, rendered special music, offering two splendid anthems: "They shall mount up", and "The Fear of the Lord". The responsive reading was found in the ninety-second Psalm, and the second scripture lesson in St. Luke chapter second to thirteen. During the offertory Mr. G. L. Chute played a special organ arrangement of "La Cinquantina" (The Swallow).

Choosing his text from the first verse of the eighteenth chapter of first Samuel "And it came to pass when he had made an end of speaking unto Saul, that the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul". Rev. Mr. Rowland, who entitled his topic, "A Romance of the Old Testament," delivered a fine sermon on the love of these two men. "The book of Samuel up to this point is not interesting or interesting to read," said Mr. Rowland, "but the opening words of the eighteenth chapter —"And it came to pass" serve to rekindle the imagination of the reader, and spur him on to read the beautiful story of a great love which is a prototype of the love of Christ. Jonathan, the first prince of the land, became a slave of his love for David. He was ready and willing to sacrifice anything for him. Jonathan had wealth and position, was heir to a throne, ruling a powerful nation; but these things meant little in comparison to his love for his friend. Nor was this a flimsy sort of thing. These men might put him to death. As Christ had faithful followers who remained steadfast in their love, so did Jonathan remain close to David. Here is a lesson to be taken by the youth of the land. Acquire what we may in worldly possession, it is all worthless without the love of real friendship. When it became necessary for David to hide from the wrath of the King, Jonathan was the only one who knew his place of hiding. What a hero Jonathan could have made of himself by delivering David unto his father. Had he been selfishly inclined these thoughts would have come to him but his love was the strongest thing within him. He loved to the point of sacrifice: "Greater love hath no man than this", What for most men means such companionship. We too have such a friend, One who gave His life for us, and even now we can enjoy His love and companionship.

The symbol of the I.O.O.F. three links—linked together as it were in the bond of true love, and based upon the greatest driving force known to man—love. As we as individuals linked in the same manner with Christ our Saviour! We will feel the true friendship that is ours for the taking. Life is worthless without true friendship, and friendship is based on Christianity. True Christianity will bring forth true friendship."

St. Paul's Church was well filled for this special service and the message brought by the large congregation by Mr. Rowland was an excellent one.

TYPIST CHAMPION GIVES EXHIBITION

Demonstrating speed coupled with ability and accuracy, Mildred Miss Irma Wright, world's champion typist, gave two lectures and demonstrations here before highly interested audiences in Belleville yesterday. Miss Wright, working under the Educational Department of the Underwood Typewriting Company, is employed to convey to commercial pupils the value of general efficiency and the art of speed in typing. Yesterday afternoon Miss Wright gave an interesting lecture on "speed and accuracy" in the art of typewriting at the Belleville Collegiate before the entire commercial class, augmented by a large commercial class from the Ontario School for the Deaf. Following these lectures Miss Wright entertained Miss Wright adjourned to the Ontario Business College, where she gave a related her lectures and demonstrations of speed and accuracy.

Miss Wright is the Canadian champion typist and also the world's amateur typing championship, competing against representatives from every country in the world at Sacramento Cal. In 1928. At that time Miss Wright typed 116 words per minute for a period of 30 minutes, the limit of the contest. It was following the winning of the world's typing championship that Mr. Underwood, that Miss Wright was employed as the head of the Educational Department of the Underwood Typewriter Company in Canada, being a Canadian. At present Miss Wright is headed towards the eastern seaboard after a lengthy tour of demonstration on the Pacific coast.

Likes Her Work

"Oh, I like my work as it brings me in contact with different people and new faces all of the time. Naturally I try to impress upon the students the need of accuracy the need of accuracy in conjunction with speed, as one goes hand-in-hand with the other to make the perfect stenographer," stated Miss Wright in reference to giving demonstrations to commercial classes. Miss Wright stated she is not a little tiny bit superstitious, but she admitted being temperamental, when it came to the matter of speed tests. "I do not like having other typists using my personal Underwood. Why, prior to a speed test or a championship typing contest I would never tolerate any other person so much as touching my machine. You see no two people type the same and it would naturally throw me off key if some other typist used my machine before a test," explained Miss Wright.

Miss Wright carried a pleasing personality throughout her interview and always seemed willing to assist in the matter of meting out information in relationship to the art of perfection and accuracy in typing of which she is the world's champion. Her genial manner of reception is reported to be one of the paramount reasons, why Miss Wright is so popular among the many commercial classes to which she lectures and gives exhibitions of typing so frequently. Miss Wright left Belleville today headed eastward, where she will stop off at Kingston, Brockville and Montreal before continuing her journey to the Maritimes.

NEW TAX MOOTED TO PAY RELIEF

Paying For Relief With Borrowed Money Out Says Premier

Toronto, April 30.— (CP)— A $15,000,000 tax scheme to obviate the necessity of the Ontario Government borrowing money for relief expenses will be carried out in the near future, with residents of the province probably paying either through additional income tax, a turnover tax or a direct levy on salaries.

In making the announcement last night, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn said exact source of the new impost did not yet been decided on. He was emphatic, however, in declaring the Ontario Government intends to depart from the practice of paying for relief with borrowed money.

The Premier's statement was prompted by the relief strike in Cornwall Township. He had just returned from conducting negotiations with the strikers and mentioned jail for leaders of any future strike of a compulsory nature in which damage is done.

"It is an impossible situation at the present time," he said. "Municipalities provide work and outside agitators go in and stir up strikes. We will not condone this 'won't work' attitude when work is provided.

The Ontario Government, the Premier explained will make a determined effort to balance its budget. "It would have been balanced had it not been for relief expenditures," he stated. "But we propose to levy new taxes within the year. They will be imposed in such a way the public know from where they are taxed definitely as a relief tax. We do not propose to continue to pay for relief with borrowed money. We propose to raise at least $15,- 000,000."

JUBILEE CANCER FUND

Response to the Cancer Fund has been very gratifying, according to Lord Bessborough and Lady Bessborough under whose patronage of The King George Silver Jubilee Cancer Fund was set in motion. Over a quarter of a million dollars has been received and acknowledged.

This worthy cause stands in the name of His Majesty and merits the support of the entire people of Canada. Every dollar contributed will be expended in this country in an effort to stem the scourge. Time yet remains for large collections before the sixth of May, the occasion of the jubilee celebration.

DEATH OF SIR ALBERT GOODERHAM

The recent sudden death of Sir Albert Gooderham, Toronto philanthropist, has proven a shock to the people of Ontario. Sir Albert was raised to knighthood last New Year's and he has had but little time in which to enjoy the royal mark of favor for his military, sporting and philanthropic effort. His support of the cause of preventive medicine was one of the most munificent donations any Canadian has ever made. A man of means all his life, he knew the art of making money subservient to high calling and high living and noble deeds.

AUDUBON WEEK

Birds have not ceased from nesting and singing for all the dust storms in the American West, according to word from Texas though the Cornell University-Carnegie Institute ornithological expedition. New York Times comments as follows:

"One might assume that the birds were instinctively celebrating Audubon Week, for Audubon's birthday was the 26th of April in 1785. In the mountainous Southwestern Texas the land is "practically buried in dust," with the sun "silvery all day," the nearest mountains "practically invisible" and the cacti the "only spots of color" in the landscape. But the birds and the ornithologists carry on. Paintings made from life are supplemented by photographic pictures of the birds and sound records of their calls—the most thoroughgoing study of certain species made since the days of Audubon, the pioneer student of American bird life.

"It can hardly be less than a favorable auspice that the birds, which "are of all animals the nearest to man," ignore the unfavorable and depressing atmosphere and even surpass in their free voyaging the most desperate daring of man. President Wilbur was not long since their national official guardian as Secretary of the Interior, has lately made human applications from their "flock flying." Here is his observation:

"Throughout the United States we have been in what one might call the nest-building stage in the life of birds—when each small group looked after its own family and its own affairs. Working with the large group, or flock flying, was required only on occasions. Now, with society closely interlocked by science and interdependent from the standpoint of food supply and other accepted essentials of our present stage of biological development, the individual nest-building stage has taken a secondary position. We are not permitted to be as wild as we used to be. The unwonted using for a moment another metaphor) are being compelled to join the main herd. There is a contest on between God-given individual right to be one's self and the material necessity of the present state of human affairs.

"In his divination, President Wilbur raises the question whether democracy can keep the sacred right of personality and also do the sort of flock flying that we see in a squadron of birds or of winged men, and answers it by saying that we "must have co-operation, mut not at ite expense of free flight of individuals who know how to soar to the upper skies."

As in the air squadron (the flock flying of human beings), we must use our emotional and spiritual qualities to work together and to have purpose; but we must realize fully that without training and the constant use of the highest intelligence our civilization will hit the ground.

"Such are the auspices as declared by one who belongs to the college of our national augurs—and has had unusual facilities for observation."

PROOF OF BRITAIN'S PROSPERITY MAROH

Apropos of today's cable announcing that London has plenty of money to spend on entertainment, it is of interest to note that the pronounced upwards trend of business in the Old Country is reflected in many directions other than those of exports and imports.

For instance, every mail brings London papers announcing new factories opening up and existing ones extended, to meet the increased volume of orders. In the electricity business alone the index of new orderse for January this year was twice that for the corresponding month of 1934. The value of building plans approved rose to the high figure of $41,050,000, an increase of sixteen per cent over January last year. Postal receipts, always regarded in England as a reliable guide, reached the highest level in January ever recorded in one month, with the single exception of last December, when the Christmas trade was very heavy.

Another index is that of new issues of stock. For the first quarter of the current year these amounted to $210,000,000, as compared with $120,000,000 in the same period last year, which itself was the best since 1931. And in unemployment the improvement is most marked. On March 25, the latest date for which figures are available, 119,000 more people were at work than on February 25, and there was a decrease in the registration of unemployed of 131,593.

Of course, with two million people yet on the dole, there is still much ground to be recovered. But there was no longer be the slightest doubt that Britain has emerged from the slough of depression and is progressing steadily upwards along Prosperity Road.—Montreal Star.

RELIEF COSTS

In one repect Chatham and Woodstock are fortunate, in that Government funds were provided not on the per capita basis but upon actual unemployment needs; and thus the comparatively small amounts received indicate a favourable economic condition in these two cities; but the fact that Premier Hepburn intends to put relief expenditure in ordinary account, instead of borrowing it, as in the past—and the additional fact that he intends to call a session of the legislature in the fall to devise new means of taxation to raise money for relief expenditures—indicates that the people of this city, while using every economical means to administer relief without undue extravagance, will be compelled to pay, through taxation, their full share for the immense amounts being received by other municipalities. Some cities are now paying into the provincial treasury more money than they get back, and through the new arrangements they will be paying still more.—Chatham News.

LATIN AS STUDY

Youth does not take enthusiastically to the study of a dead language; though in regard to Latin, the reason only that it is fixed, unchanging; that time cannot alter the shade or meaning of any word. One reason why Latin is used by the Roman Catholic Church in her liturgical services is that it is universal and is unaffected by colloquialisms.

Apart altogether from the scholarship implied by a knowledge of Greek and Latin, it is a pity that so many Canadians are unfamiliar with the beauty and vigor of these languages. It has been claimed for the speech of Greece that it was "exquisite, musical, as truly a work of art as any statue ever hewn from marble", and that "the Roman language was strong, compact, capable of accomplishing its purpose as was the Roman Legion." Though these languages have passed from popular use their influence is evident in many modern tongues. The roots of countless words common in daily English speech run back either to Greek or Latin, and the learning of these is one of the delights of the etymologist.

The scholar who in his declining years entertains himself by reading in Latin Horace's Odes and Caesar's Orations; or in Greek the works of Plato, Homer and Herodotus, will deplore any regulation that gives youth what it will regard as an avenue of escape from the compulsory study of these languages. But it is a changing world, and modern educationists are aiming first, to give to the student a grounding in education along lines that will serve him best in the making of a living. Admittedly, in this grim business Greek or Latin will be of little advantage; but from the cultural point of view both always will remain invaluable.—Toronto Globe.

The object of punishment is the prevention of evil; it can never be made impulsive to good.—Horace Mann.

Crime and punishment grow out of one stem. Punishment is a fruit, that, unsuspected, ripens within the flower of the pleasure that concealed it.—Emerson.

Make my breast transparent as pure crystal, that the world, jealous of me, may see the foulest thought my heart can hold. —Buckingham.

Evil into the mind of God or man, may come and go, and yet, if unapproved, still without sin.—Milton.

Love must shun the path where many rove; one bosom to recline on, one heart to be his only one, are quite enough for love.—Moore.

There are two perfectly good men; one dead, and the other unborn.—Chinese Proverb.

In nothing do men approach so nearly to the gods as in doing good to men.—Cicero.

BELLEVILLE BETTER DAYS ARE HERE AGAIN. This is a gesture of goodwill by the merchants of Belleville, repeated spring and fall, which has attracted attention not only in this district but all over Canada. The merchants through the medium of Belleville Better Days draw attention to the advantages of Belleville as a shopping centre for the great area tapped by the good roads system of Bay of Quinte District. Visitors are invited from far and near and special values are given in stores besides various entertaining features and the possibility of winning valuable prizes. Each year Belleville Better Days become better known and more popular and bring shoppers here from points more than one hundred miles distant. Belleville merchants are progressive and energetic and have no time for that odd "game of checkers in the back room" which it is said at one time featured business in small communities. They have no time even to play golf except on Sundays—after church.

GLADSTONE VS. DISRAELI—two doughty opponents. Gladstone fervently disliked Disraeli, and Dizzy, although he would have liked to have liked the great Gladstone, was too chilled by Gladstone's patent dislike to undertake friendly feelings long. Gladstone, from his lofty height, affected to despise or ignore the existence of Disraeli, and this cut deeply. After one of the severe thrusts from Gladstone, Disraeli described his statesman opponent in words that sizzled and smoked but no doubt failed to even heat Gladstone's thick armor of self-esteem:

"A sophisticated rhetorician, inebriated with the exuberance of his own verbosity, and gifted with an egotistical imagination that can at all times command an intermina and inconsistent series of arguments to malign an opponent and to glorify himself."

EUROPEAN NATIONS are said to be experimenting on bacterial offensives for the next war. If they could mobilize the germs now rampant in Belleville which attack the throat and then make a malignant march to all points south in the human system they would win the war in less than a walk. If your throat feels all raw and sore, and burning like an active volcano, send for the doctor, quick—and save yourself a lot of suffering. Home remedies just have no effect whatever on these new peace killing germs.

SYNTHETIC SMILES

Culled From Various Sources

When a woman fainted during a trial in a Federal court in Kansas, a bailiff incautiously called out: "Is there a doctor in the court?" The result, as reported by Reuter, was that there immediately rushed to her assistance four pathologists, three surgeons, two toxicologists, a dentist, three general practitioners, two chemists, one pharmacist. It is added that the patient "quickly revived"—which possibly suggests an insufficient appreciation of her own importance. If she had displayed any proper sense of what was due to her, she would have declined to come round until her attendants had also included at least an osteopath, two or three chiropracticians, a professor of jiu-jitsu, a brace of veterinary surgeons, and a sanitary inspector.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 Years Ago

April 30th., 1915

Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education for the Province of Ontario, and Hon. F. G. MacDiarmid, Minister of Public Works, paid an official visit to the Ontario School for the Deaf yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Deegan, Pearl Street, Brockville, will leave shortly to reside in Belleville. They will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends in this town. (Brockville Recorder).

Twenty cars each containing about fifty thousand salmon fry were shipped from the hatchery here yesterday to Kingston and deposited in Lake Ontario.

At a meeting of the Board of Health for the city those present were Mayor Panter, Mr. Arthur McGie, chairman; Mr. S. Robertson, Mr. L. P. Hughes and Dr. Yeomans, Medical Health Officer. It was moved by Mr. Robertson and seconded by Mr. McGie that the City Council be again requested to pass such necessary bylaw that the Board of Health may be empowered to require citizens to connect their properties with regular sewers where such sewers are available. This could be done at once. It was decided also to request the City Council to declare the week of May 7th to May 14th as clean-up week.

30 Years Ago

APRIL 30th., 1905.

Clever Bellevillians: We have already mentioned the high standing taken by several Bellevillians at Queen's College, Kingston, and now mention others. Mr. H. J. Clarke, B. A., stood third in senior mathematics; Mr. W. Knight stood seventh in English; Mr. Stuart Lazier has completed his full year. T. A. and W. C. McGinnis appear frequently in the list of honors.

Mr. John Moore has resigned as farmer and gardener at the D. and B. Institution after nine years' service, owing to ill health. He will remove with his family to reside in Toronto. Mr. John Hess, who resides in Sidney township near Trenton, will be Mr. Moore's successor.

Mr. Whitley, who takes Mr. Liston's place on the staff at the High School arrived in the city today.

RAIN IS NEEDED OVER PROVINCE

Seeding is General And Fall Wheat in Western Ontario Good

Toronto, April 29—(CP)—Fall wheat held the spotlight in the weekly crop report issued today by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Seeding was general throughout the province, and in many cases operations had been completed. Need for rain was emphasized in many reports.

Prospects for fall wheat in Lambton County were viewed as satisfactory and it was estimated not one per cent. of the crop would have to be re-seeded. Most other Western Ontario counties expected a promising crop of fall wheat.

Police Ready To Quell Riots On "May Day"

(By Roger D. Greene)

(Copyright 1935, by the Associated Press)

London, April 30—Police throughout Europe were alert today to quell any incipient disorders breaking tomorrow's celebrations of May Day —the day originally designated for peaceful festivities of working men.

Trouble threatened most seriously in Spain and Austria.

A brief exchange of shots, during which a woman was gravely wounded, developed from a communist demonstration in Madrid. Ten communists were arrested in Seville after authorities found subversive literature in their possession.

In Austria, Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's Government offered free goulash and movies as a counter stimulation to disorder, Leftists, planning "lightning strategy" mass festations against Fascists, clashed with police on the outskirts of Vienna.

More or less orderly displays of labor organizations were planned elsewhere, especially in England, Holland, Belgium and the Scandinavian countries, where Communists were preparing to indulge in soapbox pyrotechnics.

More than 1,000,000 Nazis were expecting to assemble at Tempelhof Airdrome to hear Dr. Robert Ley, Hitler's Commissioner for Trade Unions, administer to several thousand new and newly elected shop delegates the oath of allegiance to Der Fuehrer.

A distinctly military flavor will dominate Moscow's celebrations as Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator, reviews the vast Red Army, grown from 600,000 to nearly 1,500,000 men since last May. Hundreds of combat planes will swarm above Moscow's famous Red Square to symbolize the Soviet's air power repeatedly the greatest in the world.

Our King and Queen

King George speaks to his subjects by radio

WHEN King George speaks over the radio, the whole world listens. Wireless telegraphy has opened an entirely new medium by which His Majesty may personally speak to his millions of subjects.

His Christmas message, which he has given every year since 1930, his opening of parliament addresses and other occasions of great Empire importance are now heard in every quarter of the world.

During the Silver Jubilee celebrations in England and throughout the Empire, the radio will play a great part in bringing the voices of the King and Queen to every home; the great thanksgiving service in St. Paul's Cathedral on May 6 will be broadcast to start the year of celebration.

King George is an excellent radio speaker, possessing a voice of fine texture and clarity. While he does not write his own speeches—that is to say they must bear the approval of his ministers—nevertheless his sage counsel is usually to be felt in the messages he reads to his people.

Our layout to-day shows the King speaking in the microphone, LEFT, at his desk in Sandringham, from which most of his addresses emanate. Right, reading the speech at the Five Power Naval Conference in 1930. In circle, his address of welcome at the World Economic Conference held in London in 1932.

Letters to the Editor

The Editor of The Ontario-Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.
Dear Sir:

Through your kind permission and indulgence we would like on behalf of the Belleville Men's Chorus to bring a few facts to the general publics attention. What we have to say is entirely free from any feeling of censure or complaint, but on the other hand it has to do greatly with the existence of our organization.

Two years ago last January the Belleville Men's Chorus came into being and was founded on the principle, not as a money-making proposition, but rather to do something to further and promote beautiful music in our community. The Chorus was carefully selected under Mr. Ross Hunter's direction, starting with some twenty vocalists and now reaching to the total of twenty-eight.

Our first concert was given in the spring of 1933 under the auspices of the Belleville Rotary Club, the entire proceeds of which went to the Crippled Children's work to the extent of some two hundred and twenty-five dollars. In December of the same year we brought Mr. Knight McGregor, an old Belleville boy, who had never been heard here on the concert stage, to give a grand concert assisted by Belleville talent, the net of which, proceeds, which amounted to the sum of some three hundred and five dollars, went to Mr. McGregor.

In the spring of 1934 we gave our second annual concert on our own behalf and our proceeds netted us some seventy-five dollars, this being the first money raised for our own organization. In December of last year we gave a concert in the Capitol Theatre, the entire proceeds of which were donated to the city for direct relief which amounted to one hundred and twenty-five dollars.

In February of this year we gave a concert in conjunction with the Light Infantry Argyll Band in aid of the relief project at the Trenton Training Camp, the entirely gratis.

Now, sir, my point is that no organization can exist without some necessary expenses. Our music has now cost us something around two hundred and fifty dollars. Also rehearsals have cost us for some fifty dollars. This year, through the kindness of Lieut. Col. Green, the best room at the Armouries has been at our disposal. So from the above information you can see that we came up to our annual concert of this year with a deficit, but had the feeling that the good citizens of Belleville would back us up by supporting us in our endeavors. However, our efforts were not appreciated to that extent, and we are suffering a former deficit of something around fifty dollars which money will have to be raised by the individual members of the Chorus.

Now again, sir, we are not complaining, but it does seem that the citizens of Belleville in general do not appreciate our efforts for an organization.

I might state that our broadcast over a national hook-up which has been so long talked of is very likely to take place some time in May of this year. In this event we feel that owing to our present financial standing we will have to try and sell our program to some out of town interest in order to take care of our expenses to Toronto. By so doing the name Belleville would be dropped and no advertising would come to our fair city through the medium of this event.

In conclusion, we have tried to bring these facts before you so should anything happen to the existence of the Belleville Men's Chorus no blame can be laid to our organization.

Thanking you for your most valuable space in your columns, we remain

Yours very truly,
Belleville Men's Chorus,

CADET TRAINING

Belleville, Ontario,
April 27, 1935.

Mr. Editor:

Invariably, at this time of year, I hear of some very heated discussions at our School Board meetings re the merits, or rather, the demerits of Cadet training.

I am quite certain that the reason for these attempts to stop this training is brought about by a complete ignorance of its value by those objecting to it. These objectors, in every case are the ones who never attend any of the drills and seldom attend the inspection.

Perhaps, if they could find time to be present as one of the annual inspections on the parade square and see these cadets go through their drills and manoeuvres etc. they would realize that it is no, all waste of time.

I would suggest that those members make it a point to attend one of the cadet drills and then see the same cadets on inspection day.

I am sure that they would be surprised to know that not one cadet in ten during their drills each stand still for ten seconds without wiggling his knees, scratching his nose or stretching his head around. About ninety percent of them walk a. if they were carrying the burdens of the world on their shoulders, and the other ten per cent wouldn't dare swing their arms for fear they would fall off. Then see them again near inspection day and if you can find a better group of young men anywhere in this country I would like to see them.

If cadet drill does nothing else than teach a boy how to stand still without acting as if he had the St. Vitus dance," and to walk as if he were alive, it is worth many times over the small amount of time taken from academic work.

But cadet training does more than that. It teaches every cadet to obey orders immediately. It gives those showing an interest and ability in the training a chance to learn how to give orders as well as take them. It also teaches a boy to take pride in his personal appearance.

Surely these are things worthy of commendation. And where else would they get them in the school course outside of cadet training?

I am afraid that the old argument that cadet training puts the boys fire-eating soldiers, is one of the most ridiculous arguments held against this training. I have yet to see any of the graduates starting a revolution in this country. Also, while there is very little soldiering taught in the training, surely in the event of war, a little preparedness is not amiss.

I have yet to hear a sound argument against cadet training and if such members of the Board agitating to stop it will take the trouble to inquire they will find that the only boys not wanting to take the training are those who do not want to do anything they can get out of. I for one can call them to account for I know what I am talking about. I do not include in this category those who are physically unfit of course. But I can quote cases of boys producing medical certificates to the effect that they were unable to stand cadet training who could take part in basketball and rugby. These are the "quitters" and I would ask Mr. Allin to please note this.

I can only say in closing that I hope that the public will support us in our efforts to train useful young citizens.

Ex-Cadet Officer.

P.S.—A copy of the above letter signed by four ex-cadet officers, has been sent to the Board of Education.

ELECTION ACT

Belleville, Ont.,
April 29, 1935.

To the Editor:

The approaching Dominion election suggests some amendments to the Election Act.

The Government pays the enumerators who assist in preparing the voters' lists, also the returning officer of the district, the deputy returning officers, poll clerk and constable for each polling sub-division and the rent of the polling booth where held in private premises.

These, however, do not constitute all the persons who assist in the important work of an election. There are scrutineers and chairwomen of committees, canvassers, revisionists and persons who provide conveyances to bring aged, unwell or disinterested voters to the polls.

These expenses have got to be met and yet the candidate is subject to penalties if he undertakes to pay for these valuable and indispensable services, and the persons who engage in these services have no redress. It is on the faith that they may receive something as compensation.

The rent of halls and committee rooms for meetings should also be paid by the Government.

Efforts might well be made to have the Act amended so that the candidate would be permitted to incur such expenses to a reasonable extent to be paid for by the Government upon registering the name of their respective workers with the returning officer or some other official.

These expenses could be met by a reduction in the sessional indemnity of the member. Formerly a member of the House of Commons received $1,000 a year sessional indemnity. This was raised from time to time until it reached the sum of $5,000 a year. It has since been reduced somewhat.

In this way the candidate would really be as well off as he is now so far as expenditure is concerned, in most instances, and persons who were giving up their time and attention to participate in elections would be sure of receiving some reasonable compensation, whether acting for the Opposition or the Government.

The work of the persons to whom I have referred is just as important as the work of the member himself, and if it is right to give compensation to the member it is also right to give compensation to those who helped in the selection of the member.

The financial position of some candidates is such that they cannot afford to pay these expenses. These expenses of course would be confined to the two recognized parties. If the above suggestion was adopted of fixing the Sessional indemnity at $1,000 a year for a member of the House of Commons and Senate the result would be that the sessions instead of lasting six months would be more likely to end in sixty days, with an additional saving to the country of the expense of a long session.

W. C. Mikel.

P.S.—If you favour this, please say so.

Toronto Man Tells In Sworn Statement How Fruit-a-tives Banished Severe Headaches

Mr. Henry Dawson, 30 Caledonia Ave., Toronto, says he be bothered with severe headaches. He revealed how he stopped them, under oath before a notary in order that everyone can know of the truth. Mr. Dawson's statement reads,—"Following serious operations I was bothered with severe headaches. The pain on the top of my head was like a violent headache, at times, more than I could bear. I consulted my doctor. He advised me to take Fruit-a-tives. Ever since I used them I have not had a minute's trouble with headaches. I cannot recommend Fruit-a-tives too highly to anyone who is troubled as I was."

What Fruit-a-tives have done for Mr. Dawson and thousands of others, they can do for you. If you suffer from headaches as Mr. Dawson once did or if you are troubled with constipation, indigestion, or similar ills, start using Fruit-a-tives at once. You'll find, too, that their tonic effects will give you new zest in life, new energy and health.

Copy of Mr. Dawson's complete sworn statement will be sent on request. Fruit-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

TAKES THE LAST BIT OF GUESSWORK OUT OF BAKING AND ROASTING

Stabilized Heat

THE NEW McCLARY ELECTRIC RANGE FEATURE

GENERAL Steel Wares has added the final touch to automatic baking and roasting. In the new McClary Electrics, these two important cooking operations have been reduced to two simple turns of a switch.

NO OVER-HEAT

With the first turn, Stabilized Heat takes charge and gives you the fastest pre-heating ever found on a McClary Electric Range. You can't over-heat the oven, for the oven elements are automatically cut off when the desired temperature has been reached . . . and a small red light on the switch panel tells that your oven is ready.

NO UNDER-HEAT

If you delay getting your baking in the oven, the Stabilized Heat Control keeps the oven temperature at the proper level by turning on the oven elements at the first sign of a dropping temperature.

THE GREATEST BOON

Once your baking is in the oven you can forget it. Throughout the entire baking process, the Stabilized Heat Control will see that the oven heat is evenly maintained—no over-heating, no under-heating. It turns on oven elements and turns them off when not needed. You save electricity—you save time—you save worry—and you get the best baking results you've ever had.

AT YOUR DEALER'S

You must see the new McClarys to appreciate the many new features . . . the "Daylite" cooking top, the stabilized heat, the super-fast Non-Spoil elements, the matchless beauty of the range. Write to General Steel Wares Limited, 199 River St., Toronto, for free literature.

PEDENS TO TEAM

Victoria, April 30—When the Canadian basketball championship series between Assumption College of Windsor and Victoria Blue Bombers is concluded here this week, Doug Peden, husky Victoria guard, will exclude all of Mrs. Peden to participate in amateur bicycle races there.

Doug will train with his brother, "Torchy," of one-day bike race fame. The youngster—he is just 19 years old—has no definite plans for a future in the bike-racing game, but he and "Torchy" have long planned for the day when they will form the first brother act in big-time six-day circles.

Doug has outstanding reputation as an amateur rider in British Columbia. He stands 6 feet 1 inch and weighs 185 pounds. He will probably travel east with the Assumption team.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Copyright 1935
King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Thanks, of Course

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a bride to acknowledge wedding gifts. Some say it is not the style any more.

I cannot imagine why anybody should take the point of view that it is "not the style" to thank for such a charming and special courtesy as a wedding present. Such a boorish point of view would indeed put one out of the realm of good manners. Not to thank for a present of any kind is simply rank discourtesy, discourtesy of the worst form.

Someone has said that "Appreciation is the high form of civilization" and so the more appreciative we are and the more we express our appreciation, the finer persons we are. By the same token we can figure out where we come in the status of civilization when we are not appreciative and when we do not express our appreciation.

A very definite rule that every well bred bride-to-be observes is that she writes a personal note of thanks for every gift received during the shower. Then, when she leaves for her wedding trip, she leaves with a feeling that every kind friend has been thanked for her or his thoughtfulness. Of course, sometimes she cannot thank for the gifts that arrive at the last minute, but then the friend who has sent such a late gift will also not expect a prompt answer.

The punctilious bride also leaves word for some member of her family to write a note to senders of last-minute presents, saying that the presents have been received and that the bride will write a personal note when she returns from her honeymoon.

See Them to the Door

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me which is proper? When friends are leaving your home, should the host and hostess remain seated or walk to the door with them.

Always, when our guests rise to go, we should rise and this is true of both the hostess and the host. Never, never should we remain seated when a guest rises to leave, for this would cause very awkward and socially unsure.

While it is not always necessary to walk to the door with our guests, especially if we have service to assist them in getting their wraps, it does seem more hospitable for us to do this. One thing though . . . we must remember that our other guests are waiting, and so we should not linger long over the good-byes, for this causes an awkward wait for those who should are left. If, however, the friends who are departing, are the only ones visiting at the time, or the last ones, it makes no difference how long we stand chatting with them.

Parting Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper, when visiting out of town friends and relatives for a few days, to give the hostess a gift when leaving?

2. How should these gifts be accepted?

Mother

1. It is customary to send a gift, after we have returned from the visit. Sometimes the visitor, if she knows the hostess well, takes a gift with her when she goes to make the visit. 2. The hostess when she receives the gift from the guests, writes her a note of thanks and appreciation.

Never Too Young

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for the parents of a boy in his 'teens to entertain informally for him? The guests invited should be of both sexes. Some say "yes", some say "no".

Mother

Most certainly it is correct, and charming, for the parents of a young boy to entertain for him. I cannot understand the point of view of a person who maintains that this would not be correct. This is what hospitality is for, for the gathering of friends of a person no matter what his or her age, or whether he it's He or a She.

At last something new and different in lace! It is an ensemble consisting of a trained skirt of navy blue lace with a jacket made on shirt-waist lines with tiny rhinestone studs and a white lace done on simple lines.

Jump in the net of fashion and you will find net frocks everywhere. An charming one is of black net with designs worked out by inverted tucking done in spiral formation.

An ideal selection to wear with one of the new loose collarless jacket suits is a blouse in a delfta having ample stand-up collar that softly frames the face. This model is available in white, gray, red and blue, and has short puffed sleeves.

A good friend of housewives everywhere has designed a charming house dress with daisy trimmed apron. One model is in checked percale in white and red; shoulder ruffles, collar and jabot are of white organdie. The apron, which buttons onto the frock with big red buttons, is of white organdie piped wit hred and having pockets of the checked percale.

Happy little girls are delighted that the new clothes made for them are so grown-up and smart. A charming suit for a youngster of school age has skirt and box-length cape of big yellow and brown checked tweed, with the belted jacket is in solid brown woolen.

Plenty of white is the important thing to remember when assembling a resort wardrobe. One of the smartest coats seen at Palm Beach is a reefer coat in white smooth woolen with accented seaming and four flap pockets that close with big white pearl buttons.

World's Oldest House Sees Light of Day

Washington, April 30—America's oldest house—a tiny insect whose brief life span ended some 30 million years ago—was brought to the officially attention of Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, by its proud custodian, W. C. Mendenhall, director of the United States Geological Survey.

Director Mendenhall has the ancient louse tucked away in a thin section—a translucent sliver of rock—where modern eyes with microscopic aid may view it. Researchers came upon the minute specimen accidentally while carrying on important studies of oil shale. A contemporary of the little three-toed horse, this louse may have ridden their backs eons ago as they pranced their way over western plains.

Scientifically speaking the prize louse is no louse but a mite, a member of the lice clan. It is but twenty-hundredths of an inch in length. Whiskers, eyes and legs of the little mite were intact when Director Mendenhall found it among dust from Colorados Garfield County, near the bottom of a prehistoric lake.

BRING OTTAWA BACK

Ottawa, April 30—(CP)—The Ottawa Journal today published a letter from Tommy Gorman, manager of the Montreal Maroons, to Walter Gilbert, its sports editor, suggesting "dyed - in - the - wool" sportsmen in Ottawa form a syndicate to buy the St. Louis Eagles franchise from Tommy Shaughnessy and bring Ottawa back into the National Hockey League fold. Gorman added: "I would advocate the appointment of some high-class hockey man like Frank Nighbor or Dave Gill as General Manager, with George Boucher or Eddie Gerard as coach, and the purchase of Frank Boucher to general the team on the ice."

MONTREAL BOXER BEST

Boston, April 30—(CP)—Tommy Osborne, strapping Montrealer with a right hand, that brings sudden sleep to his adversaries, stood forth today as the star of a colorful international boxing pageant staged here by the Irish-American Athletic club.

Five Montreal amateurs, a like number from Ireland and 10 aspiring New Englanders met in an elimination carnival in Boston Garden last night before 11,000 satisfied customers. Osborne was the only Canadian to score a victory in the finals but by knocking out both his opponents of the evening he won the special award for being the outstanding performer of the pageant.

SOCIETIES

Euchre Held at St. George's By Scout Mothers

Monday evening at St. George's Sunday School rooms a very successful euchre and bridge party was held by the Mothers' Auxiliary to the 3rd Belleville Boy Scouts. Prize-winners were: Bridge, Mrs. Fred Symons, first; Miss Helen Symons, second; Mr. Fred Symons, men's first," and Mr. Vernon McKnight, men's second; Mrs. Ivan Symons, consolation.

Euchre prizes: Miss Doris Morgan, first; Mrs. H. Varley, second; Mrs. Dewey and Mrs. Bolton, first and second men's prizes; Mrs. Hagner, consolation.

The lucky number on the quilt was held by Scout Bob Weaver.

Mrs. Churchill won the basket of groceries. Refreshments were served and the Scout Orchestra furnished excellent music during the evening.

ENTERTAINMENT IS FINE SUCCESS

Rawdon—On Friday evening, April 26th Mount Pleasant Hall was the scene of a happy gathering when the folks from Pethericks presented their play "The Colonel's Maid."

Rev. F. G. Joblin cordially welcomed the visitors and Mrs. Fred Ryan thanked Colonel and Mrs. Bird.

Colonel Rudd—A widower of North Carolina—Mr. Fred Fry.
Colonel Richard Bird—A widower of South Carolina—Mr. Lindsay Anderson.
Marjorie Byrd — The Colonel's daughter—Miss Cora Petherick.
Bob Rudd—Nephew and adopted son at his father—Mr. Harry Ewing.
Mrs. John Carroll—A widow and Col. Rudd's sister-in-law—Mrs. Jennie Anderson.
Mrs. Gershon—Her daughter—Miss Laura Watson.
Ned Grayson—A young gentleman of extremely faulty memory—Mr. George Brunton.
Mr. James Blackmore—Col. Rudd's lawyer—Mr. Alfred Simpson.
Ching-A-Ling—A Chinese cook, a bit impertinent but by far the most important character in the cast—Mr. Arthur Petherick.

The play was given in three times with the first act in the kitchen scene. Here Ching-ah-Ling tries to prepare breakfast for Col. Rudd and Bob, answers door bells and telephones between times to the maids work. Incidentally all attempts at cooking the bacon and eggs fail and everything is burned to a crisp. In the middle of the disorder the colonel's daughter Marjorie known as saint Emma and her daughter Julia arrive. A maid is needed at once and Bob sees the day and has his girl friend Marjorie Byrd come in the disguise as the maid known as Hannah, as he knows his father's propensities forever toward the Byrd family.

The second act took place in the living room of the Rudd home. Julia's friend Ned arrives and poses as a salesman but unfortunately he has a poor memory. Colonel Byrd arrives and is greatly surprised and he and Colonel Rudd have several outbreaks of temper. The colonel has continued visits here with Bob, but Bob refuses to marry Julia and eventually Ned and Marjorie settle him.

In the last act Aunt Emma and Colonel Byrd discover they were old sweethearts. Colonel Byrd and Colonel Rudd apologize to each other and made up their differences. Julia and Ned elope, while Marjorie explains why she accepted a position of maid and she and Bob plan to be married.

Throughout the play Ching-ah-Ling was the centre of much fun and jollity and brought down the house with roars of applause.

Everything ends happily and Ching-ah-Ling hustles Lizette, splitter to get some refreshments in readiness for the celebration.

Between acts Cora Petherick Brunton delighted with a solo "The Second Minuet."

A musical selection was contributed by Miss Cora Petherick (piano) and Master Jack Brunton (harmonica).

The Misses Evelyn and Helen Barnum were heard in a vocal duet "Always Respect a Lady" with Mrs. Allan Watson as accompanist.

Petherick's orchestra rendered several numbers with Mrs. Byrd faithfully enjoyed and applauded: Miss Cora Petherick, pianist; Arthur Petherick, violin; Miss Evelyn Barnum and Mrs. Ernest Irwin, guitars.

Appreciation for the splendid evening's entertainment was voiced by the pastor, Rev. John Sprotts, president of Mount Pleasant Y.P.S. and Mr. Kenneth Holmes. The proceeds amounted to $22.15 and the cast were served lunch after the National Anthem.

The Misses Bentnie and Hazel Dunham are holidaying at the home of uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Nell Third.

Rawdon friends were sorry to hear that Mrs. Bruce Adams (nee Elspeth Heath) of Toronto will be confined to her bed for a couple of months owing to a bad fracture of her spine which occurred during a recent motor accident. Mrs. Adams underwent an X-ray examination on Friday and the doctors thought it necessary to put the spine in a plaster cast. Mrs. Adams is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Heath and she with her husband was visiting her parents and while riding in her father's car, the accident happened on the Stirling-Marmora highway, north of Wooler's Hill. While Mr. Heath was trying to avoid a soft spot in the road the left rear wheel struck a large boulder which caused considerable damage to the car.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE REGENT

"Car 99" and "Vanessa; Her Love Story"

Superb Twin-Bill Featuring Police Radio Car Work in Crime Hunting

The exploits and adventures of the Michigan State Police, most famous of the nation's crime hunting forces, is the subject of "Car 99", the Paramount picture at the Belle Today and Wednesday, matinee and evening, with Fred MacMurray, Sir Guy Standing and Ann Sheridan heading the cast.

Packed with thrills and mile-a-minute action, this is a colorful and authentic picture of what these peace-time soldiers must encounter in the performance of their arduous and often dangerous duty.

The stern, sense of loyalty and devotion which this force inculcates in its men is revealed in the career of Fred MacMurray, who plays a rookie trooper.

Lured by the girl he loves, he joins the force and soon distinguishes himself in the battle against apprehension of criminals.

When the leader of the most dangerous gang of bank-robbers falls into his hands and out again through his carelessness, the young trooper is suspended from the force. Disgruntled and bitter at first, MacMurray crashes through to save the force's honor and round up the crooks after they have crippled the police radio station.

Throughout the stirring episodes of "Car 99" there is a pleasing note of romance, principally carried by the extremely capable and jovial William Frawley as a trooper lieutenant.

MacMurray, who first distinguished himself with his role in "The Gilded Lily" renders an expressly fine performance as the youthful, ingenious and romantic trooper, and lovely Ann Sheridan, as newcomer, is highly satisfactory in the other romantic role. Sir Guy Standing, cast as the leader of the criminal band, contributes an intelligent and highly capable performance.

AT THE CAPITOL

"King Kong"

The picture that leaps beyond the frontier of imagination, with thrills never before achieved

The producers of scores of the screen's greatest spectacles have soared grandly into the realms of imagination for the super-fantasy, "King Kong," featuring Fay Wray, Robert Armstrong and Bruce Cabot which comes to the Capitol for a return engagement Wednesday.

Helen Hayes in "Vanessa"

Two of the cinema's most brilliant stars, Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery are co-starred in one of the season's outstanding photoplays which is announced as the second feature attraction on the same program.

It is "Vanessa; Her Love Story", adaptation of Hugh Walpole's saga of the spectacular Herries family.

Brimming with high romance, rich with the idealistic sweetness of the last generation, the story follows the fate of a woman poet who, loving one man with all the fluid adoration of youth, and is persuaded to enter a more suitable marriage with Otto Kruger who, pleasantly enough, makes her life unbearable. How the complications of her life are solved makes for a fascinating story.

May Robson Scores

With these is an outstanding cast, each of whom deserves special mention. They include May Robson, Lewis Stone and Henry Stephenson, each of whom is excellently cast and contributes greatly to the finished perfection of the photoplay.

The Belle Latest News Flashes as introduced by the one and only Edwin C. Hill will be exhibited on the same program.

Performances will be presented daily at 2.30, 7.10, the last complete performance at 9.15. "Car 99" will be presented daily at 2.45, 7.30 and 9.50. "Vanessa" will be exhibited at 2.40 and 8.30 p. m.

day only.

With the late Edgar Wallace, Cooper conceived the extravagantly fantastic idea of bringing the prehistoric age into juxtaposition with the modern age. First an expedition to jungle island discovers surviving members of the Jurassic Age, a pterodactyl, brachiodon, triceratops and others—ruled over by a giant ape standing more than fifty feet high.

Then the ape is transported to civilization — to New York. Breaking loose, he tears through the streets where people, automobiles, street cars, elevated lines are like so many tin toys beneath one's feet — where even the tallest building in the world is no more difficult to climb than a tree!

The great "King Kong" even reaches into the sky and provides a new menace for airmen, and snatch at a plane pumping machine gun bullets into his tough hide, and it is doomed.

"King Kong" is a terror — the mightiest terror man, either in or out of fiction and of the movies, ever attempted to capture and subdue.

The imagination of the story is something to stagger the mind with the sensalization of it — its production — is a miracle of modern science. Its thrills, its suspense, its realism magically that you question what is fact and what isn't!

There is romance, too, in "King Kong." Bruce Cabot, in love with Fay Wray, finds the monster is his rival. It's a new angle on the Beauty and the Beast theme. The fragile, golden-haired heroine is the first in millions of years to touch a soft, tender spot in the heart of this Beast, and for her he kills giant terrors — wrests fire, also, with mankind and its inventions. But his blundering idea of protection of course terrorizes the girl, and thrills the audience as well.

Interwoven with its surprises and action, "King Kong" sweeps into a new realm of entertainment and leaves one with something that will not fade from memory.

A rib-tickling comedy which will provide gales of laughter and a clever Looniptics Cartoon precede the showing of the feature presentation. Complete shows 2.25; 7.15; 9.15.

Six Processions For the Jubilee

London, April 30 (CP Cable) — Six separate carriage processions were planned today as part of the spectacular ceremonies centering around the service of thanksgiving for the King's Silver Jubilee to be held May 6 in St. Paul's Cathedral.

The Prime Ministers of the Empire will form the first procession. Premier R. B. Bennett will ride alongside Premier J. B. M. Hertzog of South Africa. The Speaker of the House of Commons, riding in a coach weighing 1 1-2 tons, which hasn't been used since the Coronation in 1911, will follow.

The two-carriage procession of the Lord Chancellor, Viscount Sankey, will be the third in order. Then will come that of Sir Stephen Killik, Lord Mayor of London. The last carriage on horseback will herald it.

Royalty will ride in the last two processions. First there will be the Princess, the Duke of York and the Duke of Kent accompanied by their Duchesses. The Queen of Norway, sister of the King, and the Princess Royal will be in this procession.

Finally, climaxing the spectacle, the King and Queen will ride together from Buckingham Palace to St. Paul's. Important members of the Royal Household will follow in four more carriages.

THE FOCUS OF THE PUBLIC EYE !

Canada has fifty-six thickly settled cities—the centres of highest buying power—from which radiate all the important markets of the Dominion.

More than two million daily newspapers are bought by Canadians every day, for daily newspaper reading is a habit that has grown and fastened itself upon our national life.

All the play and movement of civilization, from the Arctic Circle to the Equator, from the mystic East to the heart of the ultra-practical West—the life of the world—is focussed in the newspaper every day.

The readers of the daily newspaper embrace every class of occupation, every income group—the woman in her home; the executive in his office, and the messenger boy sitting outside; great merchants and keepers of small shops; artists, artisans, financiers and clerks; to each and all the daily newspaper is an essential part of everyday life, the focus of all human activities.

Daily Newspapers help to sell more goods than any other advertising medium because they are read by more people.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, April 30.—(AP)—Profit taking tended to restrain the Stock Market optimism today and the list rallied about nevenly during most of the session, but when the closing bells were pushed up on attractive demand, the Metals and Rails were inspired to further advancement.

Con-Cola got up 5 points on a moderate turnover, and Inland Steel, U.S. Gypsum, Johns-Manville, Sears-Roebuck, Montgomery Ward and Chrysler were almost to firm. U. S. Smelting lost 2, American Smelting 1 and Case Threshing 2. Passing about one sash, and Union Pacific, Northern Pacific and Pullman yielded a point or so. Eastman Kodak was down nearly 2. The late tone was irregular, Transfers approximated 900,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES

(Toronto, April 30.—(CP)—London silver market came to the rescue of the white metal group on the mining section of the Toronto exchange today, the advance for metal being sufficient to lift specific cable buying, mainly in Eldorado, Beer and Preston.

Eldorado pushed up to 2.63 at the opening and was holding around 2.55 this afternoon for a gain of a few cents, Castle was off slightly. Bear had early a fractional to early gain of 6 cents and Peterson Coldfield added 1-4. Premier traded at 1.90, unchanged and Nipissing lost 5, selling at 2.75.

In the Base Metals there was a gain of 5 cents for Pend Oreille and Falconbridge, and a loss of 25 cents for Noranda.

In the senior gold group gains of 10 cents were boarded for Lake Shore, Hollinger and Pioneer and fractions lost 15 cents.

Silver stocks were given a mild play again today on the mining section, the London and New York quotations on metal were not definitely bullish, but there showed about within a narrow range and early this afternoon were not far off Monday's closing level. The price for bar silver was 49 5-16 Montreal trailing but the New York commercial price was unchanged.

Bar gold had a small advance in London and the general tone of the gold shares was firm to strong with trading however in rather small proportions. Hollinger was a strong spot. Pioneer did better and in the cheap lanes Wayside and Paymaster were prominent, both moving up on good volume.

TORONTO INDUSTRIAL STOCKS

TORONTO, April 30.—(CP)—The Industrial Share Market got back to the early April routine today with the exception of the turnover for the morning session totalling something under 7,000 shares. Total was sold for a loss of 1 1-4 to 26 3-4. Consolidated Smelters only a small fractional gain.

Distillers Seagrams weakened 3-8 to 34 1-4 Watkins Common was off 2-8 to 24 1-2 and Industrial Alcohol A. held about steady. Yet

TWEED SEPARATE SCHOOL REPORT

"You're Telling Me" Presented by Young People of Bridge St. Church

Tweed—An excellent three-act comedy "You're Telling Me" was presented on Wednesday evening by the Young People of Bridge St. United Church, Belleville, in Tweed auditorium. The play was sponsored by the local C.G.I.T. group, of which Miss Beaie Gordon, B.A. is the leader, and drew an appreciative audience. Mr. W. S. Gordon acted as chairman and welcomed the audience.

The cast of characters was as follows:

Mrs. Carstairs—Miss Muriel Vermilyea.

George Carstairs—Mr. Carl Sills.

Kit Carstairs—Miss Clara Carmen.

Mrs. Antoinette Regan—Miss Helen B. Sulman.

Theda Regan — Miss Dora Osborne.

Marleen Regan—Anne Larue.

Lloyd Hamilton—Mr. A. W. Bishop.

Pamela Snowdon—Miss Ana Cartley.

Ward Wanger—Harry Atkinson.

Lord Hamilton—Karl Thorp.

Directress—Miss Jessie Tuite.

The various characters were admirably suited to the parts which they played. Miss Helen Sulman, who played the part of Mrs. Antoinette Regan needs no introduction to Tweed audiences, having starred in other plays given locally by Belleville casts. She added to her previous success by her splendid portrayal of the newly-rich matron, with aspirations of titled bonds for her daughters, Theda and Marleen, (Miss Dora Osborne and Miss Anne Larue) who performed their parts splendidly.

Miss Muriel Vermilyea, as Mrs. Carstairs, successfully depicted the reactions of a lady of culture and refinement to a condition where the family fortunes are exhausted. Her daughter Kit (Miss Clara Carstrom) was splendid in her efforts to retrieve the family's fallen fortunes by furthering the plans of Mrs. Regan. George Carstairs (Mr. Carl Sills) filled a difficult role successfully. Mr. A. W. Bishop as Lloyd Hamilton played his exacting role in convincing style. Miss Ana Gartley as Pamela Snowdon, stirred considerable favourable comment from the audience by her natural and clever performances. Mr. Harry Atkinson added much to the success of the comedy by his brilliant acting. While Karl Thorp played the part of Lord Hamilton very acceptably.

The play was a splendid success and was favorably commented on by the members of the audience. Much of the success of the performance is due to the training received at the hands of Miss Jessie Tuite.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sager and Miss Dorothy Sager who have been residing in Peterboro for several years returned to Tweed on Tuesday and will live in their home which has been recently occupied by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Singleton.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Nancy Jane McDonald was held on Saturday afternoon from her late residence near Stoco to Bethel United Church where services were conducted by Rev. R. B. Herrington. Interment was at Bethel. The bearers were: Wesley Martin, Wm. Welsh, C. W. Booth, Rd. Hopkins, Stafford Burns and Wm. Doran.

The deceased was born in Hungerford Township on May 13th, 1865 and has resided here all her life, attended Chapman Public School and in 1907 was married in Tweed to the late Noble McDonald, who died several years ago. The deceased was a member of the United Church. One sister survives, Mrs. T. H. Smith of Seattle, Wash.

COMPLETE CARD IS ANNOUNCED

Two Main Bouts Included in Kiwanis Wrestling Show Friday

The complete card for Friday night's Kiwanis Club charity wrestling card, to be staged at the Belleville Arena, was announced by Chairman George Lee today. An added main bout was included on the card, when the bouts over the four limit were included on the programme with one thirty minute opening bout between two novices, in the wrestling world, to a special ring for persons of Frank Novak, Polish lad at 190 pounds meeting Jim Wilkins, the Moncton grappler weighing 187 pounds. "We have endeavoured to bring a real top-notcher to meet Al Dunstall in the main event of the night in the person of Walter Parnell," stated Mr. Lee today. "Parnell, as you know, has appeared in Belleville before and always impressed the spectators as being a progressive sort of a wrestler and should make an ideal opponent for the type of man Dunlop demonstrated in last week," added Mr. Lee.

"We are glad to announce that the semi-final bout of the evening is also to be a one hour limit affair clinging together Jack Dalkin, who won the hearts of the fans last week, versus Jack Pearl, who wrestled locally last fall," stated Mr. Lee in his pointed out, that two hours and one half of wrestling would be on the card. The opener is a one hour bout, while the other two bouts will be the best two out of three falls.

The Kiwanis Club is endeavouring to bring the better class of wrestlers to Belleville and desires to present better contestants in a real ring as their shows increase.

Blue Ribbons Of Vancouver Cage Titlists

Victoria, April 30 (CP)— Blue Ribbons of Victoria today held the Dominion men's senior amateur basketball title for the second time in three years—a title they won by a slim margin two-point margin over a courageous Assumption College quintet from Windsor, Ont.

The two teams, champions of the east and the west, came to the end of the 1935 hoop trail here last night in the fourth of the best of five game series and when the final whistle had blown the Ribbons were victors by a 39-37 count.

But for a lightning fast Windsor attack that went awry in the last 10 seconds of play history might have been rejected with the teams going into overtime as Ribbons did against another Windsor crew in 1933. The first time the Victorians won the title.

Underdogs after the first four minutes of the opening quarter when Ribbons took the lead, and trailing at times by as much as 11 points, the Assumptionites fought grimly and a half dozen times in the first three quarters cut down the Victoria lead.

In the final quarter the six-foot Willie "Moose" Rogin, ace scorer of the visitors, started an individual rally, that just fell short of putting his team on an even footing with Ribbons.

Rally Falls Short

Rogin grabbed passes out of the air, broke up Victoria rushes and generally gave the Ribbons more than they bargained for as he raced down the floor for nine points in the final session. Toots Mereitsky added four and Scrubby Aitchison two earlier in the quarter.

Then with teamseconds to go and the Ribbons leading 38-37, Toots took the ball under his own hoop and flashed through to the Victoria cage. As he neared the Ribbons basket, the Windsor star snapped a fast pass to Aitchison but the Assumption captain was out of position. Although he lunged desperately for the ball it whipped past him and with it the Easterners' last opportunity to score. Ribbons hung tonto the ball for the few seconds remaining.

It was the cleanest game played men."

On a Victoria floor this season. Only 16 personal fouls were called in contrast to the 26 of Saturday night. Of the 16 only three were assessed to Assumption players.

"No alibis" chorused the Assumptionlies, but after the game Aitchison remarked: "We have no complaints about tonight's refereeing. If you can say we were robbed of the third game by two blind

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Only two of the many applications for change of residence presented to the O.R.A.A. on Saturday materially affected the O.H.A. For instance Frank Whitehouse was granted a transfer from Toronto to his native city of Peterboro and will be used on the hilltop for the "Sea Horses" this season. The only other applicant from this section of the province was H. K. "Red" Hollingsworth, who is returning home to Peterboro from Oshawa. If our memory serves us right, that gives the Petes no less than seven imports over last year, not including "Stig" Konopka, who shook the dust of the Quaker Oat Town from his heels late last fall and did not return think Oshawa could not get two by).

Another important question, that will confront the C. O. H. L. delegates here on Saturday is the question of umpires. For the past eight or nine years, the various clubs throughout the circuit have deemed it advisable to employ local or home umpires, much to the dissatisfaction of the players, fans and even the umpires themselves. Now that the various clubs composing the league have taken on a more optimistic attitude and have reconstructed their clubs to a marked degree, they should discard that cheap inadequate system of supplying and revert back to the old neutral umpire system that assisted the O.H.A. to soar to heights in its early and more flourishing days. Today the majority of the clubs compose the loop are sponsored by industrial firms as an advertising medium. If these companies are interested in the elevation of the game then they should see that the very best system of umpires be employed. About the only difference between the home umpire system and the neutral umpire set up is the matter of travelling expenses, which could be easily arranged to keep the ever-head expenses at the minimum if properly handled in the matter of assigning umpires.

For these many years past there has been considerable disapproval registered throughout the circuit in relationship to home umpires. No matter how hard the officials laboured to give impartial decisions, they were always ridiculed by either one side or the other; fires the home team would complain, that their home town umpire was being source and the opposing official "robbing" them and vice versa. Whenever an official was called upon to render a decision on a close play he found himself in a jam regardless as to whether the decision was correct or not. As a matter of fact things became so adverse towards home umpires, that certain teams took exception to some officials and refused to allow them to handle games in their games. If the president could assign neutral umpires, who knew the rules thoroughly and knew they were competent, these things would not obtain and arguments. At any rate the league officials as well as the clubs should give the matter serious consideration, especially if they desire real baseball league.

There is no reason why the C. O. H. L. cannot employ neutral umpires the same as all other prominent senior leagues throughout the province. The International League officials in charge of assigning umpires to the various games in their respective circuits have been operating successfully for many years and always employed neutral umpires and the Niagara and Southern Leagues.

Through the medium of the grapevine we learned to-day, that Vinny Ulrunki, one of the leading hitters of the 1934 Intermediate "A" series, had been approached by Cobourg Ponies in relationship to playing with them during the coming season. Ulrunki is at present residing in Brighton, a village exactly the same distance from Cobourg as from Belleville, thus giving Ulrunki his choice in regards to where he wants to play. The rumours also stated, that Ulrunki was quite dissatisfied with his reception at the hands of the local club last year and he is quite desirous of playing with the Ponies in 1935. Although the ex-Senifield is not the best outfielder in the loop by a long way, he can always be depended on to come at the bat, despite Koutsy Lee's knowledge of his hitting for that spot. Of course the question of Ulrunki's release still enters into the case, but if Ulrunki does not desire to play for the local senior club they should be able to get the base him a release to play for the Ponies, he a disgruntled or dissatisfied player is no asset to any club.

W. J. "Peeney" Mills, commissioner on the Ontario Athletic Commission was in Toronto yesterday attending a special session of that board.

The two best wrestlers to appear on last Friday's Kiwanis Club's programme are the only ones to reappear at the Arena on Friday night of this week when Jack Dalkin, the squatty little Italian, who downed Johnnie Herman, is slated to meet Jack Pearl while Bunny Dunlop, last week's villain, meets Walter Parnell, of professional football fame. The curtain raiser sees two new faces in a local ring, when Frank Slovak, 190, meets Jim Wilkins, 187.

The opening of the local softball season was somewhat mitigated last evening when Jupiter Flavius intervened and put a halt to the league's aspirations. The Wall Street leagiuers were forced to postpone their inaugural until Thursday night. Which reminds us, that it is to be hoped that last night's opening is to be no criterion of the coming out-door season's activities, dances being rained out just when their big moment presents itself. Incidentally the Senior City Softballers will convene at the Arena Club this evening, when the league schedule, question of umpires and election of a new secretary will constitute the night's business commencing at 7.30 p.m.

"Red" Dutton Becomes Amerks Player-Manager

Mervin "Red" Dutton, the Calgary product who has added fire and nerve to the rearguard of New York Americans for several seasons is now manager of the Star-spangled crew. Dutton succeeds "Bullet" Joe Simpson at the helm and will be a playing manager, taking his place on the ice as he always has. Here he is shown at his desk after signing a two-year contract to manage the team. Dutton went to American from Montreal Maroons with whom he played after disbanding of the old Western Canada league. He has begun planning for recruits to strengthen the team in the 1935-36 season.

Daily Short Story

Bad Luck Goes in Threes

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

By Leslie A. Hill

Anyone who doesn't drop a dime in "Old Folks" hat before the first race at Churchill Downs deserves to have the Jinx ride all his selections.

"Old Folks" has been a fixture at the Kentucky track since the days of Domino and Lexington, and nobody pretends to know how old he really is but rumor has it that he was a slave before the war. Even when there is no bugle call at the track, when the racers are far and away from Churchill; "Old Folks," never leaves. He's supposed to live in one of the care-takers' barns.

But when the race meetings are on, "Old Folks" can generally be found sitting on the bottom step, just between the grand stand and the Club House, smoking a disreputable old clay pipe, gazing on into space. He never spends a dime, needs no vacation, and if a coin happens to drop into his hat he never fails to feign mighty surprise. "Old Folks" understand, is not a beggar, or a charitee. "Old Folks" is a sort of oracle, a boss, an ebony human idol of Lady Luck. Leastwise that's what legend and tradition have made him at Churchill Downs.

Also, when a "regular" has dropped coins in the "Old Folks" hat for many consecutive days and the coins are bigger than dimes, "Old Folks seems to take the color scheme into a sort of inner circle tribunic pie as to talking of other days and other races, and other folks. I'd been dropping coins in "Old Folks" hat for about a week, on this particular day, and then, as a half dollar came to rest he looked up and said:

Bad Luck

"I reckon, Mistuh Joe, that you-all should be having a change of luck today."

"Old Folks" couldn't have known that I hadn't had a winner of twenty-six straight bets. He couldn't have known that I'd cracked the last hundred to get in the track that day.

"Old Folks" couldn't have known that I just about had to have a change of luck—or else I'd started to head it down at him, allthing there.

"How come, Old Folks — why today?"

"Because, Mistuh Joe—ev'thing runs in cycles. Bad Luck comes in threes. You all had three. Mebbe things is going to slow down what they is, but you had three. So you all will be having good luck in de while."

I laughed at Old Folks but there was an uncanny sort of prickling up and down my spine. He told me to bet Star Dust in the first race, and Star Dust was an outsider. Star Dust didn't figure to be anywhere and Star Dust's jockey was a "double-bug" apprentice hardly more than a stable boy. Pembroke Lass figured for me to win the race and I waved to Old Folks and started toward the mutuel windows.

I bought a five dollar ticket on No. 6, and then turned away. The horses lined up at the barrier, the taps shot up, and Star Dust broke all the way to win by two full lengths—at a price of 100.30. Then when the numbers went up on the board, Number 6, was in the win hole. I'd mistaken the numbers when I intended to buy a ticket on Pembroke Lass, and called for Star Dust instead. That wasn't lucky luck. That was just plain luck.

I told Old Folks about it all and he didn't even seem surprised. The second race I went for a hunch Old Folks named. He ran second, but the horse than won was disqualified.

"Two races Old Folks told me not to bet and I didn't. He told me to play two races across the board. I did—and got two seconds that paid handsomely. The last race was dropped into my lap by Old Folks at 10 to 1. I went back to him, after that last race and sat down beside him on the steps.

"Now," I declared, "you've got to tell me how you figured out I'd have a change of luck today." Then Old Folks told me this yarn.

"I told you Mistuh Joe, Bad Luck always goes in threes. Now two years ago that there colt Barney Finn had seconds all over like he ought to win the Derby, you 'member Black Night?

Number One

"Mist' Finn had a daughter, Betty and Joe Beech the race rider followed Betty was the sweetest thing that ever walked. Joe Beech and Betty planned it all out that they'd get married on Joe's riding out if he won the Derby. And he didn't win—. That was bad luck Number 1.

"Then Betty said she didn't care about that, she didn't want to feel she'd made a bet on a hoss race, and Joe Beech he got huffy and said he didn't make presences he didn't keep and he got to fussin' with Betty and it wound up in they all splittin' up. That was Bad Luck Number 2.

"And then see here, Mistuh Joe —" and Old Folks fished a clipping out of his pocket and passed it over to me. It told about a spill, a month back at New Orleans, when Jockey Joe Beech being ambulanced away to the Hospital to die. I didn't have to read all the clipping to find that the horse that had fallen with him had been "Black Night."

"So you see, Mist' Joe—Bad Luck does run in threes."

"It does look that," I replied, talking more to myself than to him. "First Lelia marries the other guy, then my business busts out at the seams, then the remnants of that crash go into the mutuels, down to the last century—until today—"

"And now"—it's Old Folks again—"you all is starting to get the good luck. Today you gets a winning day and"—he creaked rheumatically to his feet and bowed low to some one approaching from across the infield from the stables. It was a girl, a redhead sort of girl, and as she came on closer and smiled at Old Folks, his eyes took on an impish glint and he said:

"Miss Betty, I'm doing something now that may look awful harsh, but—when the voices inside tell me to do something I just do it. Now Miss Betty you had Bad Luck in threes, and Miss' Joe Farrell here, he had Bad Luck in threes, and today he started having good luck, and now he's havin' more good Luck—Miss' Joe meet Miss Betty Finn, she's the most bestest—"

You know the rest. It's sometimes—

Well that was three years ago. And now Miss Farrell—I mean Betty—and I just figured out that three times Bad Luck is all anyone ever gets. We're going back to Churchill for the Derby next month and we sort of figure we'll check that up with "Old Folks."

Little Benny's Note Book

We was starting to eat supper, being hans and without complings, and ma said, O deri, one of my favorite dishes and this just happens to be one of my days for skipping a meel. O well, I'll just try not to notice the delicius aroma like a Spartan of old while I concentrate on my dry toast and olives. If I could only think of some way to take the edge off my appetite without actually eating it, my ordeal would be less of a dilemma, she said. I really mustn't eat any of that stew, she said.

The Frenich are considered the world's foremost culinery artists, and yet some of their favorite articles of diet make a sound curious to our less Latin ear pop said. I allude particularly to their national dish of snails smothered gently but fermly in garlick sauce, he said, and ma said, Snails, how gaudy. Isn't there any more filting subjick you could bring up at a time like this?

Defending supper time, and pop did. What subjeck could be more appropiate to a meel time than food? Certain classes of Chinese, I believe, can think of nothing more delicately delicious than a stew made of white mice, he said, and ma said. Then it would be better if they didn't think at all, and I wish you'd please kindly force yourself to tawk of something more pleasant.

But that's the point, nothing could be more pleasant to certain classes of Chinese, unless perhaps it's a nice soup made of grasshoppers, otherwise known as locusts, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyjam if you've completely killed ahvry appetite of sppetite for me, just as I was on the point of wrestling up the extent of trying a tiny speck of that stew.

That's all rite, dont thank me, pop said, and ma said, I'm going to leave the table, that's what I'm going to do.

Wich she did with her last 2 olives and looking dignefied, and ma and pop each took more stew, still feeling perfect.

TARZAN THE UNTAI...

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Olga awok e from troubled sleep unable for a moment to account for hersurroundings. Then she realized that the fall in the storm-tossed parachute, like the other events of her dream, had really happened years before. Instead of her betrayed lover, the one now bending over her was Tarzan, the ape-man.

Hopelessly, again, she felt the terror of her shrinking predicament. She knew this savage wild man was her enemy, hating her as he did all Reds. Nor could she expect mush mery from him, since she had once tried to kill him . . . Now began busy days as Tarzan built a thatched hut with a small bowna surrounding it.

Olga tried to help. They worked almost in silence. She watched this sun-tanned, handsome giant with puzzled awe. He moved with the graceful ease of a jungle cat, lifting heavy weights with no apparent effort, as if he had the attributes of superman and savage beast.

Both seemed closely intermingled in him. His stern and silent presence produced a feeling of unnamed dread in the girl's heart, as days went by. "So far, he has not attempted to harm me," Olga told herself, "but for what sinister purpose if he protects me from the other savage denizens of his cruel jungle?"

THE LOVE FLIGHT

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Anne sat on the edge of a cot. Dawn was sifting eerily through a window just below the ceiling, a small window, square and grim. She had a feeling that the person sitting on the edge of the cot was set on herself at all. She was no longer weary. Long since she had passed the stage where she could experience anything except weight-weight dragged down—down—down.

Something stirred in the gloom. A light flashed on.

"I thought I heard you moving." A buxom woman with a round kind face materialized out of Anne's inner darkness. "You've not had a wink of sleep, sitting there. Come, now, lay down and get what rest you can and don't be taking things so hard. Would you like me to fetch you a cup of water?"

"No, No, thank you." Anne stared at the speaker. "I'm all right. I hope I haven't disturbed you. Who was this kindly woman? The—the matron, was it? The prison matron? She, Anne, was in prison! Yes. Why was she here? Why—why—why? Questions she had kept her mother's pearls. Suddenly she sprang up on the cot and began to sob.

"There, there," the matron soothed, shaking her head. "Don't you go taking on so, dearie. It's not like you, we got there with the others under lock and key. The captain has thought he'd ought to keep you here till he finds out if what you told him about the pearls is true. If you told him the truth you got nothing to fear. You're in the infirmary-room—just a kind of a waiting room. There's nothing against you and there won't be either, I'm sure. Stop crying now and get some sleep. You'll be leaving us today."

Today must come—today and light. No, no. Today she, Anne Austin would be dead to life again —to live through the past from which she had fled—to live through the present from which there was no fleeing. She raised her head. "The pearls were a gift to mother—father gave them to her when I was born. She treasured them so. I couldn't part with them—even when I was hungry I couldn't—then—Now are they—pearls?" Anne sat up her body taut.

"They're downstairs in the safe and no need to worry about them," the matron said. "Better now? Nothing like a good-old-fashioned cry to set you up. You stretch out on the cot and get dearie. I'll be back in a minute."

The kindly face went out. A door closed. Anne continued to sit on the edge of the cot, staring into the greyness of morning.

* * * *

The matron personified Anne's taste for oatmeal she had brought in a blue china bowl.

"Matron said I was to feed you, dearie. I'll sit here while you could have a bite. Just eat what you can, and you'll see you feel better."

Anne forced herself to swallow a spoonful. She must show appreciation for this woman's kindness.

"That's the way, dearie," asked after a half dozen spoonfuls. She'd have to divert the matron's attention. Another spoonful would choke her.

"Nine o'clock, going on ten. Now it you'd take a drop of tea—"

"Oh, no, please... Only nine o'clock? Only—only—that—he hasn't asked for me?"

"Not yet—you see it's early—he's got to check up. He won't waste time though, you can depend on that. He's sent to Mimico for Mrs. Hoag to come back. He got her on the wire last night. Ought to be hearing from her any time now."

Madame! Madame and Carl! Carl would come for her—send for her in prison! What had she done to be here! What was the scheme of things that placed such ignoring upon her? The man she loved, the one who loved her, could not—dare carry her off to Bimini—coming to take her out of prison!

"I can't——she moaned, sinking to the edge of the couch again and starting into a new darkness. "I can't face him——"

"The captain? Pshaw, dearie, don't you mind the captain, 'Mrs. the woman you work for, they know you're not always been as you've been. What else know about who you might be?

"Why—why yes!" Anne came back from the shadows. "Mrs. Hoag does know." Maida's surprise visit to Bob Jolt!

"Then what's to stop her telling the captain? Of course she'll tell him and it'll all be ironed out as easy as anything. I got to leave you now for a bit, dearie."

Noon.

"A little of this corn beef hash, dearie? I had 'em put an egg on it."

"I can't." Anne paced the room jerkily, like an automaton. "I want so—you're so kind——but it won't go down. Can't there be something? surely they've heard from Madame Duval. Any place but Bob Jolt! Carl had failed her——he had not come for her.

How a car pulled close to the curb, stopped. Its body caught the yellow gleam from the street light, reflected them richly.

Anne shrank farther back into the shadows. Suppose there should be some one she knew in that car and echo one of her past! Supposed that some one should recognize her, alone, walking, rumpled——at this hour? She caught a flash of ermine, a glint of jewels.

The car slid out into the street, a thin trickle of laughter trailing in its wake.

Anne continued her way. A nostalgia for the old life, the ermine and jewel life, the gaiety, the devilmay-care breathless pace possessed her. Why struggle for a peace that did not exist? Why search for an ideal that was not? She had thought to find humanness in lovely places. She had thought that under dogs, being under, would have kindness, sympathies, helpfulness in their hearts for one another.

Rot! The under dog snarled and snapped and bit at the throats of other underlings even more viciously than the high-brog inbred imbeciles. Loyalty? Something for poets and soap box orators to rave about.

And yet—she would have staked her life that Carl Case was different —that he would be loyal. She would have staked her life, and like a silly little idiot, she would have lost it. The prospect of being associated with a woman accused of theft, falsely or otherwise, broke the invisible bond that had drawn her and Carl Case together as easily as though it had been spider-web. So be it. If humanity was entirely inhuman and life completely tasteless, she might as well muddle through in a Rolls Royce as in an autobus.

Maida! She'd go to Maida Slydean—throw herself on the consideration of her friend. Maida would understand. She'd tell Maida everything that had happened and she'd ask forgiveness for being so headstrong. Maida would be so sorry. Maida, all right. But humble pie was better than humble bread.

* * * *

The Surplam house by the sea shore with the sort of electric blaze that presaged some special social event was all within its expansive walls.

Maida and Jon are staging a scene. Anne thought as she hurried along an inconspicuous path toward the terrace where she knew she could enter without being noticed.

Anne increased her pace. In the world she was leaving behind her hour was growing late. Here it was early. Guests were arriving, a motor at the portecochere at the other side of the house. Soon she'd be one of them, pay her respects to Maida. She'd borrow her pescock feathers from Maida.

She found the side terrace unoccupied. She gained Maida's rooms without challenge. Panchon, Maida's maid, was trying to bring order out of the mess of her mistress' disarray.

"Panchon," Anne said, advancing Greeting was like finding an old friend.

"Miss—it can't be——why yes it is

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

Anne walked along the street in the shadows. Whither? She knew not, nor cared.

Any place but Bob Jolt! Carl had failed her——he had not come for her.

She found the side terrace unoccupied. She gained Maida's rooms without challenge.

"Panchon," Anne said, advancing Greeting was like finding an old friend.

"Miss—it can't be——why yes it is—it's Miss Anne!" Panchon's eyes were round and startled. She might have been seeing ghosts.

"It is Miss Anne," Anne said gayly. "Back from the wars. Do you think you could find Mrs. Suydam for me? Ask her if she may have a moment. I must see her."

"I'll see her right away, Miss Anne. You've had a long journey, I know. You look done out. The madame will be glad to see you. You'll be staying a while, now you've come?"

"Indefinitely." Anne tossed her hat onto a chaise longue, seated herself at the dressing table. French powder on her skin, French perfume on her hair, both her own. Back in France!

Expertly, she dealt with the array of cosmetics on the table. This was better. She looked almost human again. She rose, walked about the room, revelling in its luxury, its extravagance. When Maida came in head high, chin tilted upward. The same proud Maida!

"Well!" Maida ejaculated. "What ever brings you here?"

It was not the welcome she could have wished. Anne told herself, but it was the welcome she might expect and which, no doubt, she deserved.

"I was washed up by the tide," she said in the little girl voice with which she had so often mocked Maida's pomposity.

"You look it," Maida sniffed. Her glance travelled the rumpled clothes came to a stop on the worn shoes. "I'll get her that dress," she said, laughed. "Lanvin's latest model."

"If you've come here to irritate me, it seems you might have had the decency to choose some more convenient time——"

"But I haven't come to irritate you, Maida." Anne was serious now. "I've come to tell you I'm sorry—that I've made such a complete mess of things—and to tell you why I'm sorry. It's a very short story. Do you mind listening?"

Maida tossed her head.

"I suppose I'll have to listen," she said, though how might have thought of what a fool you were before you embarrassed your family to tears."

"I might have thought, but I did not. Fools don't. Promise me, Maida, you'll sit there, in that chair, and that you won't scream or faint or do anything except listen until I finish. Is it a bargain?"

Maida sank into the chair. Anne groped in her mind for the shortest cut through her story. She heard Maida's querulous, "Oh, for heaven sake, do get on with it, Anne. You will try to dramatize yourself, I have guests waiting, you know, and it will take Panchon hours to make you look——human?"

"Presentable!"

"Presentable!"

Anne plunged into her story. The night her body, her soul had revealed and she fled from Craig Braden and from Clem Wilson. New York, the broken man outside the door of her hotel room demanding her father. Her emptying purse. Her loss of faith in those she felt she had a right to trust. Her decision to shake off the tinsel, the tarnish the futility—to win her freedom and her independence. Palm Beach. Leon days, pitifully lean. The employment agency. Carl. Carl. Maida. Hoag. Her encounter with Craig Braden.

She wanted to confess her infatuation for Carl Case—it must have been infatuation she assured herself. Confess she was infatuated with Case—Madame's chauffeur. It would be her final gesture of abjection. She could not.

On and on she plunged, to arrive at the point where she had thought the world to which she was born, Maida's world, well lost. And then disillusionment! Sudden terrifying disillusionment. The loss of Madame's pearls. The finger of suspicion pointed at her. Her detention. Vindication. Now she was ready, eager to retrace her steps. Was she forgiven?

Anne had been so absorbed in her rehearsal of unhappiness that she had failed to note its effect on Maida. Something in Maida's silence—an ominous quiet—arrested her. Maida was shaking. She was trying to rise from her chair but she was shaking so that she could not.

"Maida!" Anne rushed forward, her hands outstretched to help.

"Stop!" Maida choked. "Don't come near me! Don't touch me. You dare to come to this house! To my house, straight from a prison! A horrible common jail. If some one sees you—look—the children! You dare!"

Anne stopped, fell back a few paces before Maida's smothered screech. What was Maida saying? What did she mean?

"But. Maida," she'd have to be calm—you don't understand. There's nothing——I've done nothing——some mistake. Work——"

"Nothing!" Maida gasped. "You call being in prison nothing!"

"But I wasn't in prison—really. I was retained, until they found the pearls—it was all a misunderstanding——"

"Get out!" Maida's fingers were in her ears. "Leave my house!"

As a sleep-walker groping, Anne reached for her hat.

"I'm sorry——Maida——sorry if I came." Her lips were stiff.

"Sorry!" Maida's scorn was withering. "You expect me to believe that? You've incapable of sorrow—you're incapable of decency—you're incapable of anything except——you——SCUM."

"Maida!" Anne was frightened by the hysterical tone of the ugly word.
